CLERICAL CARPENTER TO MARRY COL. ASTOR

Rev. Mr. Straight of Providence, R. I., Pauses in Housebuilding to Undertake the Job.

VISITED BY ASTOR LAWYER

All Arrangements Said to Have Been Made for a Ceremony at Newport —Colonel and Fiancee Sail.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 8.—After days of effort, during which most of the clergymen of Rhode Island who still marry divorced persons have been canvassed, Richard B. Comstock, attorney, has succeeded in finding a minister who has expressed willingness to marry Col. John Jacob Astor to Miss Madeleine Force. This minister says that arrangements have been made for him to go to Newport to-morrow and that the marriage will take place there.

Col. Astor and Miss Force left New York to-day on the yacht Noma, supposedly for Robbins Island, but the opinion here is that the yacht is really bound for Newport.

The clergyman who is willing to perform the Astor marriage and who is believed here to have been selected to do this is the Rev. Edwin S. Straight, who at one time was pastor of a Free Baptist church in Warren, but at present works at the carpentering trade, but picks up an odd dollar occasionally by performing ministerial duties. In the course of his search for a clergyman to marry his client Mr. Comstock found Mr. Straight, and last Tuesday evening had a conference with him at his home, 74 Dodge Street. On the following day the Rev. Mr. Straight called upon Mr. Comstock. Evidently, however, there were difficulties, for upon returning home Mr. Straight declared that he was afraid he would not be able to perform the ceremony. Just what the hitch was is not known, but it must have been straightened out, for last evening shortly after 8 o'clock Mr. Comstock again visited the Dodge Street residence in an automobile and everything was arranged.

This morning the carpenter-minister declared that all was in readiness for the ceremony, and that he was to leave Providence at 7:30 to-morrow morning for Newport to officiate at the nuptials.

In the last few days Mr. Comstock has been a frequent visitor at the City Hall, and each time his attention has been centred in the Marriage Bureau. This morning he was seen scurrying about the corridors of the building, and it was learned later that he had spent some time with Dr. Eugene P. King, the Assistant Superintendent of Health, discussing Section 22 of the marriage laws of Rhode Island.

This section is the one which provides that in case of a marriage being performed by a person professing to have a license to join persons in marriage, the said marriage shall not be declared void because of lack of jurisdiction on the part of the person performing the ceremony. It also provides that such a marriage shall be perfectly valid, providing that it is lawful in other respects and has been performed with a full belief on the part of the persons so married, or either of them, that they have been lawfully joined in marriage.

This bears directly upon the conditions under which the Rev. Mr. Straight would have to perform the Astor ceremony. Dr. Straight receives his official authority to perform marriages from a town outside Providence, in which he is registered. He has no registration in this city. Some time ago he came to Providence, and it is asserted that his removal from the town of his registration of itself canceled his authority to marry outside that town. Mr. Straight, however, went to the City Hall this afternoon and registered so that he would be legally qualified to perform the ceremony. Any person who shall solemnise a marriage in this State without being properly qualified is subject to a fine of $500.

Meantime the long-sought clergyman pursues the even tenor of his way, undisturbed by the fact that the eyes of the whole country may be turned upon him within the next twenty-four hours. Early this morning he went to his daily work as usual and spent part of the day sawing boards for a dwelling on which he has been working at Hampden Meadows.

Mr. Straight is 83 years old, and it was for four or five years in the 70's that he occupied a pastorate. He then went into the building business with John Champlin under the firm name of Straight & Champlin in East Providence, where he lived for many years. For the last twenty years he has been strongly interested in spiritualism, and up to two years ago addressed meetings of that sect. The idea of officating at weddings and funerals was suggested to him several years ago, after the death of the Rev. Charles H. Plummer, who was known as the "'marrying parson of Providence."

Mr. Plummer got most of the couples who came from out of town, and married many Chinamen to American girls. Some one suggested to Mr. Straight that it might be a good idea for him to get some of that business. Since that time he has been ready to perform wedding ceremonies. He has no scruples, he says, against marrying Mr. Astor and Miss Force, and believes that it will be rather the best job that he has had. Because of the close attentions of reporters he left his home in Dodge Street to-night and went to spend the night with a relative.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 8.—Newport Summer residents are of the opinion that Col. John Jacob Astor, with his fiancée, Miss Madeleine Force, and her father, who left New York to-day aboard Col. Astor's yacht, Noma, are Newport-bound, with a marriage ceremony in view for this week. Col. Astor and Miss Force have intended all along to have the marriage performed this week, but no license has yet been issued or requested at the Newport City Hall.

Beechwood is ready for the coming of Col. Astor and his party, and Vincent Astor is there. Commodore Lewis Cass Ledyard, who drew up the settlement which Col. Astor made upon Miss Force during their last visit to Newport, is here. This settlement was also signed by Vincent Astor.

There is a belief in Newport to-night that a representative of Col. Astor visited the City Hall when the Noma was last here, and arranged for the filing of a marriage license, but there is no such record on file. City Clerk Frank N. Fullerton stated to-night that until such a license is recorded he certainly would give no information. All Newport believes to-night Col. Astor will be here to-morrow, and that he will be married by the Rev. Mr. Straight, a clergyman from Providence.

When the City Hall was about to close this evening City Clerk Frank N. Fullerton was asked if Miss Force had made application for a license when she was

RADIUM LODE MILES LONG.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—A dispatch to The London Daily Mail from Sydney, New South Wales, says that some months ago the antarctic explorer, Dr. Douglas Mawson, who is an eminent geologist, aroused excitement in local mining circles by the announcement that he had discovered a valuable deposit of radium ore at Mount Painter, in the Far Northern district of the State of South Australia.

Dr. Mawson since his return from England has again visited the spot and issues a long report to-day, in which he declares that there is a vast lode of radium ore, at least three miles long and from a few feet to several hundred yards wide. The deposit is of high grade, the report says, and a quarter of a ton is ready for shipment. Dr. Mawson calculates the net profit per ton of crude ore at £227, or some $1,100.

He adds that huge deposits of corundum and aluminium bearing ore exist in the vicinity.

DOCTOR'S BLOOD SAVES BABY

Dr. McDuffie Bares His Forearm and Has Transfusion Made to Infant.

By baring his forearm and transfusing from it four ounces of his blood, Dr. Marshall W. McDuffie of 571 Park Avenue possibly saved the life of a twenty-hour-old infant, Edward Gifford, who was suffering from hemophilia, a rare disease, that sometimes besets babies at birth, causing hemorrhages from mouth, nose, and ears. The hemorrhages are to be stopped only by an infusion of the serum of blood, which acts as a clog in damming up the flow in the child's veins and capillaries.

The Gifford baby, whose mother was a private patient in the Hahneman Hospital, was seized with the odd malady on Monday night, and Dr. McDuffie was called after the resident physicians had done all in their power to stop the flow of blood from the child's veins. It is customary to make transfusion of blood from the veins of a rabbit, but no rabbit was at hand, and Dr. McDuffie, stripping up the sleeve of one arm, ordered one of the other physicians to make an incision and catch up the blood. This was transfused into the tiny veins of the baby, and almost at once a rising pink tinge could be seen creeping over the baby's skin.

Dr. McDuffie himself said later that he felt but slight effects, a little weariness, as a result of his experience. He is said to have done the same thing once before.

ROBBED OF GEMS ON TRAIN.

Mrs. A. A. McCormick Left $2,000 Worth in Lake Shore Dining Car.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 8.—A daring thief on board a Lake Shore train between this city and Toledo robbed Mrs. A. A. McCormick of Chicago of $2,000 in jewelry last Tuesday. The robbery was reported to the city detectives here to-day after the railroad police had failed to find a clue.

Mrs. McCormick, who is the wife of a former newspaper editor of Chicago and the daughter of Mr. Warner of Sprague, Warner & Co., one of the big mail order concerns of that city, was on her way to New York. She was in the dining car, facing a smooth-shaven young man, who engaged her in conversation. On leaving the table she forgot to take her handbag, containing the jewelry and two railroad tickets. Discovering her loss, she returned to the dining car for it, but it had disappeared and also the young man.

Stations along the way were notified, and when the train pulled into Cleveland steps were taken to maintain a close watch for the young man, who was described as having dark hair and eyes, about 5 feet 4 inches in height, weighing about 125 pounds, and wearing a brown suit.

Owing to the fact that one of the railroad tickets was to Lake Forest, Ill., the home of Harold McCormick, it was at first supposed that the Mrs. McCormick robbed was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller. This proved to be erroneous, however, for it was said in Chicago that Mrs. Harold McCormick had not been in Cleveland recently.

CAPITALISTS IN TRAIN WRECK

But Only Shaken Up as Southern Express Jumps the Rails.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNISTON, Ala., Sept. 8.—A Southern Railway special passenger train going at a rate of about forty miles an hour, en route from New York to Birmingham, was wrecked about four miles south of this city at 1:45 this afternoon. Three cars were almost completely overturned against a small embankment, and three others left the track, which was ploughed up for 300 yards. About 100 passengers were aboard at the time, but excepting a severe shake-up no one was seriously injured. The wreck was caused by the tender leaving the track, due, it is believed, to defective rails.

Among the passengers were a party of Eastern capitalists in the special car Andalusia. This party represents Morris Brothers, bankers of New York and Philadelphia. They were en route to Birmingham to inspect the Birmingham, Ensley & Bessemer Steam & Electric Railway, which is being constructed by Morris Brothers & Co.

The party was in charge of P. S. Briggs of Philadelphia, and included G. H. Wilson and W. V. Lester, New York; Henry Allen, I. W. Sherrill, C. H. W. Arnold, W. H. Rust, D. A. Wilklow, George Platt, S. G. Moore, and Gilford Dudley, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; W. G. Pratt, Highland; Henry Merriam, New York; H. J. Pratt, Highland; L. H. Gorman, William Etzweiler, and G. A. Padgett, Philadelphia; A. Yackell, Norristown, Penn.; Phillip Schantz, Highland; P. A. Sawin, New York; Arthur Tracy, Norristown, and C. H. Slon, New York.

Messrs. Briggs and Lester said that they were begged by their wives not to come on the trip as there would be a wreck. Acting on this premonition, they purchased accident insurance before starting.

SCHOLARSHIP GOING BEGGING

One at Columbia Is Renounced by Holder for Commercial Career.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—For the first time in twenty years a Columbia University scholarship is going a-begging. It is offered by the Chicago "old grads," and unless some one claims it by Sept. 15 it will cease to exist, according to word received to-day.

Unexpectedly the recent holder of this scholarship reported to Secretary Emory Hill of the Illinois Alumni Association that he would abandon the idea of a college career and take a commercial position instead. This left the scholarship vacant, with the date of the opening of the entrance examinations only one week away.

SHOPMEN WAITING FOR STRIKE ORDER

MAY COME NEXT MONDAY

W. F. Kramer Denies That Strike Has Been Called—President Markham Surprised at Turn of Affairs.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 8.—Prospects of a strike involving 12,000 shopmen on the Illinois Central and allied lines became more serious late to-day than at any time since demands were made on the road by the Federation of Shop Employes. Monday morning may see the calling of the strike, and officials of the railroad and the union men are making hurried preparations to meet the situation. A statement given out to-day, and credited to J. F. McCreery, President of the Joint Committee of Illinois Central shop workers, in which it was stated that a strike was ordered last Wednesday by the grand lodge officers of various mechanical trades in the federation, made greater the probability of a walk-out.

The unions were instructed to hold themselves in readiness to go out on a few hours' notice.

A "flash" will be sent out by the leaders if a strike is decided upon. The only thing which will stop it altogether, however, it was explained, would be a resumption of negotiations looking toward an amicable settlement of the controversy in favor of system federation. The news that the strike had been ordered came as a shock, apparently, to two men, W. F. Kramer, Secretary of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers, and C. H. Markham, President of the Illinois Central road. Kramer, despite the fact that he is head of the committee which, according to Mr. McCreery, ordered the strike, denied the fact of its having been called.

"The international body emphatically denies the whole thing," he said. "If McCreery says a strike has been ordered, then it is on his own responsibility."

"All I can say is that I don't believe it," was his comment at noon. "Things have been running along so smoothly of late that I cannot believe this news is true. I am still firm in my belief that there will be no strike."

Mr. McCreery, however, was positive in his statement, and he was corroborated at every point by W. E. Bowen, Secretary of the Joint Committee; J. J. Carrigan, Secretary of the body of which Mr. Kramer is Chairman, and H. S. Kieley, Business Manager of the Machinists of the Illinois Central Federation and a member of the Executive Board of the Federation.

At Burnside and all the other principal shop towns of the Illinois Central Railroad, the shop system Federation men to-night held mass meetings of all the nine crafts involved. The meetings in every case were behind closed doors, and none of the union men would talk about what went on inside. One of the principal subjects for discussion was a report that the guards behind the barricades had been supplied with ammunition.

When the employes leave the shops to-morrow at noon, they will carry home with them their tools and personal belongings, so as to make a trip to the shops unnecessary Monday morning if a strike call is sent by wire from Chicago.

As far as the men in the shops are concerned, the situation hinges wholly on what the Advisory Council of the machinists' organization decides to do when it meets in Chicago to-morrow night.

P. J. Conlon, the Vice President and an experienced man in handling strike situations, has declined to give his sanction to a strike call until he has thrashed the matter out with the other officers.

Conlon was in conference all the past week with the International officers of the other crafts involved and they are waiting his decision. One of the chief points to be decided by the machinists' executive officers is whether the organization is in a position to pay strike benefits for a protracted period. The officers are on their way to Omaha to attend their annual convention and will spend but a few hours in Chicago.

While the labor leaders are awaiting the result of Sunday's conference they are gathering information as to the strength of the unions involved and the methods the road is using to meet the impending situation.

According to President McCreery of the Shop System Federation, telegrams are pouring in on him from the locals in all the thirty-eight shops of the Illinois Central, saying that the men are ready to walk out on the flashing of the word from Chicago. He and Secretary Bowen were kept busy to-day answering the inquiries of the men in other cities, who have been kept in the dark as to the negotiations of the past week. President McCreery asserts that without exception the men are prepared to stand by their strike vote, taken early in the Summer. He denies that there is any difference of opinion among the men in the shops on this point.

In each of the shop towns the union men have arranged during the lull of the last week to open strike headquarters near the shops in order that benefits may be handled and other aid given strikers in the event that the call is issued.

The employes have inaugurated a detective force which makes daily reports to President McCreery and the international officers on the preparations made for a strike by the railroad.

Reports from other shop towns along the Illinois Central to the labor leaders were that most of the non-union men were being laid off by the road officials and that they would undoubtedly be called in again as strikebreakers, should the strike call go out.

The statement by President McCreery is as follows:

"The strike was ordered some days ago, but no date was set for calling the men out. Every opportunity had been given the railroad people to settle things amicably, and they refused. There was nothing further to do. Following out the desires of the shopworkers themselves, as expressed by their strike vote, the Grand Lodge officers ordered the strike.

"I wish to say, too, now that I have an opportunity, that reports of friction between Mr. Kramer and myself and between the joint committee and the international body are incorrect. There has been no friction, no misunderstandings of any kind. There has been delay from time to time, but that has only been to comply with certain laws.

"At the various conferences that have been held since the strike was ordered we have taken up different matters. There have been all sorts of things coming up which demanded attention—all looking toward the strike, however. Also part of our time has been consumed in notifying the various locals along the line of our decision. When we actually walk out there must be concerted action. The men must go out simultaneously. When the 'flash' is received there will be a general movement."

LONDON OPTIMISTIC ON MOROCCO CRISIS

WAR INSURANCE DROPS

French Paper Reports Kaiser's Troops Massed Along Frontier, but Official Paris Is Calm.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—While the Berlin Boerse had a fresh attack of nerves to-day, the prospect of another period of protracted haggling over Morocco causing general depression, and even Deutsche Bank shares dropping 2 points, there was no tendency in London to doubt that negotiations were proceeding along favorable lines.

In fact, there was a remarkable softening in the war insurance rates demanded at Lloyd's. During Wednesday and Thursday as much as 12 per cent. was obtained by underwriters on war risks extending to the close of the year, but to-day insurances covering the same period were effected at 6 per cent.

The results of the Agadir coup are coming home to roost in a manner not calculated to make it popular in Germany, especially in financial circles, where serious trouble has been caused by the withdrawal of French loans. The popular uneasiness has resulted in runs on German provincial banks, and finally the disclosure of the existence on the Berlin Boerse of a very heavy speculative account in Americans and Canadian Pacifics, with enforced liquidation following.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—La Liberté this afternoon affirms that notwithstanding all denials and explanations, Germany is gradually concentrating her troops close to the French frontier.

Careful inquiries, the paper says, show that 30,000 infantry, 10,000 cavalry, and 150 guns have been gathered in a triangle which has for its points Moncels, Vio, and Dieuze, and in echelon, to the southeast; that numerous forces have been drawn up opposite to Nancy, and that immense accumulations of material have been disposed of along the German boundary.

The French Foreign Minister, M. de Selves, declines to give the slightest indication as to the nature of Germany's counter proposals relative to the Moroccan dispute, which were handed by the German Foreign Minister, Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, to the French Ambassador, M. Cambon, in Berlin yesterday, for transmission to the French Government.

A short summary of the German proposals was received by telegraph at the French Foreign Office to-day, but the Ministry is awaiting the full text, which is coming by messenger.

From the careful and authoritative Havas Agency issued the "impression" that the differences between the French and German points of view still are considerable.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—Developments in the Moroccan negotiations are not expected while the French Cabinet is digesting Germany's counter proposals relative to the question and while France's answer thereto is in the course of preparation.

The situation is quiet enough to justify the French Ambassador, M. Cambon, in leaving Berlin to-morrow to spend several days with Mme. Cambon at Dresden. The German Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, has returned to his country place at Hohenfinow, Prussia.

Uneasiness persists, however, among the uninformed public. The run on the savings banks at Stettin, Province of Pomerania, has ceased, but a similar run has been started by depositors on the banks at Königsberg, the capital of the Province of East Prussia.

A meeting of commercial firms interested in Morocco, held to-day at Hamburg, passed resolutions urging the German Foreign Office to insist on adequate economic guarantees from France, as experience has shown that the formal assurances of that country were worthless.

INVENTS A NEW EXPLOSIVE.

The Safest, Yet More Powerful Than Dynamite, Says Prof. Wright.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 8.—B. F. B. Wright, formerly a Professor in Chemistry at Harvard, has perfected a new explosive, so he says, that possesses three times the power of dynamite and is harmless from concussion. Prof. Wright's experiments made to-day by dropping a lighted match on two ounces of the powder gave forth a quick flame but no explosion. The blasting propensities of the powder were also demonstrated.

"The powder cannot be exploded except by fire or extreme heat unless it is packed in an air-tight inclosure, so that the gases cannot escape," said Prof. Wright. "It will stand 275 degrees of heat without igniting. This eliminates the possibility of spontaneous combustion. It has been hammered on an anvil and packages of it have been shot at with a rapid-fire revolver without explosion. It is the safest explosive to store or handle that has ever been invented.

"One-third of the quantity used for blasting is equal to any other powder, including dynamite. A great advantage the new explosive has over dynamite is that it can be made by any one who has the formula and used fifteen minutes later, while dynamite has to be kept at least ninety days. It doesn't freeze like dynamite.

"A peculiar thing about its use in firearms is that while it does greater execution there is scarcely any recoil. For use on warships the saving would be enormous, not only on the cost of the powder, but it would also prevent the damage done to the ships by the recoil of the large guns and would prolong the life of the weapons."

DARES DEATH BY HEAT ON CUNARD LINER

Third Engineer Enters Drum of Turbine in a Temperature of 178 and Closes Valves.

THRICE OVERCOME, RETURNS

Saves Valuable Time for the Carmania, Already Delayed by Poor Coal and Enforced Stop at Halifax.

The story of the heroism of a steamship officer who risked his life in order that his vessel should not be delayed was told yesterday upon the arrival from Liverpool of the belated Cunard liner Carmania. The vessel left England when the labor troubles were at their height, and the coal which filled her bunkers was of such poor quality that Capt. Low put into Halifax, as the supply was running short and his engines were not working well.

The Carmania left Liverpool on Aug. 29, and she had not put Daunt's Rock many miles astern when the engine force found that something was wrong with the central of the three turbine engines. It was not necessary to stop the engines, and the liner kept on, though the Chief Engineer saw that the turbine was not doing its work. The vessel had 700 more tons of coal than she generally carried, but she ate up large quantities, for it was poor in quality. The real trouble came when the Carmania was entering Halifax. A steam pipe in the central turbine burst.

The vessel got into that port all right, but to cut out the turbine it was necessary for some one to go into the drum, or jacket, and close two small iron doors, or valves, admitting the steam to the turbine. In the ordinary course of procedure that would have been done after allowing the engines to cool. This would have necessitated a delay of hours. The vessel had already been delayed by poor coal and her enforced visit to Halifax, so Capt. Low called Chief Engineer James Caruthers and told him he wanted the turbine cut out without loss of time if possible.

The Chief Engineer decided upon heroic measures to comply with the request of the skipper. In the steel-lined drum about the turbine the temperature was then about 178 degrees. Mr. Caruthers is stout of build and tried to get through the manhole to the steam pipes, but found he could not squeeze through. The story of what happened in the engine room was told upon the arrival of the Carmania by the engineer.

"I am not going into the technical details," said Mr. Caruthers. "It was imperative to shut the doors before the steam was turned into the engines again, and to do so one had to descend into a temperature of 178 degrees. I saw that the work was dangerous, for if it was 178 degrees at the manhole it was hotter inside."

Here Charles P. Sumner, General Manager of the line, broke in to say that the Chief Engineer would have done the task himself except that he was too fat. Mr. Caruthers blushed, but said nothing in reply.

"I did not feel like commanding another to risk his life when I took no share in the risk, and so I called for volunteers. I called together my force, both watches, and explained the situation to them. There was going to be a delay unless the disabled turbine was shut off without waiting for the steam to be exhausted and the engine cooled.

"The response was prompt. The first man who volunteered, and he had to speak quick to be the first, was A. C. McCutcheon, third engineer. Mr. McCutcheon is a young Scotchman. He was physically fitted for the task. He went in and carried out the order successfully.

"I am proud to have such a man on the ship and under me. He is a credit to the service. He took a terrible risk, not to save life, but simply for the company, an act performed in the course of his work."

It was while a 'longshore force was putting 476 tons of coal into the Carmania and the passengers were unaware of what was being done in the gloom of the engine room that McCutcheon went to work. A relief force was formed and the ship's surgeon stood by in case of need. McCutcheon stripped for his task and entered the manhole. It was a distance of about twenty-five feet from the manhole to the first of the doors or valves to be closed. Slowly the third engineer worked his way along in the stifling air. He was in about five minutes, and then he was dragged out exhausted. The doctor worked over him for some time, paying careful attention to his heart action. It was over a quarter of an hour before the engineer made his second attempt. At the end of five minutes he was hauled out again, and again the doctor went to work over him. Four times he descended into the hot hole about the turbine, and when he was revived after his fourth exit he reported to the Chief Engineer that the valves were closed.

The successful carrying out of the order was reported to Capt. Low, and so the Carmania was able to sail away from Halifax early Thursday morning, instead of having to lay up at that port until the engines cooled.

An attempt was made to see Mr. McCutcheon. He sent word that he was working.

The passengers of the Carmania were glad to reach New York, for the voyage had not only been a long one but a stormy one, too. On her last trip from this port the Carmania, after landing her Queenstown passengers, went on to Plymouth instead of Liverpool. She had considerable coal left in her bunkers, and took on more at Plymouth. From there she went to Brixton. It was found that the coal lighters there were too high to work her coal ports, and she steamed away to Portland, where she finished coaling. Then she went to Liverpool and took on her passengers.

Eighteen saloon and seven second-class passengers left the vessel at Halifax. The Carmania made only a trifle more than twelve knots an hour from Halifax to New York. She brought 286 first, 464 second, and 650 steerage passengers. She will sail again on Sunday, at 6 P. M.

LUSITANIA PAST FASTNET.

Due at Liverpool To-day, to be Hurried Back to New York.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The Cunard steamship Lusitania, which arrived in New York last Saturday and sailed the following day for Liverpool and which on arriving at Liverpool will return forthwith to New York in order to make up a loss of eight days incurred by the recent shipping strike in England, passed Fastnet at 6:45 this evening. In order to expedite the voyage the Cunard Line canceled the steamer's call at Fishguard.

Elaborate preparations are being made at Liverpool for a speedy coaling and loading of the Lusitania on her arrival there to-morrow.

SHERMAN VISITS ARCHBOLD.

Standard Oil Man Meets Vice President at the Tarrytown Station.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Vice President James S. Sherman arrived in Tarrytown at 8 o'clock to-night, an express train stopping to let him off. He was asked what brought him to Tarrytown and said he was to meet a friend and go to White Plains and from there to New York.

The Vice President, apparently, was ahead of his schedule and waited on the station platform until an automobile came in sight.

"I don't know but I'll walk out in the lamp light and show myself," laughed the Vice President. The car came up with John D. Archbold, Vice President of the Standard Oil.

Mr. Sherman got in and the car whizzed away. Its destination was the Knollwood Country Club. Mr. Sherman said his business was of a private nature.

FISH STORY, BUT NO FISH.

Shark Captured, Wild West Style, but Don't Ask to See the Shark.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Fishermen are telling a story of how Charles Webber and a friend caught a seven-foot shark in Neptune Harbor, off Fort Slocum, in real Wild West fashion this afternoon, but they can't show the shark.

It is related that the two men, who were fishing near the fort, got the shark on their line, which was not strong enough to bring him in. Webber bent a spare anchor rope into a noose, slipped it over the end of his line and slid it along the line and over the shark's head. Then the two pulled. The shark dragged the boat, as they pulled on the rope, and when they succeeded in pushing the stern under the shark's tail and dropping him aboard they were near Stepping Stone Lighthouse, several miles away.

When they started to row home with their prize, the sad story goes, the shark dived out of the boat and escaped with the rope, which they had forgotten to tie.

SHE HUGGED THE POOR MAN.

Couldn't Help Affectionate Teacher's Embrace, Pleads School Principal.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Principal Arthur E. Barnes of the local public schools says that when one of his school teachers sat in his lap, clasped her arms about his neck and kissed him, he couldn't help himself. The incident is said to have occurred during the last school term, and the young woman who took part in it is now married.

Freeport residents are not altogether satisfied with the investigation made by the Board of Education, which resulted in sustaining the Superintendent, and may take the case to the State Commissioner.

Supt. Barnes has declared his innocence and his intention of fighting for his reputation and his good name. It is understood that he explained the circumstances of the school teacher's affectionate enthusiasm by stating that he had gone into her room after school hours to help her fix up her register record. He said she was of a hysterical type, and in a fit of gratitude embraced him.

WIFE SUES EDITOR WHYTOCK.

Names the Woman Whose Husband Had Accused Him.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 8.—Mrs. Emma A. Whytock filed a suit to-day for a divorce from Capt. Roslyn D. Whytock, a newspaper editor, naming Mrs. Irma Jones, a department store model, as co-respondent. Capt. Whytock at the same time submitted his resignation as Captain Adjutant of the First Regiment, N. G. M.

The filing of Mrs. Whytock's petition further involves the domestic tangle growing out of the successful divorce suit of Samuel H. Jones of Bellbuckle, Tenn., in which Whytock was named as co-respondent, and Mrs. Irma Jones as defendant. Jones arrived in St. Louis on Monday to obtain possession of his 5-year-old son, Paul.

Jones to-day gave out this typewritten statement:

"The differences between myself and Mrs. Jones with reference to the custody of the child have been adjusted. I am satisfied now that she has not been guilty of any improper act."

Jones enlisted Whytock's aid to regain custody of his boy.

Mrs. Whytock, who is an heiress, says that she had been told that Jones came here for the purpose of killing Whytock, but the Captain talked him out of it, and they became chums in a few days.

OELRICHS STOPS A RUNAWAY.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 8.—Hermann Oelrichs, accompanied by Miss Sadie Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, was passing through Portsmouth in his automobile to-day when, in the road in front of them, there appeared a horse, running rapidly, and without a driver. Mr. Oelrichs immediately slackened speed and turned the wheel over to Miss Jones.

He jumped from the machine and grasped the animal by the bridle, and, although he was dragged a few feet, brought the horse to a stop. Mr. Oelrichs was not injured.

The horse proved to belong to Reginald C. Vanderbilt. A groom had been exercising the animal, which had taken fright at an automobile.

FERRYBOAT HITS LAUNCH.

Two Men Were Picked Out of the Water by the Colliding Craft's Lifeboat.

The ferryboat Bay Ridge, plying between the Battery and Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, collided with a naphtha launch last night in Buttermilk Channel, off Governors Island. Two men aboard the launch were thrown into the water and the little craft was capsized. Capt. Ripley lowered a lifeboat and the men climbed in and were taken aboard the ferryboat.

A hawser was attached to the launch and it was towed to the foot of Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn. It was slightly damaged. Capt. Ripley could not explain the cause of the collision. He suggested to the police that the lights carried by the launch were dim or obscured in some manner.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 8.—Because his name is Biddle, his home town Philadelphia, and his cousin, Jack Biddle, who boxed with a relative of Lord Decies, Tony Biddle, general agent for a Connecticut bicycle firm, is thinking of changing his name.

"Ever since my cousin Jack climbed into a ring before society to box with a relative of an English nobleman I have been pestered to death by being mistaken for him."

BEATTIE GUILTY OF KILLING WIFE

TO DIE ON NOVEMBER 24

PRISONER KEEPS HIS NERVE

Special to The New York Times.

CHESTERFIELD COURT HOUSE, Va., Sept. 8.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., was found guilty this evening of murdering his wife, Louise Wellford Owen Beattie, while on an automobile ride with her on the Midlothian Turnpike, on the night of April 18. The jury retired to consider its verdict at 5:06 o'clock in the afternoon and returned in fifty-eight minutes. In their first verdict the jurors failed to specify the degree of murder of which they found the defendant guilty, and Judge Watson ordered them back to their room to revise their findings. In a few minutes the jurors returned and announced that they found the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree.

Beattie stood rigidly before the bar as the verdict was read, his face flushed, and his cheeks twitching nervously. When he heard that he had been found guilty he sank into his chair and buried his head in his hands. For several minutes he did not speak, and his father beside him also covered his face with his hands. The foreman's announcement rang out in the quiet courtroom, the other eleven jurymen calling out with him "guilty" when that part of the verdict was reached.

After the customary motions on the part of counsel for the defense looking to an appeal the court sentenced Beattie to be put to death by electricity on Nov. 24.

After the trial was over it was learned that the jurors, on retiring to their room to consider the verdict, had knelt in prayer to ask guidance in their deliberations. Young Beattie, after the first shock of the verdict, regained his nerve and attempted to console his father. "I haven't lost yet," he told friends as he was led out of the courtroom.

Immediately upon the announcement of the verdict counsel for the defense moved to set it aside, on the ground that it was contrary to law and the evidence. The defense also objected to the directions by the court to the jury. The court overruled the motion for a new trial. Judge Watson stated that the trial consisted almost entirely of questions of fact and that no questions of law entered materially into the decision of the jury.

The defense asked for ninety days to file a petition for a writ of error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Attorney Wendenburg for the State asked that the defense be restricted to within a few days of the meeting of the Supreme Court in November. Judge Watson decided that in view of the fact that there had been little delay in the actual trial of the case the request of counsel for the accused man was reasonable, and granted a stay of execution for ninety days.

Beattie was then brought before the bar of the court for sentence. Asked if he had anything to say why he should not be sentenced the prisoner replied:

"I have nothing to say."

The Judge stated as a preliminary to passing sentence that he desired to add nothing to the anxiety of the convicted man.

"The jury has found you guilty of murder in the first degree," he said, "and, therefore, your life is forfeited and the judgment of this court is that on Nov. 24 you be delivered into the custody of the Superintendent of the penitentiary and that between the hours of sunrise and sunset your life shall be extinguished and may God have mercy on your soul."

Beattie's father buried his face in his hands and appeared overcome, but the prisoner smilingly shook hands with several acquaintances. Court adjourned at 7:22 P. M.

Court convened for the last day of the trial at a few minutes after 9 o'clock this morning. Continuing the line of attack begun by his associate, Hill Carter, yesterday, against the veracity of Paul Beattie, cousin of the defendant, Mr. Smith, Sr., counsel for the defense, ridiculed the story of the purchase of the gun with which the murder was committed, the alleged confession of Beattie to his cousin, and the chain of circumstantial evidence forged by the prosecution.

"The masterful argument of Mr. Carter yesterday," he said, "has made it unnecessary for me to detain you with a protracted address. We do not anticipate and do not fear at your hands a conviction. What we are troubled about is those of you who are satisfied that you cannot bring in a verdict of guilty, and yet cannot assent to a verdict of not guilty.

"We will endeavor to show you that if that is your frame of mind we are entitled to an acquittal. That proposition is made plain to you by the instructions."

Mr. Smith cited the Kestleberg incident as an instance of the danger of circumstantial evidence.

"You heard the boys testify," he continued, "of their trip from Bon Air, how they saw a man in front of an automobile and a woman on the running board. How must you have felt when Mr. Kestleberg himself came forward and thrust aside all suspicion that Henry Beattie or his wife were in that machine. This, gentlemen, illustrates the danger of making up your minds until a case is closed, a pit into which many jurymen and even Judges often have fallen.

"With all due respect to the gentleman who opened the case for the Commonwealth, we do not yet know the theory of the prosecution. He who closes for the Commonwealth, therefore, has a distinct advantage in weaving together theories from facts we have not known.

What can have been the purpose of Mr. Sydnor's testimony that he saw a man alone on the Midlothian Turnpike early on the evening of the tragedy? It must be that they think the accused went to the stump they have talked about and placed the gun there a few hours before the crime. But here is a man of intelligence, who on the witness stand must have impressed you, a man of kind disposition, and yet they want you to believe that he prepared in this blundering fashion for the crime—a more hellish and brutish has seldom been heard of."

Mr. Smith dwelt at length on the question of reasonable doubt, rereading the instructions to the jury on this point.

"I is inconceivable," he added, "that this young man could for three days live in the same house with his dear father and loving family, could kiss them each night with this terrible crime on his mind. It is inconceivable, gentlemen.

"In taking away a human life you are face to face with God Almighty, and unless you are convinced to a moral certainty that this young man committed this dastardly crime you must of necessity bring in a verdict of not guilty.

"You have been shown the dangers of circumstantial evidence, but I will show you that the accused must have been a blundering idiot to have committed the murder. For he picked out a muck traveled road, where everybody could see him. In full view he hides a gun. I may well say that if he thought out or planned this crime, why, can you tell me, should he have used a shotgun when a pistol, easily procured and easily concealed without taking anybody into his confidence, could have been used."

"Gentlemen, there is more than one human life at stake—not only the life of this young man, but that gray-haired father, the future of the brother, and the good name of a sister. They all appeal to you, clarion-tongued, to give them the benefit of the doubt. And I want to say here what I am glad to say of an old friend, that I would be glad to rest this case on the testimony of Tom Owen, uncle of the dead woman, who was the fairest man I ever saw on the witness stand. And Tom Owen was the first person to whom this boy opened his lips when he brought in his dead wife. Gentlemen, if there were any discrepancies in his story, they would have appeared then, and I offer to rest your judgment with that testimony alone.

"Our mail has been flooded with newspaper clippings and letters of people from all over the United States, telling of the dangers of circumstantial evidence."

"I don't think you should have mentioned that," interjected Prosecutor Wendenburg.

"Well, if it was wrong, I hope his Honor will rule it out, for I want to secure your verdict only by fair and rightful means," counsel for the defense rejoined.

Mr. Smith then reviewed the evidence, with particular stress on the reluctantly given testimony of Kestleberg, as indicating the danger of circumstantial evidence.

"I don't ask you," said Mr. Smith, "to believe all the testimony of Kestleberg. I don't ask you to believe that he didn't know the woman he was out with that night. He said that to save trouble in two homes, but what you must believe is that it was his car and not Henry Beattie's, which the boys saw."

Characterizing Paul Beattie as a "moral wreck," the lawyer said the testimony of the cousin was influenced by stronger-minded detectives.

"We do not believe that Paul Beattie was guilty of this crime," he said. "The question has probably occurred to you as to what our theory is. But the instructions distinctly point out that it is not necessary for us to locate the criminal agent. It isn't our duty to do it. Suppose Paul Beattie did buy that gun to use on Mayo's bridge. Suppose Neblitt is telling the truth and Paul Beattie did have a gun in the cement house on Sunday morning. Suppose that gun was stolen by some tramp and the tramp killed Mrs. Beattie, and suppose that Paul Beattie was afraid to tell that story for fear that the crime would be fastened on him—I ask you does that not seem a good reason for the shifting of the burden by this weakling, Paul Beattie?"

Mr. Smith's review of the evidence consumed four hours, concluding just before the luncheon recess.

The reconvening of court after the luncheon recess was delayed until 2:45 o'clock because of difficulty in obtaining order in the crowd that filled the room to its capacity to hear Mr. Wendenburg's address for the prosecution.

"I wish to congratulate you," the prosecutor said to the jurymen, "that the trial of this crime, born in iniquity, is about to end, and I hope that when your verdict is given it shall be with the amen of the women of this Commonwealth—not the women, however, of the kind among whom this accused has mingled—but the good women of all Virginia."

The prosecutor, his voice trembling with emotion, turned at once to the scene on the Midlothian Turnpike at the time of the death of the young wife on the night of July 18.

"There are two theories," he said, "in this case—the one of the defense, of the man whose beard has changed so often in the testimony during this trial, and the other that of the prosecution, that none other than the husband committed this brutish crime.

"By the story of the accused man you can convict him. He tells us first the strange man stopped in front of the machine—and that's where the fool in him began, for he forgot in the fabrication of his story that the man, to shoot his wife, would have to shoot through the glass in front of the machine in order to kill, and that glass is untouched.

"And later this prisoner tells us the man was to the right side and fired over his shoulder when he leaned forward to change gears. And yet he tells us he stopped in front of the man to prevent running over him.

"And don't you see, gentlemen, that if the gun of the alleged highwayman went off accidentally, as the accused described," thundered Mr. Wendenburg, "it would have gone into the body, not the face of the woman?"

"Bring me those bloody clothes," said Mr. Wendenburg to Sheriff Gill, "and the gun, those mute evidences of this dastardly deed."

Holding up the shirt that the prisoner wore, and pointing to the large spot of blood on the lower part, and the absence of stains on the upper parts or sleeves, the prosecutor charged that Beattie sat against the lifeless body of his wife on his ride to the Owen home, and did not, as Beattie asserted on the witness stand, hold her with one hand while he drove the car at fifty-five miles an hour.

"There is a witness stronger than a human lip, that cannot commit perjury," said the speaker, pointing to the clothes. "The body never laid up against that arm. And the coat also speaks—no bleeding form ever laid up against that spotless garment. Mute testimony it is, and you can't come to any other conclusion than that guilt gave birth to the lie of the accused.

"And then there is another most remarkable thing," the Prosecutor continued. "This giant of 200 pounds allowed this little stripling of 135 to take away the gun, and when in the grapple the accused fell to the ground with the gun this giant of six feet walked away. Is that probable, gentlemen?

"And it is suggested by counsel for the defense that he could more easily have used a pistol. Don't you know the first question he would have been asked when he returned home was why the other cartridges in the pistol did not either kill him or the highwayman if he had wrested the pistol from him?

"In many respects this is the cheapest crime I have ever heard of. On the night of the murder this man put on the oldest suit he had—bought March 3, 1908—and a suit which Mrs. Owen, mother of the dead woman, said she never before saw on the accused. He was too cheap to spoil any but the oldest suit he had with the blood of his wife."

"Was that in the testimony?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Yes," replied Mr. Wendenberg, "Mrs. Owen testified to it."

"Counsel for the defense objected to the language of Prosecutor Wendenburg, as he warned the jury that if they let Beattie go free "they would deprive womanhood in Virginia of its security." Judge Watson overruled a motion to have the jury disregard what Mr. Wendenburg had said and the defense noted an exception.

Mr. Wendenburg concluded his arraignment at 5:08 P. M., and the case was then ready for the jury.

Judge Watson thought it best to have the jury exercise in the open air before beginning consideration of the case. He asked Sheriff McGill to take the jury outside and bring them back in fifteen minutes. The prisoner was permitted a brief airing, but when he went on the lawn a big crowd surged around him and he asked to be taken to his cell. The jurors returned to the Court House after their respite, and Judge Watson briefly delivered the case into their hands.

After the jury retired the defendant sat in the bar reading a newspaper. After a few minutes, however, Beattie's fortitude broke and he put his newspaper over his eyes, and those standing close to him could observe his lips twitching, as if he was uttering a prayer. His aged father beside him likewise bent forward reverently and besought Divine aid.

When the jury returned the court told the prisoner to rise. He drew himself up calmly anad waited.

"Have you gentlemen agreed on a verdict?" asked Judge Watson.

"We have," said Foreman Burgess.

The prisoner had confidently expected a 'hung jury,' neither acquittal nor conviction. The court requested the audience not to manifest its approval or disapproval, whatever the verdict.

"And what is your verdict?" asked Judge Watson, turning again to Foreman Burgess.

Unversed in law and the forms of a murder trial, the jurymen had not specified what degree of murder. Asked what degree, Mr. Burgess answered simply "guilty as indicted." Under Virginia practice murder is presumed to be second degree unless otherwise specified. It was incumbent upon the jury to fix the degree, so Judge Watson advised the jurymen to confer again on the point, and seven minutes later they returned, this time with the verdict of "murder in the first degree."

The prisoner stood erect and motionless. His face, in color a yellowish green throughout the day, was immobile. The light of a lamp cast a shadow on his upturned chin as he faced the jury. His eyelids sagged, but did not blink. He fastened his eyes on the faces of the twelve men who had pronounced against him as if to penetrate their minds and determine the reason why. It was not a resentful expression, however, and when the court asked if the prisoner had anything to say he answered, "I have nothing to say," and sat down.

The perfunctory motions for a new trial were made by counsel for the defense. The usual granting of permission even to argue the point was denied, as Judge Watson in a stern voice declared that all rulings of the court were on comparatively unimportant details and in no way could have influenced the verdict. A stay of execution was granted, however, in order to give counsel an opportunity to apply for a writ of error when the Court of Appeals meets in November.

Judge Watson delivered an impressive speech to the defendant. He told how the young man had stained his own life and disgraced the community in which he lived by his sordid acts. When the trial first began, Judge Watson said, he had hoped that Virginia might be cleared of the crime for which not only the State felt ashamed, but which the entire country deprecated. He had hoped that counsel would prove the defendant innocent, but the evidence, he said he regretted to hote, was all-convincing and overwhelming.

"The court in this trial," said Judge Watson, "has endeavored in all its decisions to lean toward the side of the prisoner and in its charge to the jury, as well, attempted to give him the benefit of every doubt and every opportunity to establish his innocence. The rulings mostly have been not on matters of law, but on small questions of fact.

"You have had a fair and impartial trial, Mr. Beattie," he said, "and the jury has done what it considers its duty. Therefore you have been convicted of murder in the first degree, and on Nov. 24, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, you must forfeit your life to the community. May God have mercy on your soul."

A moment later, by the side of his father and his brother Douglas, their heads bowed in grief, young Beattie walked in the darkness toward his cell a hundred yards away. But the drama of the day was not over. A sharp report and a flash rent the thick blackness outside.

"My God!" exclaimed Judge Watson, as through his mind flitted the same thought that startled hundreds around him.

But it was not another tragedy. The prisoner was seen walking calmly on. The detonation was merely an unusually heavy charge of a photographer's flashlight.

The crowd lingered at the jail and peered into the cell, illuminated by a single lamp. On the bed, with his head in his hands, sat Beattie, his father and brother beside him. Jailor Cogbill sent the curious away, and only a few saw the prisoner break down and weep in the solitude of the cell.

An hour later the hamlet was deserted. A few hundred yards away from the jail in a small hotel twelve men gathered their belongings together in silence and one by one they drove away into the darkness to the homes from which for a fortnight they had been absent.

HISTORY OF THE CASE.

Beattie and His Wife Both from Well-Known Virginia Families.

The Beattie case has attracted more attention throughout the country than any recent criminal trial in Virginia. Henry Clay Beattie is the son of a prominent banker of South Richmond, and his murdered wife was from an old Southern family. They had been married less than a year, and a baby boy was born to them on the last day of May. The young mother was murdered on the night of July 18.

It was 10 o'clock that evening when Beattie called in his automobile at the home of his wife's uncle, where she had been visiting with her baby. The two went out for a drive, Mrs. Beattie well wrapped up, for this was her first drive since the birth of their son. Thirty minutes later Beattie came up the drive at furious speed with the body of his dead wife, for she had been shot in the head and his clothing was drenched with her blood.

The story he told then and clung to afterward was that of a bearded highwayman confronting them on the Midlothian Turnpike, confronting them threateningly and warning Beattie not to run over them. Then, as he leaned forward, Beattie said the man fired with the shotgun he had carried—fired and killed Louise Beattie. Then he told of wrestling with the man and wresting the gun from his grasp. That gun was his undoing. It was found behind a stump on the turnpike the next day, and two days later his cousin, Paul Beattie, came forward with the confession that he had bought it at the direction of Henry Clay Beattie.

The young husband was arrested. On the trial of the case the poor relation took the stand and swore that Henry Beattie had confessed the murder to him.

"I wish to God I had not done it. I would not have done it for a million dollars," were the words that Paul Beattie gave as coming from his cousin's lips. Though the defense bitterly assailed Paul, and though his cousin denied having been with him on the Thursday night Paul says te gun was ordered, tere were witnesses to support Paul, witnesses who saw them together.

In their search for a motive, the authorities drew out of the obscurity of the life she led, a seventeen-year-old girl, Beulah Binford, whose relations with Beattie began before his marriage and continued after, and whose little son was named after him. She was held as a witness, referred to from coast to coast as the "woman in the case," and is now in New York, having been pounced on for theatrical purposes. She had played a part in the dissolute life young Beattie led.

The trial was bitterly fought, and the evidence was confused by the stories of more than one witness that they, too, had seen such a bearded man as Beattie had described. Beattie himself took the stand, and in the course of a wracking cross-examination he was forced to put on the blood-stained clothes he wore the night he carried Louise Beattie's body back to town. From the position of the stains, the prosecution believed that he sat on her body as he drove the car. There were no stains to show that he had carried her all the way in his arm.

Yet throughout the trial he maintained an attitude not only of self-possession but even of high spirits. He laughed often. Every picture showed him smiling not only with cheerfulness but, apparently, with self-satisfaction, and on the eve of the jury's verdict he was asking the odds on the betting.

BOSTON BARS BINFORD GIRL.

Moving Pictures Presenting Her Will Not Be Allowed There.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 8.—Views of Beulah Binford in moving pictures will be denied the Boston public. Mayor Fitzgerald was emphatic in his statement that the show would not be allowed here.

"Such spectacles are offensive," he said, "and while I do not believe a sensible manager would attempt to put the pictures before the Boston public, if any of them do we will take steps to stop their exhibition."

J. Frank Chase, Secretary of the Watch and Ward Society, said: "I do not think the film will pass the National Board of Censors, but if it should I will do all in my power to prevent the picture being shown. Such a show as this would violate the law, and in the interests of the youth of the country it ought not be shown."

PAIR IN HAMMOCK SHOT AT.

Beattie Case Thought to Have Inspired Shooting—Both Are Hit.

Special to The New York Times.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Sept. 8.—A shooting which it is thought had its inception in the Beattie case occurred to-night on the farm of Charles Rinehart, near here. Mrs. Ethel Clark and Orlie Michaels were struck by two charges of buckshot fired at them while seated together in a hammock. Both were hit, the woman being the more seriously hurt.

It is stated that Mrs. Clark's husband had gone to a neighbor at Burlington on Thursday and made an effort to borrow a shotgun, remarking at the time that he wanted to fix Michaels. He had commented on the Beattie case, saying that "a shotgun is a mighty good weapon."

WOMAN IN AUTO MURDER.

Feminine Clothing in Wennerstrom's Machine, Which Was Found Yesterday.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—The automobile found to-day by searching parties near Cary, Ill., was identified to-night as the one which belonged to Frederick Wennerstrom, the Chicago auto-liveryman whose body was discovered near Fox River a week ago. The identification was made by C. C. Wennerstrom, brother of the dead man.

The mystery of Wennerstrom's death was deepened by the finding of feminine apparel in the bottom of the car. This prompted a new theory that whoever caused the shooting of Wennerstrom had also murdered a woman, and it is likely the Fox River will be dragged to-morrow in a search for the body.

The car was found in a deep ravine, and gave evidence of having been used no later than last night. The acetylene lamps were burning and the engine lamps were ready for instant use.

POLICEMAN THE DEFENDANT.

Prisoner Discharged and His Charge of Being Clubbed Taken Up.

Inspector Cahalane appeared again last night before Magistrate Breen in the Men's Night Court, when Robert Brassel, the waiter, who charged that Policeman Harry J. Johnson beat him, was rearraigned. Magistrate Breen had issued a summons for Miss Chapin, who had made a complaint against Brassel, and was provoked when a statement from Capt. Ormsby of the Fifth Street Station was handed him, which informed him that Miss Chapin could not be found at her home. Magistrate Breen then discharged Brassel, and recommended that an investigation of his charge against the policeman who had arrested him be made.

Inspector Cahalane told the court that a rigid investigation would be made, and that a report would be forwarded to Police Commissioner Waldo.

"If a minister arrived in Newport to-morrow," the City Clerk was asked, "could Col. Astor and Miss Force be married?"

His reply was: "I do not see why not, if they have complied with the law."

COL. ASTOR AND FIANCEE SAIL

Nominally for Robbins Island on a Week-End Cruise—May Reach Newport.

Col. John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeleine Force sailed away yesterday afternoon on his yacht, the Noma, bound, so everybody said, for Robbins Island, in Peconic Bay. This is in the State of New York, in which Col. Astor is forbidden to marry, but it is not a great way from Newport, R. I. Before he went aboard Col. Astor took the trouble to furnish personally a denial of the rumor that he and Miss Force had been married the evening before in Connecticut.

As to saying when he would be married, that was another question, and the Colonel referred inquirers to his secretary, William A. Dobbyn, who declared that he was not in a position to say anything on this subject. Nothing happened yesterday to weaken the strong impression that the wedding was very close at hand. The little cruise to Robbins Island was a week-end trip, it was said, and Mr. Dobbyn added that Col. Astor would be back in the city by Monday or Tuesday.

The growing conviction that the marriage would soon take place brought out reporters and photographers in force, and little squads of them dotted the course of Col. Astor's movements. He reached the Force home, in East Thirty-seventh Street, a little after noon, and was joined there by Miss Force, who had paid a visit to the hairdresser. The two started forth in a taxicab.

"Where are you going?" one reporter made so bold as to ask.

"Follow me and find out," replied Col. Astor, good-humoredly.

The pursuing taxicab went astray in the chase, but when Col. Astor drew up at Station 3 of the New York Yacht Club, where the Noma had been taking on coal off Eighty-first Street, a fresh group of reporters was on hand to receive him. They helped him get the door open, carried the bags down on to the float, and then started with the questions:

"Have you been married?"

"I have not," said Col. Astor.

"How silly," said Miss Force.

And this was the sum total of the conversation. Then they went into the little cabin of the float and waited, while the Noma steamed restlessly. The cause of the delay soon arrived in a four-wheeler. It was Mr. Force, who, after his encounter with a photographer the day before in which the reporter, if he did not get the better of it, at least got the picture, had brought with him a burly bodyguard. This man escorted him down on to the float and shielded him from the eager cameras.

Then the three took a motor boat to the Noma, which started off down the river a little after 2 o'clock. The course to Robbins Island is by way of the East River to the Sound and along the Sound to Little Peconic Bay. Robbins Island is just west of Shelter Island.

CITY BREVITIES.

Joseph Cummings, the five-year-old son of Mrs. Sarah Cummings of 673 Union Avenue, the Bronx, was run over and instantly killed by a grocery wagon last evening while crossing the street, with a bundle of groceries. His mother saw the accident from a window, but absolved the driver from blame.

Police Commissioner Waldo has appointed Dr. Charles J. Dillon of 175 West Ninety-seventh Street a Police Surgeon at $3,500 a year. He is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and has been a visiting physician at the city hospitals and at the New York Foundling Asylum.

Mayor Taylor, the single tax Mayor of Vancouver, will speak at the annual celebration of the birth of Henry George at Reisenweber's Brighton Casino, Coney Island, this evening.

UNIONS WOULD END BUREAU OF RESEARCH

Complain That It Cuts Down the Number of Jobs for Workingmen and Gets Salaries for a Few.

COMMITTEE GOING TO ALBANY

Will Suggest an Amendment to the City Charter Not Referred to in That Document.

The Central Federated Union voted last night to send a committee up to Albany to ask the Legislature to amend the New York City Charter for the abolition of the Bureau of Municipal Research. The committee was instructed in a motion fathered by Edward J. Hanna, delegate of the Blue Stone Cutters' Union, and passed overwhelmingly, to draw up such an amendment for insertion in the Cullen-Foley charter. Just how such an amendment can abolish a body which has been created privately, and is not mentioned in the present charter, Delegate Hanna did not explain, although he made an eloquent attack on the bureau and its activities.

"There ought to be a law against this Bureau of Municipal Research," he said. "All it does is go around and get the number of jobs for honest workingmen cut down, and throw people out of work. It gets big salaries for a few individuals at the expense of the rank and file.

"What's the reason they're so anxious to throw people out of city jobs, I want to know? Why are all these men thrown out of work in the Park Department and the Dock Department and the Street Cleaning Department? I think it is because somebody has an interest in having a glut in the labor market. It's good for the big corporations to have a lot of hungry men out of jobs, ready to take the place of their men if they should strike. It helps to keep wages down.

"I think it's about time we had an investigation of the reports that John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie and a lot of big corporation men are giving financial backing to this bureau. The reports come pretty straight. What are these men mixing up in a public matter for? What are they getting out of it? What right have they to try to run our city government? Where do they come in to make suggestions to the Board of Aldermen? If there are any suggestions to be made, let them come from a political party, or from citizens, not from the corporations.

"We need more work to be given to the laboring classes by the city, not less. There are enough men out of work now, a lot of them thrown out because of the influence of this Bureau of Municipal Research. It's time a stop was put to that kind of business."

Delegate Hanna's speech was loudly applauded and his sentiments were echoed by several other speakers, among them the members of the committee appointed by Thomas J. Curtis, President of the Central Federated Union, and of the International Tunnel and Subway Constructors' Union. This committee consists of Edward J. Hanna, Chairman; Matthew McConville, of the Stationary Engineers' Union; Eugene Johnson, of the Musical Protective Union; James O'Brien, Recording Secretary of the Central Federated Union, and Michael Neyland, of the Machinists' Union.

organizations, met here to-day to begin the task of determining what action shall be taken by the federation of shopmen in the face of refusal by officials of the Harriman lines to recognize the federation. The general committeemen present represented nearly every shop of the Harriman system west of the Mississippi River, and they are accredited with full authority to act for the 25,000 Harriman line employes.

James W. Kline, international President of the Blacksmiths' Union, said the four international Presidents who came here and unsuccessfully urged Vice President Julius Kruttschnitt of the Harriman lines to recognize the federation, would use every effort to avert an open break between the company and the men, but that they realized there was little chance to prevent a strike. The Presidents at the meeting to-day told the general committeemen of the negotiations with Kruttschnitt and explained all of the details of the present situation.

Since the Kruttschnitt conference the men have taken a vote, and the general committeemen came here with definite instructions from the men whom they represent. This vote is the second the men have taken on the subject, the one prior to the Kruttschnitt meeting having been practically a unanimous decision to strike unless the federation should gain recognition from the railroad officials.

Most of the shops along the coast have emphasized the desire of the men to take drastic action, but some of the delegates from the Middle Western States are inclined to accept the ultimatum of Kruttschnitt for the present and to make individual union contracts for the coming year. It is past time for drawing up the annual contracts, and the shopmen are awaiting the result of this conference before beginning negotiations with their General Superintendents.

In case it is deemed inadvisable to strike, new contracts will be made at once, each craft dealing separately with the company, but all demanding practically the same conditions of employment. The federation officials feel that in this way the ends of the federation will be gained, even if the organization itself is not officially recognized by the railroad officials.

President Kline said the present conference probably would last until to-morrow, and that it might be extended into next week. He said that he did not expect any definite action to-day.

If the peacemakers in the conference succeed in preventing a strike order, the influence of all the representatives of all the shopmen will be directed to bringing about an agreement whereby the railroad will consent to eliminate from the proposed contract the "personal record" clause and the introduction of piecework and the premium system. Success in these endeavors will gain for the men their greatest object, aside from that of federation recognition.

STRIKE ORDER AT PADUCAH.

Special to The New York Times.

PADUCAH, Ky., Sept. 8.—Telegrams received to-day by employes of the Illinois Central from the federation officials in Chicago indicate that a strike will be called Monday, not only on the Illinois Central, but on all of the Harriman lines.

None of the employes would make public the contents of the messages, but intimated that the date for a walkout had been set for Monday.

Paducah officials of the Illinois Central asserted they were ignorant of any strike information, but were of the opinion that the federation would recede from its position demanding recognition.

COURT DECREE CUTS MAYOR MAGEE'S TERM

BITTER FIGHT OF FACTIONS

Senator Oliver Helped Elect Magee, Who in Turn Aided in the Senator's Election—Improvements Stopped.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 8.—While entrenching himself for a campaign against United States Senator George T. Oliver, Mayor William A. Magee of Pittsburgh finds his term of office suddenly cut short by an act of the Legislature, and to-day petitions are out for three candidates who will enter the primary race for Mayor. A successor to the present Mayor will be elected next month, although his appeal from the act of the Legislature is certain. Magee's term is shortened by two and one-half years.

The act was passed at the last session of the Legislature, and it was two months before its real import was discovered. It was supposed to apply to McKeesport and small communities throughout the State.

Judge L. L. Davis, however, has handed down an opinion sustaining the act and making it effective against Pittsburgh's Mayor. It was Senator Oliver who elected Magee to the office of Mayor, and it was Magee's strength that insured Oliver his seat in the United States Senate for six years.

The break between these helpful allies came a month ago, and the fight has been very bitter. Friends of McGee see the hand of Oliver and Penrose behind the act reducing the Mayor's term, but no statements have come from either.

Magee had planned improvements, and had mapped out a civic programme that would have taken the balance of his term to execute, but none of his improvement projects will ever be executed unless the Pennsylvania Supreme Court should declare the act invalid.

German Cadets Seeing the Sights Here

Fifty-one cadets and eight officers of the German training ship Victoria Luise, now lying at Newport, R. I., arrived here yesterday from Boston. In the morning they went by boat to West Point to inspect the Academy, and visited Coney Island, Chinatown, and the Bowery after dinner. They will return to Newport this evening by boat. Consul Ziegler will give a luncheon to the officers and staff of the Consulate at the St. Regis Hotel this afternoon.

—and fifteen thousand voices answer, "Aye, Aye!"

THIS enthusiastic verdict has been rendered by 15,000 physicians who thereby have decided the question: Is Sanatogen a true food-tonic of genuine merit and real efficiency?

Truly a unique vote of confidence, demonstrating to the world the belief of a great profession in a great preparation. When fifteen thousand men of science, among them the master minds of medicine, give their written endorsement of there must be conviction born of actual experience and observation. The physician watches in his patients the splendid reconstructive effect of Sanatogen, sees how wonderfully it feeds and strengthens enfeebled nerves, how it helps digestion, efficiently and persistently bringing into play the vital forces that make for perfect health.

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

Only after repeated experience and observation does the physician feel justified in expressing his opinion. It is under such conditions that 15,000 physicians have endorsed Sanatogen.

Thus results, demonstrated worth, are the factors behind this unexampled endorsement —because Sanatogen is prepared on scientific principles, in harmony with the known functions of the body machine. Its concentrated elements are so combined as to fulfill the true functions of a tissue food with the wonderful tonic power of a creative, reconstructive force.

When Sanatogen demonstrates these qualities, is it surprising that recognition should come from the world's master physicians, and should not this recognition mean a very great deal to you?

"Our Nerves of Tomorrow"—FREE

This is a beautifully illustrated treatise by a physician of note, absorbingly interesting and brimful of facts and information that are of vital interest to you. The book also contains evidence of the value of Sanatogen, which is as remarkable as it is conclusive.

Sanatogen is sold in three sizes: $1.00—$1.90—$3.60

Emperor of Austria's Private Physician
Surgeon General Dr. Kerzl, of Vienna:
"I have been using Sanatogen with splendid results and recommend it continually and everywhere because I am thoroughly convinced that it is an excellent food-tonic."

His Excellency Prof. Dr. Von Leyden
Director First Medical Clinic, Berlin University, writes:
"I have gladly and frequently prescribed Sanatogen in cases of delicate patients in my clinical as well as my private practice and am extremely satisfied with the results."

Late King Edward's Physician
Dr. Ernest Ott,
"I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years in my practice with excellent results. These results have been notably good in the case of elderly people when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate the bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

Prof. C. A. Ewald
of Berlin University, Doctor honoris causa Johns-Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, writes:
"I can say that I have used Sanatogen in a great number of cases (that is, in those disturbances of metabolism which were mainly of a nervous or neurasthenic origin), and have obtained excellent results."

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M.S., Ph.D.
The well-known research chemist of Stevens' Institute, writes:
"The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a product containing phosphorus in the organic phosphate condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with the greatest ease."

LAWYER IS ACCUSED IN DIVORCE SUIT

MAKES DENIAL IN COURT

His Visits Only in a Professional Capacity, Says Mr. Lynch — Stansfield Testifies Against Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—During the trial to-day of the separation suit brought by Mrs. Eugenie Stansfield against Samuel B. Stansfield, manager of the Waterhouse Worsted Mills of New York, and his counteraction for divorce several witnesses pointed out one of Mrs. Stansfield's lawyers who was taking part in the hearing as having been in her apartment in Manhattan. The lawyer is Humphrey J. Lynch, one of the leading young attorneys in Westchester County, and after adjournment he denied any wrongdoing and said he had been visiting Mrs. Stansfield, in his professional capacity.

Mrs. Stansfield, who has been prominent in society and owns a large manor house at Purchase, near White Plains, charges her husband with cruel and inhuman treatment. Mr. Stansfield, in his counter suit, says his wife maintained for a time an apartment in West Eighty-first Street, Manhattan, without his knowledge and that she entertained men there.

Mrs. Harriet Dobbins, who had an adjoining apartment, swore that one morning she saw Mrs. Stansfield sitting by a window smoking a cigarette. She said that there was a young man near her and that he looked like Mr. Lynch.

William Huber, a grocery clerk, said that a young man came to the store at 8 o'clock one morning to get some eggs, cream, and other groceries, and that he told him that the goods were for Mrs. Stansfield.

"Do you see that man in court," Lawyer Henderson asked.

"Yes, I remember he had curly hair, retreating forehead, and he wore a black derby hat. It was that lawyer over there," and he pointed to Lynch.

Mr. Lynch shook his head and afterward declared that he had never been near the grocery. His assistant in the case, David H. Hunt, brought out from the clerk that on the day he says Lynch called at least a thousand other customers were in the store.

"The fact of the matter is," said Lynch, "Mrs. Stansfield was not residing in the Eighty-first Street house when the clerk says I bought the groceries. That story is all rot."

Mrs. Stansfield, who was dressed in blue and wore big diamond earrings, said so those within the space reserved for attorneys could hear: "It is a shame to try and ruin a young lawyer. He is blameless."

Mr. Stansfield, testifying in his own defense, declared that his marital troubles began when his wife insisted in having a Miss Estelle Jacques as a companion. He said he didn't like her, and told his wife so. He finally told her to get out of his house, and Mrs. Stansfield went with her, and was gone three weeks.

Mr. Stansfield then told how his wife stayed out until 3 o'clock one morning. He said:

"Mrs. Stansfield swore she crawled through the dining room early that morning because she did not want to awaken Charlie, my hired man. As a matter of fact Charlie was not asleep at the time."

Mrs. Stansfield, at a previous hearing, had testified that her husband struck and choked her, and on one occasion hit her with a driving whip. Mr. Hunt took up the cross-examination on this point.

"Did you ever strike your wife?"

"I never did. I simply pushed her out of the room on several occasions. It was a frequent matter for us to quarrel, and then I had to push her out of the room."

"On one occasion when you made up, did you agree that you would mount the water wagon?"

"Yes, it was at my suggestion."

"How long did you ride on that vehicle?"

"Eighteen months."

"When you asked Mrs. Stansfield where she had been on that morning when she got home at 3 A. M., what did she say?"

"She said she had been to the theatre and had missed the train."

"What did you say?"

"I said that she was a liar?"

"What did she say?"

"'You are another.'"

CANNOT INCORPORATE 'HELL.'

Secretary of State Rejects Application for Proposed Restaurant.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 8.—The word "Hell" may not be used as the title of a corporation, according to a decision made to-day by Secretary of State Lazansky. Several days ago the firm of Goldstein & Goldstein of 366 Broadway, New York, sent to the office of the Secretary of State papers properly made out for the incorporation of a company entitled "Hell," the intention being to conduct a restaurant business in New York City, with a capital of $100,000.

Mr. Lazansky decided to return the papers on the ground that the incorporation of a company with such title would be against public policy. He has written to the lawyers, rejecting the application, suggesting that if his judgment is questioned an action may be begun in court to compel the filing of the papers.

It was assumed by the State authorities that some enterprising firm desired to secure the benefits of sensational advertising by displaying an electric sign bearing the name of the company.

USE ENGLISH, SAYS GOFF

And Refuses Incorporation to a Society with a Jewish Name.

In refusing to sign a certificate of incorporation of the Aguigas Achim of K'Hal Adas Yeshurum of New York, Supreme Court Justice Goff expressed the opinion yesterday that all people who live in the United States should use the English language in their business. He says:

"Application denied. The title of the proposed incorporation is unintelligible. It is not, and it should be, in the English language. I cannot tell what the title imports. Very likely it imports what is legal and proper, but to warrant approval a Judge should understand what he approves."

PLAN TO SAVE TRAFFIC SQUAD

New Law Suggested to Free It from Three-Platoon Rule.

Frederick B. De Berard and Henry P. Towne, representing the Merchants' Association, and Isaac Goldberg, President of the National Team Owners' Association, went to Police Headquarters yesterday and consulted with Commissioner Waldo about a bill for the reorganization of the traffic squad.

Since the passage of the three-platoon bill policemen on the traffic squad have been compelled to do their share of patrol duty, and to serve on the three shifts, as required by the new law. To fill in the vacancies policemen without experience in traffic work have been detailed to regulate the traffic.

The committee asked the Commissioner if he would approve a plan to introduce a bill placing the traffic squad on the same plane as before. The Commissioner said he favored the plan, and that if the bill was given him he would confer with Mayor Gaynor on the subject.

Assistant Postmaster Resigns.

Giving as his reason for retiring from the office the need of more time to devote to his private business interests, Frank H. Newcomb has resigned as Assistant Postmaster of Brooklyn, his resignation to take effect Oct. 1. Mr. Newcomb has been Assistant Postmaster for nine years. He is said to have become dissatisfied with the office because of the reduction of its authority.

SOCIETY TO SUPPRESS GUNS.

Ex-Coroner Bausch Would Aid Police to Enforce Sullivan Law.

ALBANY, Sept. 8.—Jacob B. Bausch, a former Coroner of New York City, is endeavoring to have the Legislature enact a law incorporating "The Society for the Enforcement of the Concealed Weapon Law." He says Senator T. D. Sullivan, author of the dangerous weapons act, has promised to introduce a bill to that end when the Legislature reconvenes.

"In the opinion of many," said Mr. Bausch to-day, "the police with their many duties cannot cope with the situation. The society would devote its energies through a force of agents to suppressing the carrying of concealed weapons. There are places in New York City where gangs hire guns for a quarter a night when they plan to 'shoot up' another gang. Strip such a man of a deadly weapon and he becomes a coward."

MONEY UNCLAIMED 36 YEARS.

Peekskill Man May Obtain Deposit in Old New York Bank.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 8.—A sum of money which has been in possession of the State Banking Department for thirty-six years will be turned over to a Peekskill man if he can prove his claim to it. He wrote the department concerning a deposit in the Third Avenue Savings Bank of Albany.

Supt. Van Tuyl had never heard of the institution, but after a search among many musty volumes he unearthed a set of books of the Third Avenue Savings Bank of New York, which closed in 1875.

He found the account referred to by the correspondent and directed him to forward the department the bank passbook with a certified copy of letters of administration on the estate of his relative in whose name the account was carried. If he does this a draft for the amount will be forwarded.

BRIDGE EXPLOSION INQUIRY.

Fire Marshal to Investigate Mt. Vernon Dynamite Case.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Thomas Ahearn, State Fire Marshal, to-day assigned Deputy Marshal Acritelli to investigate the dynamite explosion on the railway viaduct at Mount Vernon, Westchester County. The explosion, which was incidental to a strike, nearly wrecked the bridge.

This is the first formal investigation under the new law creating the office of Fire Marshal. Mr. Acritelli is a member of the New York City Board of Experts on Combustibles, and it is believed his knowledge of the Italian language will be of material assistance in securing facts connected with the explosion.

MRS. SAGE PAYS BOND TAX.

$8,500 on Outside Holdings—$7,000,000 Revenue to the State.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 8.—Mrs. Russell Sage has paid to the State a tax of $8,500 on bonds which have been registered with the State Controller under the new secured debt tax law. This represents bonds secured by mortgages outside of the State to the amount of $1,700,000. These bonds have been assessed by New York City for local taxation, but under the new law, when the tax of one-half of 1 per cent. is paid the bonds are exempt from further taxation.

It as stated that the New York Stock Exchange has advised its clients to pay the new State tax on their bonds not taxable under State laws. The State Controller reports that bonds to the amount of millions have already been registered, and the indications now are that the State will receive at least $7,000,000 in taxes every year under the new law.

Many Register Exempt Bonds.

Advantage was taken of the Secured Debt law by a number of persons and corporations yesterday, and the Deputy Controller's office reports that bonds are coming in increased numbers daily as the knowledge of the law and its benefits become generally known. The amounts thus far registered are small, ranging from $10,000 to $40,000, but the number of holders offering the bonds for registration shows a widespread approval of the statute.

RESENTS MUSICIANS' FLIRTING

Concertmeister Resigns When Men Ogle His Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 8.—It is more than "too much artistic temperament" that has caused a break in Director Modest Altschuler's Russian Symphony Orchestra. Because the player of the kettle drum, oboe, bass horn, or one of the violins cast admiring glances at Mme. Sokoloff, wife of the concertmeister, a mix-up ensued that threatened temporary disruption of the organization. Sokoloff resigned, and two others quit with him.

The orchestra is playing an engagement at the Pittsburgh Exposition, and not until to-day was the absence of Sokoloff explained. According to Manager Jacob Altschuler the break came on Saturday, when Sokoloff, grinding his teeth in a rage, pointed to a certain instrument and said:

"That man has been flirting with my wife, ogling her and trying to attract her attention. He must go. There is not room in this organization for both of us."

"But, my dear man," soothingly explained the business manager, "I have no control over the actions of my men ... music platform. How can I—"

"He must go. He must go," angrily shouted the incensed concertmeister. "I will not play with that man."

HELD FROM STARVING FAMILY

Injured Man Went Abroad to Get Legacy and Gates Close on Him Here.

Mrs. Vito Cassalio of 712 Grand Street, Hoboken, who has nine children, appealed to the Overseer of the Poor in Hoboken for aid yesterday, saying they were all starving. She also asked his aid in getting her husband to this country. He is not a citizen, but has lived here many years. Some months ago he received word that a relative died in Italy leaving him some money. He took his savings and went to Europe.

On reaching Italy he found that the fees and traveling expenses about used up his legacy. When he sought to return he found he could not because he has a crippled hand, which was the result of an injury he received here. None of the steamship companies will bring him without a Consul's certificate that he will not be deported, and he has written his wife that he cannot get the Consul's approval. The Overseer says he will obtain affidavits showing Cassalio had supported his family and was desirable as a resident and try to have the State Department and immigration officials pass him.

SUIT IN NETCONG SCANDAL.

Dr. Thayer Seeks Advice Regarding an Action for Alienation.

Special to The New York Times.

NETCONG, N. J., Sept. 8.—Dr. Henry W. Thayer, whose quarrel with David M. Cook, President of the Citizens' National Bank, has been the talk of the village for the last week, and who has charged J. Frank Best, cashier of the bank, with taking letters written by Cook to Mrs. Thayer from a safe deposit vault in the bank, has placed his case in the hands of Jacob L. Newman of Newark. He will bring suit against Cook for alienation of his wife's affections.

Mrs. Thayer has contended all along that the alleged attentions paid her by Cook were by no means welcome. She insists that she is the victim of unfounded gossip.

The letters which Cook is to be charged with having written are addressed to Mrs. Thayer, according to the lawyer, and written on the bank's stationery. They contain endearing terms and large crosses, supposed to indicate kisses. Cook used to take meals at the Thayer house, next door to the bank.

LAURIER AND AIDS UP FOR CLOSE SEATS

Premier and Two Ministers Each Party Nominees in Two Constituencies in Quebec.

SAID TO SHOW WEAKNESS

Anti-Reciprocity Men Regard Ministers' Doubling Up and Stepping Into Breach as Encouraging.

MONTREAL, Sept. 8.—A significant development as election day draws near is the acceptance by Government Ministers of nominations in two separate constituencies of this province. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to run in Soulanges and also in Quebec East. The latter seat he has occupied for years, and here he is practically sure of election. In Soulanges the Liberal party was rent by dissension and faced a strong local man in Dr. Lortie, the Opposition candidate. It is felt that if any one can win there Sir Wilfrid can.

The Postmaster General in the Laurier Ministry, Dr. Henri S. Beland, is running in his old constituency of Beauce, where the normal Liberal majority is in four figures, and also in Montmagny, which is a Nationalist stronghold, represented at Quebec by Armand Lavergne, the lieutenant of Mr. Bourassa in his campaign against Laurier.

The Minister of the Navy and Fisheries, Rodolphe Lemieux, is to contest Rouville as well as his former constituency of Gaspe, in which he is practically sure to win.

The nomination of the Ministers in these double constituencies is being construed by the Opposition as an evidence of weakness, for if the election should be a close one it will deprive the Liberals of three votes in the first division of the House, assuming that the Ministers are elected in both constituencies for which they are running. Under the rules, a Member of Parliament cannot resign until a Speaker has been elected, and it is foreseen that in case the parties are closely divided the test vote will come on the election of Speaker.

Mr. Bourassa has recovered from his throat trouble and is once more on the hustings. At the meetings he has addressed lately there have been signs of organized interruption, but with scant success, as Mr. Bourassa has too ready a wit to be disconcerted by hecklers. Mr. Bourassa started out by treating reciprocity as a negligible issue, and rather inclined to favor it. He has now got to the point where he places himself in direct opposition, and this is interpreted to mean that he has found his supporters less favorable to it than he at first supposed they would be.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will return to his province next week and will address a large number of meetings, mostly in the French-speaking districts. He will wind up the campaign with a big demonstration in Montreal, to which excursions will be run from all over the province and at which he will be supported on the platform by a large number of the party standard bearers of Quebec.

SEND HEARST CHALLENGE.

Anti-Reciprocity Men Invite Him to Montreal to Prove Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Sept. 8.—W. R. Hearst of New York, whom La Patrie, a French-Canadian publication at Montreal, designates as the "avowed enemy of all British connection and the general disturber of the peace," has been invited by the following telegram to come to Montreal and meet Mr. Bourassa:

> W. R. Hearst, The American, New York: A great public meeting will be held on the Champ de Mars, Montreal, Saturday evening Sept. 9, where your attitude, your methods, your false allegations, and your unjustifiable interference in Canadian affairs will be discussed. You are invited to come and prove your crazy assertions as to the alleged sending of money by American trusts to combat reciprocity.
>
> (Signed) LOUIS PELLETIER, RUFUS H. POPE.

A dispatch from Montreal to-night says that a reply to the dispatch was this morning received from the editor of The New York American stating that Mr. Hearst was in Europe, and, at any rate, "he would regard the challenge as nothing more than a vulgar outburst unworthy of serious attention."

HILL ANSWER TO KIPLING.

Says Canada's Farming Land Would Not Cover Three States Like Iowa.

James J. Hill, whose railroads meet at many points in competition with the Canadian systems, was asked yesterday what was the extent of the "virgin fields for cheaper food and living" to which Rudyard Kipling referred in his warning to Canada against reciprocity as being the goal of the American people "who by their haste and waste have dissipated their own resources."

Mr. Hill measured out on a map the land in Canada which might be drawn on to feed the population on this side of the border. "The land available for agricultural purposes in Canada," he said, "does not equal three States the size of Iowa."

Mr. Hill has been an ardent advocate for many years of improvement in farming methods in this country, and, following this policy, the Great Northern is bringing on a big exhibit showing the opportunities in its territory for the New York Land Show to be held here this Fall. The Canadian roads are also to be exhibitors. Mr. Hill said yesterday that he believed the Land Show was a good thing and that his system would show the best soil products along his lines, but that the only thing that would drive the people back to the land would be empty stomachs.

"The solution of the problem of enough food to feed the too numerous people engaged in industrial occupations is a system of experimental farms. The thing to do is to actually show the farmer visually," he said.

"There are too many people writing and talking about it and too few actually doing things. In 1860 practically 50 per cent. of our population was on the soil. At present there is about 30 per cent. We can no longer consume our own industrial output. There are 3,000,000 less hogs in the United States than there were ten years ago and 9,000,000 less cattle. What has become of our exports of grain? They are steadily diminishing. It is astonishing how great the variation is in the yield per acre."

BOY HAS HYDROPHOBIA.

Seven Other Children Bitten When He Was, Twenty Days Ago.

Enrico Salino, 5 years old, of 306 East Twelfth Street was taken from the Willard Parker Hospital to Bellevue yesterday suffering from rabies as a result of a dog bite about twenty days ago. He has been undergoing the Pasteur treatment at the Willard Parker, and the doctors noticed the first symptoms of rabies yesterday.

The lad was bitten by a stray dog at Twelfth Street and First Avenue. Seven other children were bitten at the time. The dog is still at large, and it is feared by the doctors that some of the seven boys may also develop the disease.

NAVY'S EYE ON CHINA.

American Warships There Ready to Protect Missionaries in Danger.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—State and Navy Department officials are closely watching the situation in China. Admiral Hubbard, commanding the American naval forces in the Far East, has not reported to the Navy Department what measure he has adopted for the protection of the American missionaries reported to be threatened in Szechuen Province in accordance with yesterday's instruction.

Acting Secretary Winthrop to-day had on his desk a list of the American warships in Chinese and Philippine waters, showing just where each ship was located at last report. The number of vessels is considerable, but not many of them are sufficiently light draught to be able to navigate upper reaches and tributaries of the Yangtse Kiang running through the disturbed province.

The State Department officials most familiar with conditions in China are not very apprehensive for the safety of any foreigners in Szechuen Province. They say they believe that the agitation there is really directed more against the Chinese Government for economic reasons than against the missionaries, who have recently been on a particularly favorable footing in their relations with the natives and have not in any way been concerned in the projected extension of railways in the province.

CHINESE WARSHIP COMING.

Bluejackets Will Land Unhampered by the Immigration Law.

The Chinese cruiser Hai-Chi, the first warship flying the flag of China to visit New York, will drop anchor in the Hudson River some time to-morrow afternoon. Aboard is Rear Admiral Chin Pih Kwang, of the Imperial Chinese Navy, who will be officially welcomed by representatives of the State and Navy Departments, and will receive many courtesies here from New York State as well.

A report was current yesterday that the 400 Chinese bluejackets who man the Hai-Chi would not be permitted to land in New York because of the Chinese immigration law. There seems to be no occasion for any such report, and the Chinese jackies will not be molested in any way by the immigration authorities here. Not only are they expected to land, but they will receive every opportunity to see New York from end to end, including possibly Coney Island.

Immigration officials pointed out yesterday that the Hai-Chi's men are directly responsible to their Government, and being man-o'-warsmen on a ship belonging to a friendly power, nothing that could be construed as a curtailment of their liberty while in New York waters will be attempted.

The place where the Hai-Chi will anchor has not been announced, but it is certain to be in the Hudson, somewhere between Seventy-ninth and 125th Streets.

The officers on the Hai-Chi, besides the Admiral commanding, are: Flag Commander Chin Yao Huan and Flag Commander Tsin Yu Lin, Capt. Tang Ting Kwang, Commander Li Kwoh Tang, First Lieut. Cheng Tsu Yi, First Lieut. Wang Chih Yeh, First Lieut. Pan Wen Chi, First Lieut. Chang Tseng Chun, First Lieut. Yao Ming Luan, Second Lieut. Cheng Yung Chin, Second Lieut. Lin Pei Hsi, Second Lieut. Huang Chung Hsuan, Second Lieut. Luh Chieh, Engineer Lieut. Kwan Nan.

POLICE SEEK PRIEST.

Father Donatella Is Charged with Abducting a 15-Year-Old Girl.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Sept. 8.—The police of Pittsburgh and Cincinnati are searching for the Rev. Father Francis Donatella with warrants for his arrest on a charge of abduction. The warrants were issued to-day, following a story unfolded by 15-year-old Katherine Sullivan, whose tutor in languages the young priest had been.

The girl disappeared three weeks ago at the same time that the priest, who was assistant pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church, took leave of his parish duties. The girl returned to her home on Wednesday, and when her father failed to wring the story of her absence from her he had her arrested on a technical charge of incorrigibility.

The girl told the police that the priest took her to Cincinnati and later to a suburb, where he kept her virtually a captive until last Tuesday. Father Donatella, she charges, threatened to kill her if she spoke about him to any one. The girl will probably be sent to a reformatory.

Donatella was ordained a priest at Mount Casino, Italy. He is 32 years old.

SEEK BABE AFLOAT IN BOX.

Canine Companion Is Rescued from Canal—Child Probably Drowned.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—A yellow and white puppy, believed to have been the companion of the baby that was seen by two boys floating in a soap box in the drainage canal Wednesday night, was taken from the water last night near Lemont, Ill.

If the dog could talk the police believe it could tell how the other passenger in the soap box, a two-year-old child, described by the boys, was drowned in the storm. The puppy had been fighting for life in the water for hours. Its paws were torn and bleeding as if it had made many futile attempts to climb the bank.

Hundreds of searchers, who had patrolled the banks of the canal for thirty-six hours, determined to maintain the vigil in relays after the puppy was found, but they retained little hope of recovering the child alive.

FIND RING OF MAINE VICTIM.

Navy to Return One Worn by Engineer Merritt to His Father.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—A relic of the wreck of the battleship Maine, the gold class ring of Assistant Engineer Darwin R. Merritt, who lost his life in the explosion of that vessel in Havana Harbor thirteen years ago, was received at the Navy Department to-day.

Lieut. Merritt wore this ring when he met his death, and efforts of the army engineers to find it by screening all the débris on the berth deck were unsuccessful. A Havana newspaper announced that it had come into possession of the ring and would turn it over to the United States authorities.

It was brought here by Col. Black of the Engineer Board, and will be delivered by the navy to the Rev. W. W. Merritt of Red Oak, Iowa, father of Lieut. Merritt.

GRANGERS RESENT THE SNUB TO TAFT

Officers and Executive Committee Called Upon to Apologize to the President.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL DESIGN

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 8.—The action of the Connecticut State officers in showing their feeling against President Taft for his support of the reciprocity treaty by refusing to make a State Grange Day at the big Connecticut fair at Hartford is not supported generally by the Grangers. A resolution was received by the President to-day from the Orange Grange calling upon the officers and Executive Committee to apologize to the President for the incident. While the President was in Hartford yesterday many Grangers took occasion to express their regret for their action. The resolution reads:

> Whereas the officers and Executive Committee of the Connecticut State Grange have shown an inhospitable and discourteous spirit, and have cast an affront both upon the President as a man and as an official, and have brought the Connecticut State Grange into disrepute, and have brought humiliation and shame upon many loyal and patriotic patrons of this State, regardless of their party affiliations or views upon the reciprocity treaty:
>
> Be it hereby resolved that we, the officers and members of the Orange Grange, regardless of our political views or party affiliations, do hereby express our loyalty and respect for the President of the United States, and we extend to him a cordial welcome to Connecticut.
>
> We further express our faith in the character of William H. Taft. We deplore the action of the officers of our State Grange in treating so discourteously the first citizen of our land, and we deprecate their attitude and their utterances.
>
> We request the officers and members of the Executive Committee of the Connecticut State Grange who have been responsible for this regrettable incident to apologize to President William H. Taft, and officially assure him that he is held in high esteem and honor by the Grangers of Connecticut.

The President, Mrs. Taft, and Major Butt motored from Beverly to Nahant to-day to visit former Vice President Levi P. Morton. Mr. Morton and Mrs. Morton are staying with Mrs. William C. Eustis at Nahant.

The President put in a busy half day looking over a mass of official papers and personal letters, and in giving the finishing touches to some of his forthcoming Western speeches It was another rainy day at Beverly.

Col. S. F. Cosby, Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds at Washington and disbursing officer for the Lincoln Memorial Commission, was directed to-day by the President to commission John Russell Pope, a New York architect, to submit a design for a Lincoln memorial for the Soldiers' Home site and for the Sixteenth Street site in Washington. Henry Bacon of New York submitted plans for a memorial at the Potomac Park site some time ago.

After the President returns to Washington a meeting of the commission, which has $2,000,000 in hand, will be held, and the site and the design selected.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 8.—At a meeting of the Braun Arbor of the Gleaners in Northfield township last night a resolution was unanimously adopted to boycott the State Fair at Detroit on Sept. 18 because of the presence of President Taft at the fair grounds on that day.

The resolution declares that the President "has shown himself in favor of ruining home markets and agriculturists by forcing reciprocity upon the country."

HARMON DEFENDS CONGRESS

Governor Believes He Can Defeat Taft in Ohio—Boston Speech.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 8.—Gov. Judson Harmon of Ohio arrived here at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and went to the Allyn House, where an informal reception was held. Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin was present. Gov. Harmon made a brief speech.

"Yes," he said, "we had a good victory in Ohio; we produced sixteen Democratic Congressmen, which is as many as Texas had. The principal thing for the party," he continued, "is to keep united. The Republicans are having their troubles, but there is no reason why the Democrats should follow their example. Underwood has been a brilliant leader, and Champ Clark has been a good Speaker.

"Many people were afraid that the Democrats when they got in control of Congress would do something bad. They have been surprised. The showing augurs well for the party's success. Whoever wins out at the party convention should receive the united support of the party. I want the best of feeling to prevail among the candidates."

Gov. Harmon said he could beat Taft in Ohio.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—Gov. Harmon, who arrived in Boston to-night, will devote much of his address at the barbecue of the Democratic Ward Committee to-morrow to a "vindication of Congress against the attack of President Taft." That was the announcement the Governor made to a committee headed by Mayor Fitzgerald which met him at the railroad station.

SHE MISSED HAPPINESS.

So Poison Ends Life an ex-School Teacher Found Only "Too Hard."

Roberta D. Braxton, a colored caretaker at 223 East Fourteenth Street, was found dead in her room yesterday. She was 65 years old and had been a school teacher in Virginia. Two physicians who were called said that Mrs. Braxton had died of the effects of poison.

Near her body was a note in her own handwriting, which read:

> Life has been too hard for me. I have never had a happy day in over twelve years. My dear mother is dead. My family has dropped me without a penny of what is really mine. I have nothing to live for.

FIRES AT WILD TAXICAB.

Brooklyn Policeman Wounds It in Two Tires and Then Makes Capture.

Patrolman Arthur Owens of the Adams Street Station, Brooklyn, had an exciting encounter with a taxicab early yesterday morning. After wounding the crazy machine in the tires with two pistol shots he pursued it in a handy pie baker's cart and effected its capture.

Owens was at Fulton and Hoyt Streets when he saw the cab, which was following a zigzag course, approaching. The car made an unsuccessful attempt to climb a pillar of the elevated railroad, then tried to ram an ice-cream wagon, and, missing it, bore viciously down upon Owens. Dodging it, he cried to the chauffeur to stop. The machine, however, turned down a side street and disappeared. Five minutes later it reappeared on Fulton Street, and once more darted at Owens. Failing to hit him, it sought relief for its feelings by running wildly around the block.

After vainly commanding the operator of the machine to stop, Owens, fearing that the car might run some one down, fired two shots from his revolver at the tires, puncturing two of them. Although badly wounded, the mad car sped away down Lawrence Street. Pressing a passing pie baker's cart into service, Owens gave pursuit. In St. Edward's Street he overhauled the car, which was brought to a standstill.

The chauffeur, who said he was James Cavanagh of 646 Franklin Avenue was arrested. Cavanagh explained that something had gone wrong with the mechanism of the car and he was unable to stop the machine.

She testified that she was on her way home from business when the defendants walked up behind her and Mrs. Sardy turned a flashlight in her face and then knocked her down. She said that Miss Maloney held her while Mrs. Sardy struck her several times with the flashlight. Her father, sister and brother came to her assistance, she said, whereupon her assailants ran away.

She was asked if she had not been warned by Mrs. Sardy to keep away from Mr. Sardy, and she replied that she had, but had never gone riding or walking with him.

GUN LAW HALTS HIM ON WAY TO EUROPE

IN THE TOMBS UNTIL MONDAY

Grand Jury Refuses to Indict in a Similar Case—Peddler, Arrested for Having a Razor, Discharged.

Two men, accused of violating the Sullivan law prohibiting the possession of firearms and other dangerous weapons, were held yesterday by Magistrate O'Connor for the action of the Grand Jury. One of them, Henry Becker of Seattle, Wash., who had booked passage on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, was arrested on his way to an express office, having among his baggage a shotgun in a case. Becker is 23 years old, and was on his way to visit his parents in Europe. His case resembles that of another person, whom the Grand Jury refused yesterday to indict. Magistrate O'Connor said, however, that Becker would have to wait in the Tombs until Monday, without bail, for the Grand Jury to consider his case.

Frank Smith, 28 years old, of 12 Chatham Square, was the other prisoner held by Magistrate O'Connor. His case would have been dealt with under the old concealed-weapons law if it had not been superseded by the Sullivan law. He was accused of carrying concealed a .32-calibre revolver in his hip pocket. He was arrested at the Bowery and Doyers Street, Policeman Smith having been attracted there by three revolver shots.

Magistrate Freschi, sitting in the Jefferson Market Court, dismissed a Sullivan law charge against a pushcart man who was arrested for peddling without a license. When searched a razor was found in his waistcoat pocket. He pleaded that he kept it for shaving purposes.

Aniello Pigantaro, 30 years old, a watchman, of 213 First Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested last night at Brook Avenue and 133d Street, and locked up in the Alexander Avenue Police Station, the Bronx, charged with violating the section of the Sullivan law which makes it a felony for an unnaturalized foreigner to have a firearm. Piganțaro was defending the property of an asphalt company on 133d Street, between Brook and St. Ann Avenues. A band of youthful marauders were running off with some of the company's implements when Pigantaro fired in the air with an old pistol. The noise attracted Patrolman John Pierce. The boys got away.

The Grand Jury refused yesterday to indict James Parlemo, laborer of Huntington, L. I., who was arrested last Friday for buying a shotgun at a pawnshop at 18 Bowery. He was charged with violating the section of the new Sullivan gun law, which makes it a felony for an alien to carry a gun. He is the second man whom the Grand Jury has refused to indict on this charge.

KILLED IN DRUNKEN BRAWL.

Italian Shoots Compatriot and Wounds Another in New Boston, Conn.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BOSTON, Conn., Sept. 8.—Stanislaus Chimineski is dead and Tony Nobleson is dying from gunshot wounds which the police allege were inflicted by Randolph Brissette at this place. The police say that Brissette applied for admission at the boarding house, where the three men lived, and when refused because he was intoxicated, rang the door bell, then hid outside, and emptied on Chimineski and Nobleson the contents of his gun when they appeared to answer the bell. The men are mill workers.

The inquiry shows that the men had been drinking in the boarding house. In the party were five girls, to one of whom Randolph Brissette made himself objectionable, and she asked the boarding house keeper to have him put out. The men got Brissette as far as the door, where a fight started, and Brissette was put out. He went away threatening to get even, and returned with his gun.

After the shooting Brissette walked away and returned in a little while with another gun. He fired into the second-story window of the room where he had been drinking with the party. No one was hit. He was arrested.

SUES FOR HIS CHILD.

David Weiner Asks Arizona Court to Take Daughter Away from Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Nev., Sept. 8.—David Weiner, a wealthy New Yorker who has followed his wife across the continent for the purpose of getting their daughter out of her possession, began his battle for the child in the Supreme Court at Carson City to-day before Associate Justice Talbot. A writ of habeas corpus commanding her to appear in court and show cause why the child should not be restored to the custody of its father was served yesterday upon Mrs. Weiner, who came to Nevada some time ago for the purpose of filing suit for divorce.

Mrs. Weiner has been in hiding at Carson City for the past two weeks and officers of several Nevada counties have been looking for her. Yesterday she was seen to enter a Carson hotel and in a short time the papers, which were prepared at the request of Weiner when he came here two weeks ago, were served. A decision on the matter will be rendered by Judge Talbot later.

It appears that Weiner and his wife, Aimée Hatch Weiner, had domestic difficulties in New York. They took their troubles to court and an order was entered stipulating that the child should be in the custody of the mother one month and the father the next month. Last July Mrs. Weiner failed to deliver the child over to its father at the end of the month, and, it is said, came to Nevada to get a divorce, bringing the little girl with her.

MAD MONK PREDICTS ATTACKS ON JEWS

Heliodorus, Who Has Defied Russian Synod, Says They Will Follow Congress of Black Hundreds.

MENACES EDUCATED CLASS

Alarm in Tsaritsyn, Whence Authorities of Orthodox Church Have Sought in Vain to Dislodge Strange Enthusiast.

TSARITSYN, Russia, Sept. 8.—Heliodorus, the "Mad Monk of Tsaritsyn," to-day publicly declared that attacks upon Jews and the Russian educated classes would be begun after the holding of the forthcoming Congress of the Black Hundreds.

The declaration of the parish priest, whose fantastic methods have startled the whole Volga region, has created an impression of semi-panic in this city.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 8.—The Monk Heliodorus, though he is only 31 years old, has for some time wielded an enormous influence on the masses in the Volga region. He has appeared also in spite of his turbulent methods to enjoy the special protection of the Czar.

He is a learned monk, who has voluntarily given up learning and adopted the vulgar language and arguments of the masses in order to gain leadership over them. At Volhynia in the revolutionary years of 1905-06 he definitely embarked on his ultra-patriotic line, which has carried him to the summit of power. He organized the peasants in loyalist bands for the Czar and Fatherland, and contributed much to the failure of revolutionary endeavors in Volhynia.

For months past he has been a picturesque abitator along the Volga River, and although the secular clergy have been greatly shocked their protests against his methods have been in vain. In last February and March he and his parishioners successfully defied a decree of the church transferring him from Tsaritsyn. They barricaded themselves in the church and refused to partake of food or sleep until the order was rescinded. They were victorious, and the monk has continued his sensational religious campaign. In June he was received by the Emperor, and since his return to Tsaritsyn he has conducted himself like a fervent madman. "We must pray to God noisily," is his motto.

A fantastic pilgrimage of 1,500 persons, mostly women, under the leadership of Heliodorus, startled the entire Volga region this Summer and drew the popular attention to the "Mad Monk," as his previous exploits had done.

The objective of the pilgrimage was the Sarov Desert—the Russian Lourdes—where are the relics of St. Seraphim. The Czar and Czarina made a pilgrimage to Sarov in 1903, a year before the birth of their only son. So the place is well known and the following of Heliodorus was large, particularly among women who were childless. Maternal, patriotic, and worshipping instincts were all appealed to in organizing this crusade, which was designed to fan the religious flame in this important part of Russia. The fervent longings of the childless women and the unquestioning faith of every member of the band kept the pilgrims in a state of excitement that frequently led to hysterical outbursts.

Chartered a Steamer.

Pilgrims were easily enrolled up to the full capacity of the steamer chartered to convey them. They were divided in groups of fifty, each group in charge of a banner carrier. With knapsacks on their shoulders and pilgrim staffs in hand, they marched through the whole town of Tsaritsyn, singing alternately church and patriotic hymns. Heliodorus in a cassock with a red, white, and blue collar, (the national colors,) proudly led the procession. The whole town gathered at the landing stage to bid them farewell. Numerous parting sermons and exhortations keyed up the multitude to a high pitch.

"The revolutionists wished to travel up and down the Volga and bombard our cities," said Heliodorus, in defining the object of their pilgrimage, "but they met with failure. Our mission is to bombard these cities with the word of God and the shots of divine truth."

The pilgrimage progressed slowly up the river, breaking the journey frequently. A selected group of fifty or more of the best-looking young women generally landed first and marched at the head of the procession, followed by another group of specially good singers, with a view to immediate effect upon the Volga populace. At most towns the pilgrims were received by large crowds, and in a manner most satisfactory to the exacting Heliodorus. However reluctant to lend their countenance to so much street noise and downright rowdiness, priests, Bishops, and Governors, as if by an authoritative signal, did the "Mad Monk's" bidding. Venerable Bishops and Archbishops were overawed by him; Governors have been known to kiss his hand.

At all hours of the day and night entrance was obtained to cathedrals and churches, while Bishops and archpriests were dragged from their homes and forced to put on their vestments and celebrate solemn mass. Any failure or hesitation or delay in doing him homage evoked torrents of curses and imprecations from Heliodorus. He prophesied the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah to one hesitant town, and told another that had been slow in opening the doors of its church to his pilgrimage that Chinese cavalry would capture it. He capped his audacity by proclaiming Archbishop Jacob of Kazan anathema.

Complaints of the conduct of Heliodorus have been pouring in all month from the secular clergy that was thus terrorized. The Holy Synod, which has had unpleasant experiences with Heliodorus on two former occasions, is anxious enough to discipline the insubordinate monk, and even put him in a hospital, but a power greater than itself protects him. The famous episodes of last February and March, when Heliodorus and his parishioners fortified themselves in their church in Tsaritsyn and vowed not to eat, drink, or sleep, but to watch and pray till the order taking Heliodorus away from them be repealed, and the final victory of Heliodorus on that occasion over Synod, Procurator, and the Council of Ministers are well remembered and have had their effect on the fathers of the Church.

His Visit to the Czar.

On that occasion a final order was issued by the Synod removing the monk to Tula. Upon its presentation to the Czar by the former Procurator Lukianoff, his Majesty's displeasure was so indicated that the Synod met immediately and reversed its decision. A month later M. Lukianoff retired from office. When Heliodorus was received in audience by the Czar last June he took back with him a present of 30,000 small crosses, which the Empress had given him for distribution to his followers.

Since his return to Tsaritsyn, from the pilgrimage to Sarov, Heliodorus's doings and talk have bordered closely upon real madness. At his last open-air service and sermon, a life guard walked with Heliodorus, brandishing a big pistol. The banner-carrier carried a new standard, consisting of an enormous pole, with a shining steel axe and lance attached to it, the symbol of a new crusade. "Till now we have only menaced our enemies," preached the monk. "Henceforth we shall begin to shoot. It is a war to the death. Arise, orthodox Russian people, and raise the flag of revolt for the defense of our holy faith, of autocracy and of Russian brotherhood. Look out, Jews and Russian fools, Holy Russia is marching."

Up to the present time the only fruit of this inflammatory preaching has been the mobbing of persons for failing to remove their hats, or for skeptically smiling and laughing in the presence of Heliodorus. At one church square Heliodorus, when angered by the attitude of the spectators, ordered his pilgrims to raise their staffs, and the forest of sticks which were waved threateningly in the air quickly stilled the assembled crowd. Then Heliodorus, with a smile of triumph, ordered the staffs down.

Herein lies the reason why the idiosyncrasies of the "Mad Monk" are tolerated. In seeking a means to stir up the lower classes and gain an army of active sympathizers and loyalists, the ruling classes in Church and State feel vaguely that they need a man like Heliodorus to parry the insidious work of the anti-Government agitators. The State Church has devised no other weapon to meet the spread of dissidence than the canonization of new saints, with the attendant pilgrimages of hundreds of thousands. The activity of missionaries like Heliodorus, regardless of his rough methods, contains the germ of an upheaval of the orthodox masses. The policy is to reach the masses, through old and tried means, or newer and noisier ones, to strike the old responsive chords, and build upon their inexhaustible stock of faith.

Heliodorus has been successful more than any other man in his appeal to the masses, and there is little doubt of the readiness of hundreds of his followers to lay down their lives for him.

Three years ago Heliodorus first went to Tsaritsyn, where he became famous. He attracted enormous crowds to hear him preach. Crowds of desperadoes and a similar class of women flocked to hear him. Young, handsome, thin and pale, with waxlike fingers, and face transparent from long vigils, dressed in white vestments, and standing above the dirty crowds, "like an angel," he caught his people's hearts, and held them. His thin, nervous, penetrating voice, with a note of command, (for he is a Cossack of the Don by birth,) and his incisive, clever, fearless preaching against iniquity in high places and low, against drunkenness, filth, selfishness, and sordid rapaciousness of all kinds, were a new gospel to the crowds that surrounded him. Bargemen, porters, timber carriers, "the scum of the river," wept for their sins, and glorified in his "free speech."

On one occasion he declared from the pulpit: "I am accused of insubordination. I declare that, should the Government demand that I cease preaching the divine truth, I shall never obey. I declare holy war upon the Synod and the Government. Let them unfrock me and exile me where they will. I am ready to accept a thousand deaths. I ask you, brothers and sisters to do the same thing."

Such language, hysterical as it may seem, has a wonderful effect upon a populace which has come to look upon the speaker as a hero. Moreover, Heliodorus's ministry has not been fruitless of practical good. It is acknowledged that he has been successful in his fight on drunkenness. By dint of long daily services he has kept thousands of men away from the vodka shops until they conquered the habit.

CONDEMN RUSSIAN OFFICER.

Capt. Postnikoff of General Staff Sentenced for Selling Secret Documents.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 8.—A military court at a private sitting to-day tried and sentenced to eight years' penal servitude and a loss of his rights Capt. Postnikoff of the General Staff. The charge against him was selling secret documents to agents of three powers.

Capt. Postnikoff was President of the Universal League of Peace and the Russian Esperanto League. He frequently traveled abroad, and for a time sojourned in the United States. The case was oddly connected with recent sensational trials. The witnesses included Baron de Ungern Sternburg, former correspondent in St. Petersburg of the semi-official Austro-Hungarian news agency, who was sentenced to four years' imprisonment last November for delivering secret documents to a foreign state, and Mlle. Muse Zikke, a sister of the widow of Count Vassilli Bouturlin, who was poisoned by Dr. Pantchenko in 1910.

As a result of the conviction of Capt. Postnikoff the Government has closed the Esperanto League, which it declared to be a convenient screen for international spies.

HAD NO MONEY TO PAY DUTY.

Three Sisters Held for Smuggling Say They Spent It All Abroad.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 8.—Convinced of the truthfulness of their story that they were persuaded by merchants abroad to spend so much money that they had none left to pay duties Deputy Collector Ryan to-day released three women from Cincinnati, Ohio, who were detained here yesterday on a charge of smuggling.

It was alleged that they attempted to smuggle about $200 worth of jewelry and other dutiable goods into the country. The three women are Misses Anna, Marie, and Carrie Schueler, sisters, and they arrived on the steamer Koln from a visit to Germany. They signed an agreement to pay the fine, which will amount to about $600.

Marie Schueler said that for twenty-five years she has been a housekeeper, and that her wages were small. She had been saving her money, she said, for many years, looking forward to the trip to Germany, where her parents had lived. The other two sisters had stinted themselves to make the trip, and had worked hard as dressmakers to get the necessary money.

FINNISH PARTITION AGAIN.

Petitioners of Nikolaistad Asked to Wait Till Question Is Decided.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Sept. 8.—Gen. Langhof, Secretary of State for Finland, to-day replied to a letter addressed to him by citizens of Nikolaistad, the chief town of the Government of Vasa, in which they asked what steps Finland's representative of the throne had taken to avert the terrible danger of partition, which is agitating Finland.

The Secretary of State told the citizens to wait until the question of partitioning the country had been decided and to turn to him only if they then found grounds for protest.

MACHINE GUNS WON BATTLE.

Ex-Shah's Crushing Defeat Due to Persian Artillery Under German Command.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 8.—Supplementary reports received to-day by an official news agency from Teheran, Persia, establish that the outcome of the battle at Imanzadeh-Jafar Sept. 5, when the forces of the ex-Shah, Mohammed Ali Mirza, suffered a crushing defeat, was decided by the Government machine guns.

"MONA LISA" NOT FOUND.

Report of Discovery of Stolen Masterpiece in Spain Proves Untrue.

MADRID, Sept. 8.—The report published here yesterday that two men had been arrested at Leon with Leonardo da Vinci's painting "Mona Lisa," stolen from the Louvre, in their possession proved upon investigation to be untrue.

Press dispatches asserted that two foreigners had been discovered carrying in a basket a "Mona Lisa," which they protested was a mere copy of the masterpiece.

ASK GERMAN TARIFF CUT.

Berlin Chamber of Commerce Acts in View of High Prices.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—In view of the great increase in the cost of living, owing to the Summer's drought, the Berlin Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' Guild today petitioned the Government to reduce the tariff on grain, fodder, &c., by applying a special classification to these products, and to cut the duties on potatoes by 50 per cent., the new rates to be effective until Aug. 1, 1912.

CHINESE SACK AMERICAN CHAPEL

LOSSES HAVE BEEN HUGE

Meagre Reports from Interior Not Sufficient to Confirm Estimate of 100,000 Dead.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 8.—The famine riots in Changzoh are spreading, and the American Baptist Chapel near Quinsan has been sacked by a band of marauders from Suchau. With large areas under water the wretched populace is desperate in the face of prospective starvation. In the Shanghai market the visible supply of rice will last for about ten days.

PEKING, Sept. 8.—Only meagre reports have reached the capital from the walled towns in the region of the Yang-tse Valley, where the floods have hemmed in the missionaries and other foreigners. The report received by the American Mission at Wu-hu, estimating that 100,000 persons have been drowned by the water overflowing the banks of the Yang-tse River, has not yet been verified, but every account confirms the great extent of the disaster.

Travelers arriving by steamboat at Hankow from the upper reaches of the river report that many coffins, of a huge Chinese type, were encountered floating in the Yang-tse, which indicates that the waters are robbing the graves of former years to augment the number of dead bodies.

From Chang-teh, in the Province of Hu-nan, comes word that the receding water is being followed by pestilence. That district hardly contains a survivor who has not been affected by the scourge, and many are dying.

The Chinese Government is making preparations for the relief of a certain number of the flood sufferers. The International Relief Society, which will convene at Shanghai one week from to-day, will consider the question of extending its relief measures beyond the Provinces of Ngan-hwei and Kiang-su.

HANKOW, China, Sept. 8.—The floods resulting from the Yang-tse overflowing its banks, which transformed hundreds of miles of the river valley into an enormous lake, and caused a great loss of life, are gradually subsiding.

In addition to the heavy death list many thousands of natives have been made homeless and destitute.

The rice crop in the Provinces of Hu-peh and Hu-nan will probably be an average one, but other cereals have suffered heavily. The rice crop in Ngan-hwei, another province watered by the Yang-tse River, is of an exceptionally poor quality.

SULLIVAN MUST BE TRIED.

His Demurrer to Indictment in Bank Case Is Dismissed.

Judge Dike, sitting in the County Court, Brooklyn, yesterday overruled the demurrer of David A. Sullivan to an indictment charging him with forgery in the third degree, and decided that the ex-President of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank must stand trial. Sullivan's trial will take place early in October before Supreme Court Justice Crane.

More testimony about the strange financiering done in Sullivan's bank was given at the Union Bank hearing, resumed yesterday before Deputy Bank Superintendent Dodge. Otto E. Reimer, who was President of the Ashford Company, one of Sullivan's subsidiary concerns, testified of a case when a note for $87,000 was given to Sullivan by this company, and that the securities marked on the books as collateral were considered worthless.

George Tonkonogy, a Brownsville lawyer, who was attorney for the Atlantic Branch of Sullivan's bank, was again on the witness stand yesterday, and was asked about his bill against the bank of $55,000 for legal services. Mr. Cropsey forced the witness to admit that he had borrowed $25,000 from the bank, and that only $8,000 had been paid when the bank closed. Tonkonogy continued to pay his indebtedness to the bank, although he knew that his bill for services was far in excess of what he owed the institution. He did not think such a course strange. He said his claim was now in court, and he would tell all about it when the suit was tried.

The hearings will be resumed on Monday.

JUDGE WANTS MORE LIGHT.

Cross-Examinations Must Precede Decisions in Condon Bankruptcy Case.

Judge Hough refused to issue yesterday, without further hearing, an order in the United States District Court directing Payson Merrill, receiver in bankruptcy, to turn over to Martin J. Condon, Jr., 39,000 shares of the San Cristobal Mining Company, which were held as part of the assets of his bankrupt father, who was a Director in the Carnegie Trust Company. Condon contended that the stock was his, as he had paid $11,000 for it in 1905 or 1906. The deal, he alleged, was put through by his father with a man named Starbuck, and the shares were then deposited in the Third National Bank, Knoxville, Tenn.

Judge Hough was not contented to pass on the question of ownership merely on affidavits. He considered that the Condons ought to be cross-examined in the case, and this will be done by the referee, Macgrane Coxe, of 50 Church Street.

Judge Hough also denied yesterday a motion to declare William J. Cummins, another Director of the Carnegie Trust Company, a bankrupt.

SLEEPWALKER FALLS 40 FEET

Walks Out of Third Story Window and Will Probably Die.

Henry Butenschon, 62 years old, of Patchogue, L. I., was mortally injured yesterday morning when he fell forty feet out of a window in the third story of a house at 617 South Seventh Avenue, Mount Vernon. Butenschon had come from Patchogue the previous day to visit Mrs. M. Raub, the owner of the house, whom he was to marry this week.

Butenschon retired at a late hour to his room. His bed was placed close to the window, which is about three feet wide. It is believed while walking in his sleep he fell through the window to the ground below.

Irving Black, who lives on the second floor, was awakened by the moans of the injured man, and found Butenschon unconscious in the yard. At the Mount Vernon Hospital it was found that he was suffering from a fracture at the base of the skull, a compound fracture of the right thigh, and injuries to the right eye.

SLIDE DOWN PIKE'S PEAK.

Two Men Make the Trip in 5 Minutes and 37 Seconds.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 8.—R. O. Green of New York and M. H. Hayden of Detroit yesterday "shot Pike's Peak" on a railroad "toboggan"—a greased board with cleats that fit over the cog rail of the mountain railroad. Starting from a point above the Halfway House, they reached Manitou, at the base of the peak, a distance of about five miles, in five minutes and thirty-seven seconds.

"Shooting the Peak" was more or less common sport some years ago, but was stopped by the officials of the cog road because, as the management put it, "the fool killer got on the job too often."

GOVERNORS ON SUFFRAGE.

Those of States in Which Women Vote Will Speak at Cooper Union.

Platform seats for the big meeting to be held at Cooper Union Saturday evening, Sept. 16, at which the Governors of the woman suffrage States will tell of conditions where women vote, are in great demand. Mrs. Mackay has sent $25 for two seats, Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., $15 for two, and Mrs. Henry Wise Miller, Mr. and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Edward Lauterbach, Rollo Ogden, Mrs. John Calvin Day, Miss Maud Ingersoll, Prof. and Mrs. Charles Beard, Mrs. Edward Einstein, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hervey, and Miss Helen Kinne, head of the Domestic Science Department of Teachers College, have also taken tickets.

Gov. John F. Shafroth of Colorado, Gov. J. H. Hawley of Idaho, and Gov. Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming will speak, and the Governors of Washington and Utah will attend if they are not detained by business. The price of the platform tickets is $1 and admission will be 25 cents up to 8 o'clock, when all seats will be free. The meeting is under the auspices of the Woman's Political Union, which has its headquarters at 46 East Twenty-ninth Street.

During the week previous to the meeting representatives of the union will attend the convention of Governors and Mrs. John Winters Brannan will present a report of the political status of women in the various States, compiled by Miss Bertha Rembaug. Mrs. Archibald Alexander of Castle Point, Mrs. Van Winkle of Newark, and Mrs. Walston Brown, Mrs. A. F. Townsend, and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., of New York will also attend.

Miss Eleanor Brannan and Miss Caroline Lexow left New York yesterday for Syracuse, where they will assist at the opening of a suffrage tent, one of the largest on the grounds, which will occupy a place on one of the main thoroughfares at the State Fair that is to be opened on Monday. Over the tent will fly a mammoth flag in purple, green and white, the colors of the Woman's Political Union. Suffrage souvenirs on sale will be one of the attractions of the tent. A large shipment of these has come over from England.

Mrs. Pierce Bailey, Mrs. Rheta Child Dorr of New York City, and Mrs. Anna Cadogan Etz of Hornell, N. Y., will be among the speakers. Miss Brannan, a daughter of Mrs. John Winters Brannan, has just returned from England, where she had been selling papers in Piccadilly.

PLAN TRAVELING MISSION.

A Large Band of Evangelists Will Traverse the Country Before May.

A movable religious college with a Faculty that goes from city to city is to hold its initial session in the Broadway Tabernacle in Fifty-sixth Street, on Sept. 18. Immediately afterward the Faculty will start to open its first college institute in St. Paul, Minn. Its aims are to spread information about the various lines of Christian effort and to increase if possible the membership in Protestant churches by 3,000,000 men and boys.

The organization taking part in the campaign are the Y. M. C. A., the Sunday School Associations, and the Brotherhoods of all of the Protestant bodies. Before next May it is hoped that lecture courses will be held in upward of one hundred principal cities lasting for one week each, and subsidiary courses in hundreds of smaller cities.

Among the members of the traveling mission are Charles A. Barbour, Charles R. Drum, and Fred S. Goodman of the Y. M. C. A., the Rev. Charles Stelzle of the Labor Temple, J. L. Alexander, who was lately with the Boy Scouts; W. C. Pearce, from the International Sunday School Association; William A. Brown, Roy B. Guild, James A. Whitmore, A. H. Bruner, John Dean, Warren L. Bunger, Dr. I. J. Lansing, the Rev. W. E. Deiderworlf, W. R. Lane, and David Russell.

LETTER BOX AS DEPOSIT BANK

Clerk Was Absentminded, but Book and Money Were Recovered.

William Schauffler, a letter carrier attached to Post Office Station S, Broadway and Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, was astonished yesterday afternoon when he opened the mailbox at Broadway and Halsey Street to find therein a bankbook with $180 in real money sticking out from between its pages.

Schauffler took this unusual bit of "mail matter" to the station, where it was claimed by the realty firm of Friday & Lehmann of 962 Halsey Street.

A clerk of the firm, on his way to the bank to deposit the money, had stopped at the mailbox to post some letters. Absentmindedly he had dropped in the bankbook with the bills, and then had gone on to the bank with the letters.

NICE RESTAURANT CRASH KILLS ELEVEN

SIXTEEN BADLY INJURED

Accident That Happened Early Yesterday Attributed to Hurried Work on Reinforced Concrete Structure.

NICE, France, Sept. 8.—The restaurant connected with the El Dorado, the largest theatre in Nice, collapsed this morning, burying a number of Italian workmen in the débris. Late to-night eleven dead and sixteen severely injured persons had been taken from the ruins by the firemen and soldiers, but it was feared that other persons still remained beneath the wreckage.

The building was in course of reconstruction, and while the cause of the disaster has not yet been definitely ascertained, it is alleged that the work, in which reinforced concrete was used, was being hurried by the contractors, who were liable to a heavy fine for each day they exceeded the contract time for finishing the structure.

The collapse occurred at 10 o'clock this morning while the work was in full swing. A few of the workmen near the windows heard the first rending of timbers above them and leaped to the street, escaping with slight injuries. Those in the interior, however, had no chance to get out, as the entire roof collapsed and carried them down beneath it. Several of these men were taken out shortly afterward, but died after receiving the last rites of the Church, administered by a priest who chanced to be passing.

The walls of the restaurant are so weakened by the accident that it is feared they will fall. The authorities have ordered an expert investigation of the disaster, in the hope of placing the responsibility for it.

ONE PARTNER GONE, BROKERS SUSPEND

D. M. Ferguson of L. B. Wilson & Co. Accused of Getting Away with $35,000.

ACCOUNTS ARE FALSIFIED

Some of the Firm's Securities Also Missing—Wilson Tries to Save the Firm, but Fails.

Defalcations to the amount of $35,000 threw the Consolidated Exchange firm of L. B. Wilson & Co. of 60 Wall Street, which did a large business on the "Little Board," into the hands of a receiver yesterday afternoon.

L. B. Wilson, senior member of the partnership, says the failure was due directly to the falsification of accounts and the hypothecation of the firm's securities by D. M. Ferguson, the junior partner. Wilson said also that Ferguson had not been seen by him since last Tuesday, and could not be found. He said he had sworn out no warrant for his partner, but that the police had been notified of the defalcation and of the disappearance of Ferguson.

The first intimation, according to Wilson, that all was not right came just before midday last Saturday. A customer sent in a protest that his statement from the firm was not correct. Ferguson was in the room at the time, and, Wilson says, remarked in off-hand manner:

"That's all right; turn it over to me and I'll fix it up."

The statement was given him, no more was thought of it, and the office closed at noon.

Ferguson did not appear on Monday, and nothing was heard from him. When he did come on Tuesday, however, an accountant began an examination of the firm's books. Even a cursory investigation, Wilson says, disclosed the fact that Ferguson had for months been in the habit of receiving customers' money for investment and substituting statements in his own handwriting for those issued by the firm's bookkeepers, thereby enabling him to pocket considerable sums due from the firm to the customer. While such substitutions could only be made, Wilson declares, in cases where the customer had asked that his statement be retained in the office until called for, there were enough such customers to enable the junior partner to appropriate to his own use about $15,000.

Approximately $20,000 in cash additional, Wilson says, was obtained by Ferguson by borrowing the firm's securities and hypothecating them.

Wilson says he has made a desperate struggle since finding out the firm's condition to borrow enough money to keep the business afloat, and on finding that impossible because of the uncertainty of the extent of the losses, he immediately applied for a receiver so that there should be no preferential creditors.

Charles F. Bishop, 57 Wall Street, was appointed receiver, and shortly after he took charge of the business Wilson posted this notice on his bulletin board in the customers' room:

> It is with deepest regret and mortification that I have to announce that we are unable to meet our obligations in full, at least, at the present moment. After a record without a blemish or question for nine years as partner here it has come to my attention that D. M. Ferguson of this firm was heavily indebted to the firm, and has falsified our customers' account, and could not be found.
>
> I have in the few hours made every effort personally to raise sufficient funds to assume these shortages myself, but have so far been unable to do so, uncertainty as to the extent the firm's credit may have been used preventing what ordinarily would have been a simple matter.
>
> The assignment is made promptly to avoid favoritism in withdrawals as the facts became known. I am confident that, with careful handling and realizing on all assets, and if representation believed by me as to Ferguson's outside equities are true, a very full settlement can be made.
>
> All stocks bought by us have been handled in good faith, and are on hand in bank loans or loans to other members. No stocks paid for here have been hypothecated.
>
> I will do everything in my power to aid in a full valuation of all assets and a quick settlement. L. B. WILSON.

Wilson said Ferguson was once private secretary to a Western railway President, and later was employed by a Stock Exchange firm. The name of this firm Wilson would not give. He said Ferguson was about 40 years old, and a widower, his wife having died about two years and a half ago. He has one son about 20 years old who is said not to be in the city at present. Ferguson, according to Wilson, has a Summer home at Maplewood, N. J., but the house has been closed all Summer, and Wilson says he does not know where Ferguson has been living lately.

A customer of the firm, who said he was among the seventy-five or hundred persons hit by the failure, said he had known Ferguson a number of years, and that he was sober in his habits, and not given to a showy manner of living. He had, however, been a changed man since the death of his wife. He had taken frequent vacations of late years, always, however, with the knowledge of his partner.

At Police Headquarters it was said that no report had been made there of the disappearance of Ferguson, or of any defalcation of L. B. Wilson & Co.'s funds.

SUES FOR WIFE'S AFFECTIONS

B. Gersen Oppenheim, Jr., Declares His Wife's Father Wrecked His Marriage.

B. Gersen Oppenheim, Jr., a son of the lawyer of that name, has brought suit against Harley Peyton Wilson of H. P. Wilson, bankers, of Wall Street, for alienation of young Mrs. Oppenheim's affections. Mrs. Oppenheim was Miss Alice Atherton Wilson, daughter of Mr. Wilson, and was married in Baltimore last September.

Mr. Wilson, in his reply, denies that he exerted any influence over his daughter after her marriage, though that had been clandestine, after young Oppenheim had enticed his daughter to Baltimore without his knowledge. The girl was only 16 years old at the time, and was in poor health. Whatever he had done since the marriage, said Mr. Wilson, was inspired by a desire to see that his daughter's mental and physical condition was properly cared for.

He asserts that young Oppenheim tried to borrow money from his wife and from him (Mr. Wilson), and that Oppenheim voluntarily separated from his wife, declaring that he couldn't and wouldn't support her. The father charges also that while his daughter was with her husband he submitted her to contemptuous and abusive treatment, and that, if she left him, it was because of his neglect and ill treatment.

CANCELS CHARITY BEQUEST.

Abraham Cohn in a Codicil Withdraws $20,000 Legacy to Institutions.

By a codicil to his will, filed in the Surrgates' office yesterday, Abraham Cohn, a tobacco merchant, who died at West End, N. J., on Aug. 30, withdrew a bequest of $20,000, which he had made to charitable institutions, and also two bequests of $20,000 each to his sisters, Fannie Leopold and Katie Ettenheimer. The withdrawal of the last two bequests was made, it was said, because of the death of his sisters.

Mr. Cohn, whose home was at 64 East Sixty-sixth Street, left the house and its contents, together with $100,000 outright, to his wife, Mamie, and directed that his executors should close out his share of the business of A. Cohn & Co. of 142 Water Street.

To two sons and two daughters he left $20,000 each, and directed that the remainder of his estate should be held in trust for his wife, and at her death be divided equally among his children.

SAYS HIS SONS BEAT HIM.

Wealthy Merchant Causes Their Arrest and Search of Daughter's Home.

Otto J. Schultz, a dealer in antique furniture, of 803 Sixth Avenue, who has a residence at Palisades Park, N. J., caused the arrest yesterday of his sons, Otto J., Jr., and Robert, charging them with assault and battery. He also caused Justice E. M. Johnson, of Hackensack, to issue a search warrant against his daughter, Minnie, the wife of Henry Zellmaer, asserting that she had hidden a valuable silver service and a diamond sunburst worth $1,200, which belong to him. The silverware was recovered by Constables Dawson and Nestel, but Mrs. Zellmaer, though admitting possession of the diamonds, said her lawyer had instructed her not to give them up.

Mr. Schultz, who is a widower, 65 years old, told Justice Johnson that his entire family was conspiring to get rid of him, and was planning to have him declared insane. He was opposed to the recent wedding of his daughter, who made the acquaintance of Zellmaer, an assistant purser, on a voyage from Holland. The aged furniture dealer, who has been in business on Sixth Avenue forty years, and amassed a fortune after starting with less than $100, says that his sons brutally attacked him, one holding his hands while the other beat him about the face. Often, he told Justice Johnson and his counsel, E. C. Irion, he has been compelled to start for business in the morning without a bite to eat, his children refusing to provide for him. He will now proceed, he says, to have the children put out of the house.

Robert Schultz and Mrs. Zellmaer, when asked about the charges made against them, refused to discuss them. Mrs. Zellmaer told the constables, however, that her father gave her the diamond sunburst, and that she intends to retain it. The children have engaged W. B. Mackay, Jr., of Hackensack, as their counsel. Otto J. Schultz, Jr., is said to be part owner with his father in the furniture business.

FOR CLEANER STREETS.

Dr. Hornaday to Ask the Mayor to End the Paper Strewing Nuisance.

An agitation to keep the streets of the city free of waste paper and rubbish has been started by Dr. W. T. Hornaday, director of the Bronx Zoological Park. Having partly succeeded in getting the Zoo fairly relieved of the nuisance, he intends to interest Mayor Gaynor, if he can, and have as much done for the outside city. He told some friends yesterday that he had intended writing to the Mayor about it, but had decided to go to see him intead, and suggest if agreeable that Police Commissioner Waldo be consulted about the enforcement of city ordinances by arresting every man guilty of throwing a piece of paper or any rubbish in the street or in a vacant lot.

"It is entirely practical to keep the streets free of litter," said Dr. Hornaday to a TIMES reporter, when asked what he intended to suggest to the Mayor, "just as it was found practical to enforce the law against spitting in street cars and corridors. Arrests were made, without discrimination, and a close watch was kept. This soon put an end to the practice, and the public health and sensibilities were spared.

"Our littered streets are an eyesore. I believe the city is spending $500,000 a year in removing waste paper and rubbish from the streets, which should never be thrown there. The only way to stop it is to have the police watch out and arrest every offender. The city magistrates should be interested in the crusade at the start, so that they would be inclined to punish every offender brough before them. Just take a look at the vacant lots in the Bronx. They are an abomination.

"We have had a good deal of trouble here in the Zoological Park, and we have it yet, but we have overcome it largely by putting baskets and boxes for waste paper and refuse every few hundred feet through the grounds, and we have posted signs in conspicuous places asking our visitors not to throw anything on the walks or the grass, but to look about for the catch baskets. The city could do that much to encourage clean streets. It should have signs out and well kept boxes for waste paper and rubbish at short distances along the sidewalks, and attention should be called to them on posted notices."

TO PREVENT DEBTOR'S EXIT.

Creditors of M. A. Verdi Got Writ, Fearing He Would Leave Country.

Michael A. Verdi, a coal dealer of 418 West 121st Street, was arrested yesterday by United States Marshal Henkel on a writ forbidding his leaving the country, issued by Judge Holt in the Federal District Court, on complaint of creditors. He was committed to Ludlow Street Jail in default of $5,000 bail. He was at one time President of the Baresi Coal Company, and his creditors allege that he disposed of his property for the purpose of defrauding them.

Orlando P. Metcalf was appointed receiver in his case on Aug. 28, with a bond of $2,000, and in a bankruptcy petition it was alleged that Verdi had made preferential transfers of real estate in Brooklyn and at Briarwood and Bayside Park, Queens.

RECEIVER FOR THE WIDOW.

Court Obliges a Supposed Backer Whose $2,608 Debt Is Unpaid.

Justice Goff appointed Robert W. Maloney receiver for the Widow Publishing Company yesterday, in sequestration proceedings brought on behalf of Nathan Rudd. The Widow Publishing Company is practically Theresa Dean, who once ran a column in Town Topics and afterward branched out with her own publication.

Rudd, who it is said was partly the backer of the enterprise, sued her for $2,608, and on July 21 got a judgment for this amount. An execution was issued and returned unsatisfied.

ABOLISHING A FEDERAL COURT

After Jan. 1 the District Court Will Do All That Circuit Court Does Now.

On Jan. 1 the Federal Courts will be reorganized in accordance with the Federal Judiciary act passed a few months ago. At present there are the District Court with jurisdiction in admiralty and bankruptcy cases, the Circuit Court, which has both a criminal and a civil branch, and the Circuit Court of Appeals, above which is only the Supreme Court.

The Circuit Court will now be abolished and all cases which have come before it heretofore will be brought before the District Court. Consequently the judicial system will be simplified, so that there will be merely three courts, in a regular order of progression, the District, the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Supreme Court. It is hoped in this way that much confusion that has occurred at times among lawyers, who are seldom called upon to practice at the Federal bar, will be obviated.

Needs of a Poor Widow's Family.

Two weeks ago the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities appealed for $100 to help a widow who was struggling to support her four young children and her old father. In answer to the appeal $17 was received. If enough money is not received to pension this family for a few months, the children will have to be committed to an institution, and the old father to the Almshouse. Send contributions to the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, 69 Schermerhorn Street, marked 0,141.

Lumber Trust Defendants Excused.

Judge Lacombe issued an order in the United States Circuit Court yesterday permitting counsel for 134 of the 150 defendants in the suit brought against the Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association for a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, to file unsigned answers. The defendants, who are thus excused from signing court papers, are residents of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Maryland.

HIS WIFE OR NOT, SHE WANTS DIVORCE

LIKE TRIAL MARRIAGE TEST

Reads the Record of Mr. Benrimo, Actor, and Mr. Tysen, Broker, and Their Paths Have Crossed.

Supreme Court Justice Goff signed an order yesterday which probably will bring into the light once more a series of the strangest divorce tangles which ever clogged the courts. The order was one appointing J. Campbell Thompson referee to hear testimony in the suit for divorce brought against Joseph H. Benrimo, the actor, by Helen Robertson Benrimo. It is the matrimonial adventures and misadventures not only of Benrimo but of Robert F. Tysen, a wealthy retired broker, as well, on which the present case will probably throw more light.

It was in 1876, years before he ever heard of Benrimo, that Tysen married Miss Ida Rowe, a society débutante. For sixteen years they lived together. In 1892 Mrs. Tysen went to South Dakota and got a divorce. In the same year Mrs. William Pollock obtained a divorce and thereupon married Tysen. Pollock, not a bit behind, married Mrs. William Kernochan.

It was not until seven years later that Benrimo took the step which was to bring him into the tangle. Then he married Miss Fay Lewis in Detroit and went to live with her at her parents' home in that city. While he and his bride were honeymooning Mrs. Pollock-Tysen divorced Mr. Tysen. For three years Mr. Tysen remained single, while Mr. Benrimo and his bride lived together in happiness.

Then, in 1902, Mrs. Benrimo came here and divorced her actor-husband. Benrimo was served by publication and never entered a defense. A year later Mrs. Benrimo became Mr. Tysen's third wife. Benrimo went abroad and there made the acquaintance of Helen Robertson, an actress.

In 1906 he and Miss Robertson were married. Three years later Benrimo was thrown into the greatest anxiety by the sudden suit of Mr. Tysen to have his third marriage annulled on the ground that his wife never had been legally divorced from Benrimo. If this were so, then Benrimo and Miss Robertson also were illegally yoked and the actor hurried into court, declaring that he was an interested party to the suit since its outcome must affect his own standing.

Until 1910 the question remained unsettled. Then the suit was dismissed in the Supreme Court, leaving Benrimo happy in the assurance that he had been legally divorced and consequently was legally married. But the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court added its share to the tangle by deciding that the annulment suit had been dismissed improperly and that consequently Tysen was entitled to a retrial.

Since this decision in November last there had been no new development in the situation until yesterday, when Justice Goff made his order. Now Mrs. Benrimo, second, for whom Benrimo fought the Tysen annulment case, is suing the actor for divorce, naming a co-respondent whose name as yet is kept secret.

DENIES ATTACK ON BARNES.

Controller Prendergast Satisfied with His Fight Against Charter.

Controller Prengergast explained yesterday that he did not refer to William Barnes, Jr., the Republican boss of Albany, when he stated on Wednesday that he was in favor of drumming out of the party those Republican legislators who made a deal with Democratic legislators to put through the new City Charter at the present session of the Legislature.

"I have learned," said Mr. Prendergast, "that the comment which I made yesterday upon reported pledges by Republican legislators to vote for the Gaynor-Tammany Charter has been construed as an attack upon the integrity of purpose of Republican State Chairman William Barnes. No such thought was in my mind, nor can any such construction be fairly put upon what I said.

"I believe that Mr. Barnes is doing everything in his power to defeat the passage of the proposed Charter. I believe that he will show unusual intelligence and ability in his management of the affairs of the State organization, and have every confidence that he will insist upon maintenance of the highest and best standards of the Republican Party.

"When I referred yesterday to reported pledges by Republican legislators I had specifically in mind Senators Argetsinger, Ornrod, Walters, and Emerson. If these men or any others have pledged themselves to vote for the Gaynor-Tammany Charter I know that they have done so without the knowledge of State Chairman Barnes, and that such pledges are a very grave embarrassment to him. I sincerely hope that these legislators will declare promptly that the report concerning them is false."

AUTO HITS BOY AT PLAY.

Companions Got Number as It Sped On, and Chauffeur Is Caught.

Four boys were playing "cat" with a stick and a whittled piece of wood in Lenox Avenue, between 113th and 114th Streets, yesterday afternoon when one of them chasing the "puck" ran in front of a red touring car and was run over. He was Samuel Garfinkel, the 14-year-old son of Morris Garfinkel, a clothing merchant of 67 West 113th Street.

His companions, Norman Goldberg, 14 years old, of 72 West 118th Street; Sidney Brown of 86 West 118th Street, and Koffman Peyser of 39 West 113th Street, got the number of the car, "9,919 N. Y." They picked up their injured playmate and took him to a drug store until a Harlem Hospital ambulance arrived. Dr. Baker found the boy's right leg fractured.

Mr. Garfinkel notified the police of the East 104th Street Station, and Detectives Walsh and Maccini found that the car belonged to Peter Doelger, the brewer, of 339 West 100th Street. They arrested August Newman of 181 East Seventy-fifth Street, the chauffeur, on a charge of felonious assault. Newman said he did not know he had run over the boy.

Automobilists have frequently complained that the police do not enforce the ordinances against ball playing and "cat" playing on the avenue thoroughfares of Harlem, so that the operation of cars on the avenue is always at the risk of running over children so intent on their games that they neglect to look out for passing vehicles.

TWO THIEVES SHOT IN PARK.

They Were Hawks, and Were Seen, Red-Clawed, Carrying Off Ducks.

Two thieves, who for the last five months have been stealing small ducks and swans from the lake in Central Park, near Fifty-ninth Street, were shot and killed last night by Head Keeper "Billy" Snyder, who had secreted himself in a clump of bushes near by. A third thief escaped, carrying away a small duck. The thieves were hawks, and the two that were killed weighed five pounds each.

Small ducks and swans have been disappearing from the lake with alarming rapidity for the last five months, and all efforts to catch the thieves had failed. Last evening Head Keeper Snyder, with an old automatic shot gun, lay in wait. Just before dusk three large specks appeared over the lake. The specks finally developed into three large New Jersey hawks. One of them suddenly swooped into the lake and reappeared with a small duck in its claws. Then Snyder fired.

PATIENT FALLS FROM TRAIN.

Jersey Doctor Doesn't Miss Him Until He Reached Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—Starting from High Bridge, N. J., yesterday morning with a patient to be treated here for an injured leg, Dr. S. F. Lowe was surprised on his arrival in Philadelphia to discover that his patient had disappeared from the train en route. After a day and a night spent in eager inquiries, the patient was discovered in a dying condition in the Jewish Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull, fractures of both legs, and internal injuries, sustained when he fell off the train near this city.

The injured man, who is Huntington Thomas, 30 years old, a business man of High Bridge, was discovered, bleeding and unconscious, on the tracks of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway by a track walker. He was immediately conveyed to the hospital.

To-day Dr. Lowe entered the hospital and declared that he had read the description of the injured man in the newspapers and believed him to be the missing patient. Thomas, still unconscious, was shown to him and immediately identified.

Dr. Lowe stated that Thomas left him to go into the smoking car, in the rear of the train. It is believed that while in the smoking car Thomas walked to the back platform to get some fresh air and fell from the train when it turned a curve.

ARTIST EZRA WINTERS WEDS.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAM, Mich., Sept. 8.—Ezra Winters of this village, the 24-year-old Michigan farmer-artist who with his oil painting "The Arts" recently won a ten-thousand-dollar prize, partly given by J. Pierpont Morgan, has announced his marriage to the girl who posed for several figures in his painting.

She is Miss Vera J. Burnett of Chicago, known as one of the most beautiful artists' models in that city.

The couple were married three weeks ago. After a visit in Detroit they will leave for Rome on their honeymoon, the expense of which will be paid partly by the Morgan prize. The couple will be banqueted in New York by the Art Academy, in honor of the painter's success in winning the prize.

TWO DROWN AS BOAT UPSETS

G. S. Baxter and Miss Seager Lose Their Lives in Lake Onondaga.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 8.—George S. Baxter, Assistant Secretary of the New York State Underwriters' Association, and Miss Ella Seager, both very well known, were drowned in Onondaga Lake last night.

They went out in a rowboat and their boat capsized during the storm. It was not until this morning that the accident was dicovered. The upturned boat was found with the girl's body caught under it by a rope. The body of Baxter has not yet been recovered.

Baxter was 30 years old and Miss Seager 26. The accident occurred near the Onondaga Yacht Clubhouse, from where the couple started for a row at 7:30 o'clock last night.

Sues Interborough for Sister's Death.

Fitzroy D'Arcy, as administrator of the estate of his sister, Miss Violet D'Arcy, who was killed in the Twenty-third Street Subway station on Jan. 22 last, has brought suit for damages in $25,000 against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Miss D'Arcy leaned from the uptown platform to peer down the tracks. Because of an accident the Interborough was running its downtown trains on the uptown tracks. One of these struck her on the back of the head.

BOY BANK ROBBER FLEES FROM SHOTS

CAUGHT BY POSSE IN STABLE

Special to The New York Times.

LAUREL, Md., Sept. 8.—John W. Morgan, a seventeen-year-old youth of Mojare, Cal., attempted to hold up the Citizens' National Bank to-day, but was scared off by Cashier G. W. Waters, Jr. Morgan was captured by a posse this evening in a hay loft in the stable of Charles Cooper.

Harry A. Black, a merchant, was standing at the receiving teller's window after having made a deposit, when he was surprised to see a masked man at his side, with a pistol in one hand and a small bag in the other. Morgan pointed the pistol at Receiving Teller A. R. Bevans and, extending the bag with the other hand, said:

Teller Bevans was surprised and nonplussed, and his hesitation caused the robber to call on him to "get a move on." Mr. Bevans reached for a wallet containing the discount notes and dropped it in the bag.

Cashier Waters grabbed an automatic revolver from his desk and fired two shots through the wire screen at the robber. Morgan returned the fire and ran out of the bank. He left his mask behind him on the floor. Mr. Waters fired several shots at the fleeing youth, but the shots went wild.

A stranger, supposed to be a confederate, who was standing near the bank, started to move away, but he was captured, and as he could give no account of himself, was locked up.

Once out of the bank, Morgan leaped over fences and finally sought cover in the Cooper stable. When captured he admitted the attempt at robbery, and when asked why he did it, replied:

"I had only 15 cents and needed the money."

Morgan said that he had boarded a blind baggage car at his home and ridden to Washington on it. He refused to give any further information about himself.

NO IMMUNITY FOR SMITH.

Although it was stated on behalf of the Dreier family that they would not prosecute Edward Trumbull Smith, the artist, who married Katherine Dreier in spite of the alleged fact that he had already a wife in England, District Attorney Clarke of Brooklyn said yesterday that it was not his intention to drop the prosecution. According to a statement of Miss Mary Dreier's secretary, who seemed to speak with authority, the Dreier family preferred that Smith should return to his wife in England.

Mr. Clarke said that he had written to the London police asking them to make an effort to get the wife to come here and testify before the Kings County Grand Jury.

PURSUE REYBURN INQUIRY.

Charges of Bathhouse Graft Again Called Political Move.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—More alleged irregularities in the letting of contracts by the Department of Public Safety for public bathhouses were revealed at to-day's session of the State Senatorial Commission which is investigating the charges of "gross misconduct in the administration of Mayor Reyburn." The assertion made yesterday by Henry Clay, Director of the Department of Public Safety, that the present proceedings were instituted by certain political leaders to "club" him into line for their candidate for Mayor, was reiterated to-day by J. R. K. Scott, his counsel. Mayor Reyburn and Director Clay are supporting William S. Vare for the Republican Mayoralty nomination, and United States Senator Penrose and State Senator J. P. McNichol, accused by Mr. Clay of inspiring the investigation, are backing the candidacy of George H. Earle, Jr.

It was indicated at the hearing to-day that a contract for work in League Island Park held by State Senator Edwin H. Vare, brother of the Mayoralty candidate, will be investigated next week.

Two bathhouses were the subject of to-day's investigation. Counsel for the commission called witnesses to prove that specifications handed to prospective bidders had been changed materially in favor of the successful bidder after the contract had been awarded. It was testified that material and work in one bathhouse were so changed as to reduce the cost of construction by $7,000. One witness testified that a bathhouse built on the altered specifications could have been erected for $16,000, whereas the city paid $25,850 for its construction.

Members of the Police Bureau were notified to-night to ignore subpoenas from the Investigating Committee. An order to this effect was read at roll call by the various Police Lieutenants by order of Director of Public Safety Clay.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 8.—With Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Gen. J. Warren Keifer, Rear Admiral Charles E. Clark, Col. Henry Watterson, Myron T. Herrick, Richmond P. Hobson, and seventy other dignitaries aboard, the Ohio naval reserve ship Dorothea steamed out of here to-day bound for Put-in-Bay, where the National Perry Centennial Commission and commissions representing nine different States will meet to consider plans in connection with the holding of the Perry Centennial Sept. 8, 9, and 10, 1913.

Former Judge Inspects Local Courts.

One of the callers on Chief Justice Russell of Special Sessions yesterday was ex-Judge James H. Macomber of Omaha, Neb. The two met for the first time on a recent ocean trip from Maine, where they had been spending their vacations. After inspecting the courts in the Criminal Court Building Mr. Macomber sat on the bench through several cases with Judge Foster of General Sessions.

GARY MAYOR HELD ON BRIBERY CHARGE

HEAT FRANCHISE INVOLVED

Man Who Got the Grant Declares He Paid the Mayor $5,000 for It.

GARY, Ind., Sept. 8.—Thomas E. Knotts, Mayor of Gary, and Walter Gibson, Councilman, were arrested to-day by Deputy Sheriffs on charges of accepting and soliciting bribes for a heating franchise.

Later five other city officials, namely, City Engineer C. A. Williston, Councilmen Antony Baukus, Dominick Szymanski, John Simiasko and Emerson L. Bowser, and Bolice, son of Councilman Szymanski were arrested and taken to the county jail at Crown Point.

Mayor Knotts said there was absolutely no ground for his arrest.

Mayor Knotts was arrested in the City Hall just after T. B. Dean, who signed the affidavit, came from the executive's office with the heating franchise in his pocket. Dean alleges he paid the Mayor $5,000. Before entering the Mayor's office Dean had himself searched by four persons as a proof that he had the $5,000 on his person when he entered Mayor Knotts's office. On leaving the room he had himself searched again. He told the deputies to serve the warrant and they would find the money in an envelope in a pigeon hole in Mayor Knotts's desk. The warrant was served and Mayor Knotts was released on $5,000 bond, furnished by his brother, A. F. Knotts, former Mayor of Hammond, Ind.

T. B. Dean, who received the heating franchise and filed the affidavits, came here from Richmond, Ky., to obtain the franchise six months ago. In speaking of the arrests, he said that after consulting a Chicago lawyer a plan was made to obtain evidence when he found that the franchise would cost him money. He stated that dictagraphs had been connected up in his room at the hotel and also that one had been installed even in the Mayor's private office.

Bunger took the child to the Bedford Avenue Police Station, and an ambulance was summoned from the Williamsburg Hospital. Dr. Eckert said the girl was dying. She had been exposed for hours. The police have not learned her identity.

COLLEGE GOLFERS SHOW POOR FORM

Gardner, Seckel, Stanley, and Heyburn Play Through to the Semi-Finals.

Four players remain in the intercollegiate individual championship tournament at the Baltusrol Golf Club—Robert A. Gardner and George Stanley of Yale, Albert Seckel of Princeton, and Harry Heyburn, representing the University of Pennsylvania. They will meet as named in the semi-finals to-day. Speculation as to the ultimate outcome is rife, for the reason that Gardner and Seckel are about equal favorites. These well-known Western amateurs have met six times in tournaments this season, and honors are even, each having three wins and as many defeats to his credit.

Thus far this week the golf of the collegians has not been up to the past standard. It has been good in spots. As an illustration, Gardner, playing against B. W. Estabrook of Harvard in the first round, went out in 38, getting 3s at the third, sixth, and ninth holes. The Westerner then developed a wildness off the tee that might have proved disastrous under ordinary conditions. His 38 out, however, gave Gardner a lead 6 up, more than necessary to discount his subsequent ragged playing. He won by a 5 and 4 margin.

Later on Gardner lost no time in taking the measure of C. P. Eddy of Princeton. A weakness in approaching always left Eddy with the most to do on the greens, and, as his putting also failed, the situation soon became hopeless. Gardner won by 7 and 6.

The summary:

Championship, First Round.—R. A. Gardner, Yale, beat B. W. Estabrook, Harvard, 5 up and 4 to play; C. P. Eddy, Princeton, beat W. V. Booth, Harvard, 5 up and 4 to play; George Stanley, Yale, beat H. B. Lee, Yale, 1 up, (19 holes;) Holden Wilson, Yale, beat F. Sargent, Harvard, 3 up and 2 to play; Albert Seckel, Princeton, beat A. G. Kay, Princeton, 4 up and 2 to play; F. T. Clarke, Harvard, beat J. D. McNeil, Harvard, 4 up and 3 to play; E. B. Jennings, Yale, beat J. D. Dunlap, Yale, 3 up and 2 to play; Harry Heyburn, Pennsylvania, beat L. B. Blair, Princeton, 4 up and 2 to play.

Second Round.—Gardner beat Eddy 7 up and 6 to play; Stanley beat Wilson, 2 up and 1 to play; Seckel beat Clarke, 3 up and 1 to play; Heyburn beat Jennings, 2 up.

The next intercollegiate championship tournament will be held over the links of the Ekwanok Country Club at Manchester, Vt. This will be a new green for the collegians. A year ago they gathered at the Essex County Club at Manchester, Mass., where Robert Hunter of Yale won the individual title. The association held its annual meeting at Baltusrol, when officers for the ensuing year were elected. J. D. Standish, Jr., of Williams, was chosen President to succeed Robert Gardner of Yale, while George Stanley of Yale was the choice for Secretary. J. N. Stearns of Princeton is the new Treasurer.

Practice Golf at Apawamis.

Prospective champions had their practice rounds marred at Apawamis yesterday by a sudden downpour of rain, which caught the players at various points about the course. Clubs that had been cherished for weeks in preparations for the championship, were completely soaked, and for the next hour or two the clubhouse was filled with wet and disgusted golfers. The most promising round of the day stopped by the rain was that of E. M. Byers, the former national champion, who playing with Herbert Strong, the club "pro," had a total of 56 for the first fourteen holes, although it was his first round. Among those who were far from home when the rain began to come down and had to seek the nearest shelter were J. G. Anderson, H. Kerr, G. H. Crocker, W. E. Shackelford, and W. G. Carnegie. Tom MacNamara, the young professional, was also out on the course.

What was regarded as the big match of the day, was lucky enough to finish just as the rain began. Oswald Kirkby and Fred Herreshoff ended the round on even terms with Walter J. Travis and the national champion, W. C. Fownes, Jr.

YOUNG AHEARN WINS.

Young Ahearn, the Brooklyn lightweight, outpointed Tommy Maloney of the west side last night in their ten-round bout at the Twentieth Century A. C. It was purely a case of the rugged boxer, Maloney, against the shifty one, and in the general summing up the Brooklyn boy was entitled to the honors, in view of the fact that he took all the punishment that his opponent could hand out without showing any real danger, and landed on his opponent often.

Maloney did most of the forcing, and carried the fight to Ahearn, often landing hard punches to the body, but Ahearn by his clever footwork worked out of the tight places and peppered numerous blows to the west sider's face, and landed on an average of three punches to one.

From the first round until the end Referee Charlie White cautioned Ahearn for his holding tactics, and during the intermission between the first and second sessions entered into a little discussion with the latter's seconds which preyed on the Brooklyn boy's mind and kept him from doing his best.

Bouts at the Fairmont To-night.

Teddy Murphy, champion featherweight of Boston, will box Young Reilly to-night in the star bout at the Fairmont A. C. This pair furnished one of the most interesting draws ever seen in this city about a year ago. Two other ten-rounders will be put on.

Committee for Aviation Meet.

Mlle. Helene Deutrieu, champio woman aviator of the world, cabled yesterday to the managers of the international aviation meet to be held Sept. 23 to Oct. 1 at Nassau Boulevard, Long Island, that she will sail for America next Thursday. Mlle. Deutrieu is bringing a special racing biplane built for her by Henry Farman. She is also accompanied by two mechanicians.

The Contest Committee for the meet was named yesterday. It consists of James A. Blair, Jr., Third Vice President of the Aero Club of America; G. F. Campbell-Wood, Secretary of the Aero Club of America; Harold McCormick, Chairman of the Contest Committe of the recent aviation meet at Chicago; Henry A. Wise Wood, Chairman of the Models and Designs Committee of the Aero Club of America, and Evert Wendell of the recent Harvard-Boston meet. This committee has been empowered to formulate the rules that will govern the contest and to prepare the complete programme of events, which will be announced to-day.

Helles Flies 776.86 Miles.

ETAMPES, France, Sept. 8.—M. Helles, the French aviator, competing for the Michelin Cup, to-day beat his own record of 746 miles in fifteen hours, made Aug. 26 at Mourmelon, by flying 1,253 kilometers, (776.86 miles.) His time was fourteen hours and seven minutes.

DAVIS CUP TENNIS TO-DAY.

Lawn tennis players of the British Isles and America begin their matches to-day in the preliminary tie series which will bring out the challenging nation to play the Australian holders of the Dwight F. Davis International Cup. On the turf courts of the West Side Tennis Club, at 238th Street and Broadway, Charles P. Dixon, the Captain of the British team, will play William A. Larned, the seven-time holder of the American singles title, at 2:30 o'clock, while a half hour later Maurice E. McLoughlin, the Californian, who won the all-comers at Newport, will play Arthur H. Lowe, the second string of the British team. This draw was made last night by Robert D. Wrenn of the American committee at the Hotel Belmont, both of the Captains being present.

Under the arrangements the doubles match will hold the courts on Monday, at which time C. P. Dixon and A. E. Beamish, the Britons, will face Thomas C. Bundy and Raymond D. Little, the American doubles pair. On Tuesday the final of the series of five competitions will be decided, Larned turning to Lowe and McLoughlin to Dixon. Victory in three out of the five matches entitles the winning nation to go to Australia, and the prospects are particularly bright for the Americans this year, as among the experts the only doubtful match is the doubles.

Princeton Wins Doubles Title.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—Princeton won the doubles championship in the intercollegiate lawn tennis tournament to-day at the Merion Cricket Club by scoring victories over Harvard in both match in the semi-final round. The singles championship rests between Harvard and Yale and will be decided by to-morrow's final match.

The significance of Princeton's victories lies in the fact that they insure the championship trophy remaining in competition for another year. Seven points are necessary for permanent possession of the cup, a win in singles and a win in doubles counting one point each. As a result of to-morrow's final singles match either Yale or Harvard will be tied with Pennsylvania for the lead, with 6 points each, while the loser will be tied with Princeton for second places, with 5 points each.

In the singles the feature match was the defeat of J. J. Armstrong of the University of Minnesota, the Western intercollegiate champion, by E. H. Whitney of Harvard. The latter won by 3 to 1. The summary:

Singles, Semi-Final Round.—E. H. Whitney, Harvard, beat J. J. Armstrong Minnesota, 6—1, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3; A. H. Mann, Jr., Yale, beat J. L. Cote, Yale, 9—7, 6—1.

Doubles, Semi-Final Round—Mathey and Butler, Princeton, beat Whitney and Cutting, Harvard, 6—3, 6—3; Tift and Kuhn, Princeton, beat McKean and Tomes, Harvard, 3—6, 6—4, 6—0.

New Rochelle Tennis Progresses.

M. I. L. Galvao, the German player, won his place in the final round of the Quaker Ridge Cup singles on the lawn tennis courts of the New Rochelle Tennis Club yesterday. He defeated Benjamin M. Phillips, 6—4, 6—0. Galvao brought off his shots perfectly and with surprising speed to the corners and passed Phillips as he came in. Miss Margaret Grove, the Southern girl, won her place in the final of the women's singles, defeating Miss Herts, 6—3, 6—2. Her driving was executed with dash and accuracy. In the women's doubles Mrs. R. Raymond and Miss Elise Little won a lively match, in which they disposed of Miss Juliet Leach and Mrs. H. Garside, 6—2, 6—1. There were many spirited rallies, in which the winning pair were much the steadier. In the mixed doubles Mrs. Henry H. Burdick and Alfred H. Latimer defeated Mr. and Mrs. R. Raymond, 4—6, 7—5, 9—7. The day on the courts was spoiled, as there were frequent showers, which prevented other matches.

Western New York Finals Decided.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Charles Benton and May Sutton won to-day in the finals of the Western New York tennis tournament. Benton, who is Cleveland City and Michigan State champion, defeated Fred Harris, the Dartmouth champion, 9—7, 3—6, 6—3, 1—6, and 6—4. Miss May Sutton captured both sets from her sister Florence by the same score, 6—2. To-morrow Benton will play Nat W. Niles of Boston for the international cup and championship title. Miss Sutton will play Miss Moyes of Toronto for the woman's cup and title. In the finals of the women's doubles Miss Florence Sutton and Miss Moyes won from Miss May Sutton and Miss Bissell, the latter of Buffalo. The scores were 6—2 and 6—3.

Point Judith Tennis.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Sept. 8.—The Point Judith tennis tournament was continued here to-day, when the semi-finals and the finals in the mixed doubles were played on the Country Club courts. Miss Eleanor Chase of Waterbury, Conn., and W. M. Washburn defeated Mrs. A. G. Thompson of Philadelphia and F. Winston, and won the silver cups by a score of 10—12, 6—2, 6—2. The match was closely contested, and proved one of the most interesting of the tourney. In the semi-finals Miss Chase and Mr. Washburn defeated Miss Hazard and F. M. Waterous, 6—2, 8—6. Mrs. A. G. Thompson and F. Winston defeated H. A. McKinney and Miss Bush, 7—5, 6—4.

Pastime A. C. Games.

In addition to the regular members' events at the games of the Pastime A. C. to-morrow afternoon, at the grounds, Ninetieth Street and Avenue A, will be seen a number of champions in various contests. The 600-yard special should prove to be an exciting event and hard fought every inch of the way with such fliers as Eddie Frick, Mike McLaughlin, Jim McIntee, and Tom Kelly, the Pastime's latest find, and formerly one of the best middle-distance runners in Ireland. Eddie is picked to win on account of his ability to give Sheppard and Gissing a hard fight on all occasions, but the others in the race will put up the fight of their lives before going down to defeat, and Eddie will know he is in a race before he gets through. Jim Duncan will be given a chance for the world's record in his favorite event, the discus, which will be thrown from an Olympic circle of 8 feet 3½ inches.

Fisher Columbia Manager.

Owing to the increased demands of his work as General Secretary of the Christian Association, James Myers, who has also acted as graduate manager of the General Athletic Association at Columbia University since the formation of the association two years ago, has resigned the latter position and will devote all of his time to the work at Earl Hall. He is to be succeeded by Harry A. Fisher.

Glidden Pathfinder Out.

In the interests of the Glidden tour emissaries of the American Automobile Association started yesterday on a path-finding trip over the National highway of 1,400 miles from New York through Atlanta and on to Jacksonville. It is expected that the trip will take ten days, and the pathfinder, J. A. Westgard, received a fitting send off when making his start from the association headquarters, 437 Fifth Avenue. The first stop will be made at the Hotel Walton, Philadelphia.

Sheepshead Bay Swimming.

A large entry list is announced for the swimming races and diving contests for girls to be held at Sheepshead Bay to-morrow. Among the leading girl swimmers entered in the various events are Miss Elaine Golding, who recently swam from the Battery to Coney Island; Miss Ethel Edison, who won the diving contest, half-mile swim, and 100-yard swim in last year's competition at Sheepshead Bay, and Miss Elsie Heinemann, who has won many diving contests during the present year. Upward of seventy-five girls are expected to take part in the contests.

OHIO WINS DRYDEN TROPHY.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Sept. 8.—Ohio to-day won the Dryden Trophy match, the feature event of the twenty-first annual Sea Girt shooting tournament. New York finished second, a single point behind the winners, while the District of Columbia team was third. The score of 1,096 out of a possible 1,200, rolled up by the Ohio marksmen, sets a new record for the match, beating the previous figure of 1,085 by 11 points.

By its victory the Ohio team receives the trophy, valued at $3,000, presented by former United States Senator Dryden of New Jersey, and $150 in cash. Second prize, won by New York, is $100, and the third prize, captured by the District of Columbia, is $50. Four other teams finished in the following order: United States Infantry, fourth; United States Cavalry, fifth; Maryland, sixth, and New Jersey, seventh.

Each team consisted of eight men, and it was a condition that they must have performed 75 per cent. of military duty with their organizations during the last year. Each man fired ten shots at 200, 600, and 1,000 yards. Most of those who shot to-day served as members of their respective teams in the National team match at Camp Perry, Ohio, recently.

Lowell's New England Pennant.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—Lowell, despite its loss of to-day's game to Lawrence 5 to 4 in ten innings, has won the New England League championship for 1911. Rain to-day eliminated the only chance that Worcester had to tie Lowell for first honors, and whatever the result of to-morrow's games, the last of the season, Lowell is the champion, according to J. C. Morse, Secretary of the league, and ranking officer in the absence of President Timothy E. Murnane. In making his decision to-night Secretary Morse quoted a rule adopted by the league last year, that no more than two games in one day could count for the championship. This rule apparently blocks off any effort Capt. Jesse Burkett of Worcester may make to drive his team to a tie with Lowell. In a statement to-night Capt. Burkett said if the weather permitted to-morrow he would play three games with Haverhill. One of the games would be played in the morning, the one postponed from this afternoon. The other two would be played in the afternoon. Capt. Burkett figured that if he won all three games from the Haverhill tail-enders, and that if Lowell should lose to-morrow to Brockton, Worcester would be tied for the championship.

Kennedy May Help to Coach Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 8.—Formal announcement, it is expected, may be made soon of the appointment of John Kennedy, former coach of the Yale crews, as assistant to James C. Rodgers, Yale, 1898, recently appointed head coach of the Yale Navy. The former Yale oarsman and football player has, it is learned here, within a day or two had an informal conference in this city with Mr. Kennedy, and, while nothing was given out concerning the conference, the opinion is held by followers of things aquatic at Yale that the veteran trainer may be asked by Mr. Rodgers to work with the crews as his assistant. Rodgers is said to have expressed himself some time ago as unwilling to assume the responsibility of head coach without having an experienced man as assistant, and that such a man as he wanted was John Kennedy.

Rube Marquard had a close call from being batted to destruction at the Polo Grounds yesterday by the spasmodic Dodgers. To Rube's praise may it be warbled that when the tall southpaw was under a grueling test and the Brooklyns were hungry to cudgel him to defeat he suddenly braced up, took a firmer grip on the ball, and came through a winner by a 3-to-2 score.

By the win the Giants got over a rough piece of road on the trip to Pennantville. They had good reason to fear Nap Rucker, the Dodger southpaw. But Nap was stripped of all his cleverness yesterday and didn't have anything unusually strange on the ball. He lasted three innings, New York nailing him for three hits in the third, which, with a pass, gave McGraw's battling troupe three runs and the game.

It was well that they poked Rucker and harvested their runs when they did, because when he retired in came Baron Knetzer with a fast ball that was almost lost in the dull light of the gray afternoon. The Baron pitched the last five innings, and the Giants didn't get even a semblance of a hit. His control was perfect, and the speed which carried along his curve ball dazzled the Giants' stickers.

Each team did all its scoring in one inning. It was necessary to strike while the iron was hot, in the face of the high-class twirling that was at large. Rucker did some fine uphill pitching in the first inning, when he was batted for three hits, but not a run oozed over. Marquard started off with great speed and a deceptive drop ball. He fanned three batsmen in the first two innings, but after that let the Brooklyns hit the ball and put some work on the shoulders of his teammates. They gave Rube water-tight support, the only error being made by Rube himself.

Herzog and Fletcher made some fine pegs to first base and Fred Merkle made several remarkable stops on low balls which dug up the dirt before they got to him. Devore, Snodgrass, and Murray pulled down all the flies which dropped from the dark skies over their gardens.

Rucker was both good and bad in the inning which spelled his valedictory. Although he gave a pass and three hits, he also retired two of the side by strike-outs and the third on a measly grounder. The huge error of Davidson in centre field when he let Merkle's single ripple through him, permitting the runner to score, was a gift to New York which they were heartily glad of receiving before the afternoon was over. When Knetzer went in to pitch the Giant attack became harmless, and the only player who got on base was "Red" Murray, who was presented with two pedestrian's tickets.

Marquard gave the crowd heart failure in the seventh inning. Two two-baggers and a single in a row gave two runs. Then Rube began to sail them over so fast that Brooklyn was somewhat dumfounded, and brilliant fielding by Snodgrass and Merkle saved the day for the Giants.

New York let a good chance go to seed in the first inning. With one out, Doyle singled to right. Snodgrass cracked a single past Smith to short left. Doyle ran wild on the bases and tried to get to third. He was nailed, Wheat to Smith. Murray shot a hot bounder past Smith, Snodgrass going to third. Murray and Snodgrass started a double steal. Murray got second, but Snodgrass was chased back. Merkle blasted a few hopes by skying out to Davidson. In the second the Giants got two on with one out, but no mathematics ensued. Herzog caught one of Rucker's dips on the knee. His life was short, as Fletcher forced him at second. Meyers was safe on Smith's boot of a grounder. Marquard, instead of annexing a little more glory, struck out, and Devore passed away, Hummel to Daubert.

Discreet Larry Doyle refused to bite at Rucker's outcurve in the third, and he walked. Snodgrass tapped a liner to centre. The runners then made a double steal, Bergen dropping the ball when about to throw it. Murray almost strained his shoulders stretching for outcurves. He fanned. Merkle crashed a stinging grounder to centre field, scoring Doyle and Snodgrass. Davidson let the ball bound through him, and it rolled so far into the centre wilderness that Merkle romped home. Fletcher fanned and Meyers collapsed at first, by aid of Hummel.

When the Giants came up to bat in the fourth inning there was no Rucker to face them. The Dodger idol had been led dejectedly away. The Brooklyn fans in the crowd became as gloomy as the weather. Baron Knetzer succeeded Napoleon, and started like a whirlwind, fanning Marquard and Devore, while Doyle rolled a grounder to Daubert.

Brooklyn injected a colossal scare into the Giants in the seventh inning by falling savagely on Marquard's pitching. Rube had pitched fine ball up to the time Smith came to the bat, with one gone, in the seventh. Smith hammered a double against the left-field fence, and scored when Hummel duplicated the crash to the same spot. Davidson lined a hit to right, scoring Hummel. Snodgrass gave Marquard courage by nabbing Coulson's fly. Bergen shot a liner into Merkle's mitt.

The Dodgers threatened more trouble in the eighth inning. Knetzer dropped a Texas leaguer in right field. Tooley laid down a bunt, but Marquard fumbled it and the runner was safe. Rube was in a bad hole, but he buckled down and showed his worth in a pinch. He fanned Daubert, Wheat grounded out, Herzog to Merkle, and Smith skied to Devore.

ROUTING OF MR. RUCKER.

Mr. "Sharkey" Leonard was cheer-up leader of the forces rooting for the Gowanus Canal nine. He wore a smile a mile wide, gave sterling advice and praise to the Superbas, but when the Superbas "shot their bolt" "Sharkey's" smile disappeared. And so did "Sharkey."

Bill Bergen was pinged on the knee with a foul tip so he didn't steal any bases. Bill's arm wasn't hit, but the Giants stole six bases just the samee.

Nap. Rucker had a teasing outcurve which fooled the Giants for awhile. Then the Giant bats began to tease the outcurve.

McGraw and Dahlen did a lot of jockeying before they named their pitchers. Each was waiting for the other to show his hand. The game was delayed for about five minutes while the two managers stood with Umpire Johnstone waiting for the verdict. McGraw had Marquard and Crandall, and Dahlen had Rucker and Knetzer ready. Finally McGraw named Marquard. Then Rucker was promptly pitted against him.

It was a dark, dismal day, just like the evening the family jewels were stolen.

The threatening weather kept the crowd down to 3,000.

A good many folks take it for granted that the Giants can trim Brooklyn any time. Not so, for the past two days Brooklyn looked just as good as any team in the circuit.

The trouble is, when the Brooklyns show something, they can't keep it for more than a day or two.

Willie Collier chewed peanuts and rooted for the team on this bank of the river. He also had a new Fall bonnet.

Several Brooklyn natives tubed over to see the battle. And back again they tubed, with never as much as a whisper about what had happened.

When Rucker gets his, gee, they take it to heart.

Were we stock brokers instead of manufacturers of clothing stock, we'd say we "cut a melon" to-day.

We've been keeping quiet about our Fall suits, until we had ready a wider variety of patterns, in more different models and different weaves than ever before at this season.

For our old friends who would be coming to us anyhow, it is a "melon"—something much better than even they who know us could have expected.

For strangers it will likely be a revelation in the possibilities of ready-to-wear clothes.

For instance, the man who has always had his tweed suits over from an English tailor—

He'll find here the finest sort of imported Scotch tweeds cut on distinctly English lines. But not English cut or English made — there's where American skill triumphs.

Fall begins for us to-day—open until 6 o'clock.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 8.—Manager Hal Chase and his band of Yankees from New York took a hard-fought game from the Senators here to-day by the score of 2 to 1. Broken up by repeated wrangling and loose fielding, the game was slow and uninteresting.

The one bright feature outside of the fast work of the Yankee infield was the showing made by Al Handiboe, the Washington amateur, who played right field for Chase's clan. Handiboe met the ball fair each trip to the plate, and while only one of his drives went safe the others were hard hit, and only fast fielding stopped them. In the field he only had one fly ball, a short pop behind first base in the ninth inning, and he handled that cleverly. The youngster starred in handling ground balls, not one getting by him, and he took one ball on the rebound from the fence that would have taxed a seasoned veteran. Manager Chase expressed himself as being well pleased with the showing made by the youngster. Handiboe is 23 years old, weighs 150 pounds, and throws and bats left handed.

Three fast double plays, two by the Senators and one by the Yankees, were the fielding features of the game. In the fourth inning, after Gardner had singled, Knight slammed a hot one at McBride, and the shortstop started a fast relay, Elberfeld to Schaefer. Again in the sixth McBride was the pivot point of a double play. With Hartzell on third and Gardner on second, Knight lined the ball into the local Captain's hands, and Gardner was called out at first on a close decision. The Yankees' double put out came in the last half of the sixth. Milan was on first and Schaefer hit a liner to Knight, the shortstop throwing Germany out at first. Milan attempted to go to third, but a true peg by Chase nipped him a yard.

Bert Daniels became ruffled at Umpire Perrine's decisions in the sixth, and Wolter finished the game in left field, Daniels being benched by Perrine. Each team scored in the second inning. After Conroy had made a great stop and peg of Gardner's grounder, retiring the second sacker at first base, Jack Knight swatted the ball into centre field for three bases. Handiboe popped to McBride, and Blair slammed a hot one at McBride that got away from the shortstopper, Knight crossing the plate. Blair went to second, and would have been thrown out but McBride dropped Henry's perfect throw. Caldwell singled, Blair stopping at third, and when Daniels poked a safety into right field Blair counted. Daniels was thrown out at second, ending the inning.

In the Senators' half of the second inning one tally crossed the plate. Doc Gessler singled to left and Walker strolled. McBride sacrificed them up a peg on Conroy's out, Gardner to Chase. Gessler counted. Henry ended the round by whiffing at three.

The Senators had several good chances to tie the score, but as usual the necessary bingle was not there. In the sixth inning Milan singled and was doubled at third when Schaefer grounded out to Chase, Elberfeld singled, as did Gessler, Elberfeld stopping at third. Gessler stole second, but the best Walker could do was to bounce a little grounder to Hartzell and the side was retired runless after getting three safe hits.

Detroit Pitchers Weak.

DETROIT, Sept. 8.—Chicago pounded three Detroit pitchers to-day for a total of sixteen hits, and beat Detroit 9 to 3. Walsh pitched good ball after the first inning. Remarkable fielding by Bush kept down the score. Berghamer, a recruit from the Central Association, made his first appearance at second base for Chicago. Score:

BOXING COMMISSION DEADLOCKED AGAIN

Pat Powers Not Compelled to Answer Some Questions About the Wells-Brown Fight.

The much-discussed investigation by the State Athletic Commission, at least by Commissioner Frank O'Neil of Binghamton, against the Madison Square Athletic Club, regarding complaints about violations of the Frawley bill on the night of the Wells-Brown bout and other features of the club, took up more than an hour yesterday at the commission's headquarters, 41 Park Row, and when an adjournment was taken until next Wednesday nothing had been accomplished. Patrick T. Powers, head of the Madison A. C., was put on the grill by Commissioner O'Neil, and he showed more of a disposition to answer questions than he showed at the last meeting, but he did not answer all the questions asked. Two refusals on monetary questions spoiled an otherwise perfect average for P. T.

Commissioner O'Neil has come out so strongly during the last few days regarding a public meeting that it was generally believed that no secret session would be held. Evidently Commissioner Dixon, the only other member in session who could vote, again disagreed with his colleague. So the meeting was held behind double closed doors, one leading into an anteroom and the other into the room where the hearing was in progress.

When the hearing was adjourned Commissioner O'Neil was asked to give out the details of the hour's session, and he stated that everything was included in the minutes, which he understood would be given out and which he was willing should be given out. Secretary Harvey, when asked about the minutes, declared that they were not to be made public and refused to tell what transpired during the meeting. He was evidently following out the instructions of Commissioner Dixon, as Commissioner O'Neil was willing to have everything made public.

It was learned later from one who had attended the session that the hearing confined itself simply to a number of questions by Commissioner O'Neil to Patrick T. Powers, the only member of the Madison Square A. C. who was examined. Harry Pollok was not called upon. All the questions except two were answered by Mr. Powers, but it was impossible to learn how the answers were received by Mr. O'Neil, who seems to be playing a lone hand in the investigation. He left the meeting much disturbed over his failure to have all his questions answered. James Young, Secretary-Treasurer of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, and Frank K. Sturgis, a member of the same corporation, together with other witnesses, will be subpoenaed for Wednesday's hearing.

Mr. O'Neil began to ask Mr. Powers about various features regarding the Madison Square A. C. and the conditions surrounding the Brown-Wells bout in particular. The question of lease was brought up and Mr. Powers persisted in the declaration that he had a bona fide lease on the Garden for one year. He further stated that to his knowledge no tickets were sold on the night of the Brown-Wells bout at advanced prices. Two questions Mr. Powers declined to answer. The first was in regard to the amount of compensation which the Madison Square Garden Corporation receives from the Madison Square A. C. for the lease, and the second was about the money paid to Brown and Wells for their services in the bout, which started the investigation. Attorney Levy advised Mr. Powers to decline to answer both questions on the ground that the commission had no right to know the figures in either case.

When asked who shared in the profits of the Madison Square A. C. Mr. Powers answered that they all went to the Madison Square A. C. Commissioner O'Neil asked if the members had received any of the money and was informed that all the profits went into the treasury of the club. Mr. Powers explained that the members were considering the advisability of leaving the money in the treasury to form a nucleus of a fund to be used for the erection of a permanent home for the club.

While waiting for the Deputy Attorney General, Commissioners O'Neil and Dixon took up the case of William J. Brown, proprietor of Brown's Gymnasium in West Twenty-third Street, against whom Fire Commissioner Johnson made a report to the effect that the place was not protected sufficiently to guard its patrons from danger in case of fire. Capt. Dooling of the Fire Department and Brown both testified before the Commissioners.

After hearing the testimony of Capt. Dooling and Lieut. Gallagher in relation to recommendations at Brown's gymnasium, the report of Fire Commisioner Johnson was read. Brown himself was also heard, and he said that he was desirous of complying with every regulation, and that he would do whatever was ordered.

The commission, after hearing all the evidence, decided that no bouts should be held in the gymnasium until certain alterations are made as proposed by the Fire Commissioner. The Boxing Commissioners will visit the gymnasium and look it over with the representatives of the Fire Department and see just what must be done. If the changes cannot be completed by next Tuesday the scheduled bouts will be postponed.

International Soccer Team.

Picked by the Corinthian Committee of the New York Amateur Association Football League to play the famous English tourists at the Polo Grounds on Sept. 16 the New York team will play together for the first time this afternoon, when they will be opposed at Marquette Oval in Brooklyn by a picked team of the rest of the league. The Corinthian Committee yesterday gave out the personnel of the International team as follows: O. Wilson, Clan MacDonald, goal; H. Hynd, (Captain,) Critchley, right back; J. Ross, Clan MacDonald, left back; T. Hoyle, Clan MacDonald, right back; P. McCann, (Vice Captain,) Clan MacDonald, centre half; H. McWilliam, Bronx United, left half; N. Agar, Critchley, outside right; W. Heath, St. George F. C., inside right; F. Porter, Critchley, centre forward; W. Phillips, New York Celtics, inside left; G. Salmond, Hollywood, Inn, outside left.

FAMOUS AVIATORS FLY.

With such famous aviators as Harry N. Atwood, Claude Grahame-White, Tom Sopwith, and George W. Beatty as the drawing cards at the aviation meet at Brighton Beach Race Track yesterday, the first day of a series of three, which will include to-morrow, there was general wonderment among the corporal's guard present at the apparent lack of interest.

What flights were held were viewed in the nature of a free show by thousands outside of the inclosure, the various points of vantage in the immediate vicinity being thronged with those who were curious enough to make the journey, but balked at paying to get near enough to rub shoulders with the "bird men."

Each of those mentioned, with the exception of White, helped to satisfy the onlookers with flights of short duration. White, however, failed to get his Nieuport monoplane to run smoothly, with the result that, after causing it to be brought out from the improvised hangar in the old paddock, he promptly had it hauled back again.

In view of the fact that this was the machine that nearly every one wanted to see in action, because of its gigantic bird-like conformation, there was considerable disappointment felt by those who were getting their kindergarten course in viewing the sport.

Atwood and Beatty gave those who had paid a run for their money, and demonstrated their ability to take a chance under rather unfavorable conditions. Most of the time the wind was tearing along at a 25-mile clip, and it was during this time that Atwood and Beatty gave their exhibitions, but well on toward 7 o'clock, with the wind almost still, Sopwith got out his Wright biplane and made several circuits of the inclosure at a low height.

Beatty made three flights—at 12 o'clock, at 3:15, and again at 5:22. It was during the last that he made his longest stay in the air, being up for about eight minutes. During this time he reached an altitude of about a thousand feet, climbing slowly against the stiff wind from the northeast. At about 600 feet on the descent he all but shut off his engines and made a pretty glide to the track, from which he made a very quick restart, after which he made another circuit. Atwood used Beatty's machine, a Wright biplane, prior to this, but the hero of the St. Louis-New York flight thoroughly inspected it before he would venture to use it. When he did get started he dodged the air currents in the vicinity of the grand stand and made directly for the ocean. He soon turned back, and in a dash immediately over the backstretch, at an altitude of about 200 feet, showed speed, with the wind behind him, of at least a mile a minute.

Following this he did a number of stunts, such as a difficult right-hand turn and figure eights. When he got out of the machine he confessed that he was not smitten with the idea of making flights in such air. His time in the air was six minutes.

DIXIE IV. IN TIME TRIAL.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., Sept. 8.—Proposals to have the British hydroplanes Pioneer and Maple Leaf make a speed trial over a mile course here to-day came to naught when the water in the bay grew too rough for them. They were loaded for shipment home. It had been announced that the Pioneer would go to Buffalo to-morrow, but the plan was later abandoned.

Notwithstanding the rough water and a repaired crank-shaft, which weakened the boat, Frederick K. Burnham, one of the owners of the Dixie IV., which kept the Harmsworth Cup in this country at the races just finished here, took the cup defender out and ran a speed mile trial for the Otto Heins trophy. He made six mile runs in the following time: 1:30 3-5, 1:30 3-5, 1:31, 1:33, 1:31, and 1:32. The official time for the mile is determined by taking the average of six times over a measured course against and with the wind. Dixie IV.'s performance to-day, therefore, gave her an average of 39 and a fraction knots an hour, or about 45 statute miles.

Mr. Burnham, who had announced before the trials that he intended "to show the Pioneer and Maple Leaf how to race," said that the Dixie was not running at her best.

The third day of the National Carnival was anything but favorable for the one mile speed trials that had been scheduled or for the 52-mile race of the cruisers to Stratford Shoal Light and back. Half a gale from the northeast was blowing up the Sound early in the morning when the thirteen cruisers started, and when they came out from under the lee of Eaton's Neck and encountered the full force of the ugly sea running in the Sound it was one of the hardest tests that this type of boat could be put to. Six miles west of Stratford Shoal the class E cruiser Semloh, owned by E. V. Holmes, was seen to be in trouble by Commodore Walter Sullivan, who was on board W. F. Burroughs' Ruth II. of class F, which was right astern of the Semloh. She had lost her rudder and the sea was breaking over her so badly that the Ruth II. abandoned her chance of winning the race in her class and went to the rescue.

It took the Ruth II. one and a half hours to tow her back to Huntington. T. Trolsens' Excelsior was towed in by Capt. Paterson with the Revenue Cutter Guide, and W. L. Southerd's X. withdrew from the race. John F. O'Rourke's Lady Jane finished the course in 6 hours 8 minutes 6 seconds, winning in class D. The Eronel's time in class E was 6 hours 34 minutes 18 seconds, and the Alfred S. in class F, corrected time, 4 hours 42 minutes and 16 seconds.

Capt. Dalton Swam the Channel.

Prof. F. E. Dalton, who has taught many New York youngsters how to swim, takes exception to the published statement that many unsuccessful attempts have been made to swim the English Channel in the last thirty-six years. The professor states that his father, Capt. Davis Dalton, swam the Channel on Aug. 6, 1890, from Cape Grisnez to Folkestone, in 23 hours and 30 minutes. He swam the entire distance on his back, and the salt water had such an effect on his eyes that he was blind for several weeks afterward.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

A school budget, just estimated at $37,000,000, is what Tammany is reaching for in its advocacy of a small paid Board of Education. Not the paltry $64,000 in salaries for its members, but power over the positions of 17,000 teachers and officers charged with the administration of the schools and the immense budget, is sought in the effort to authorize a paid board in the Charter.

The salaries are wanted, too, by the place hunters of Tammany, but they are as nothing compared with the attainment of power to dictate the personnel of the Board of Examiners of the teachers, to take the discipline of the schools out of the hands of the City Superintendent, and to remove safeguards of the civil service from his appointment, from the appointments of associate and district Superintendents, directors and assistant directors of special branches, and from all such places in future.

The intent of making the schools the spoils of a strong political machine is manifest in these provisions, as well as in the provision that the appointments to all the chief places in the city's educational system shall be restricted to men and women who have spent seven years here, to the exclusion of the best applicants from all parts of the country. The school officers must be persons who come under the local influence of the bosses.

It is the non-partisan control by the city's experts over the recipients of the millions of school moneys annually—their selection and discipline—that is endangered by the proposal of a small paid Board of Education clothed with absolute administrative powers.

DR. BRYAN'S PRESCRIPTION.

"For sixteen years the Democratic Party has had its quadrennial struggle to free itself from the strangle hold of Wall Street," says Mr. BRYAN in his Commoner. The aspect of a fight depends much upon the angle from which the observer views it. Most persons just now are unable to perceive that Wall Street has a hold, strangle or other, on anything; it is decidedly the under dog. Both political parties have Wall Street and the business interests of the country by the throat and by the hair. They are plying their cudgels merrily, and their victims are reduced to so low an estate that they hardly have strength even to cry out. Business and Wall Street have lost their courage under these terrific assaults. The spirit of enterprise and of venture has gone out from them, and, so far from attempting to control either party, they would be mightily pleased if at the price of keeping entirely quiet they were permitted to live. Besides, it is not Wall Street, it is Bryanism that has had the strangle hold on the Democracy for the last sixteen years. There has been hope that the party might free itself from the asphyxiating grasp of BRYAN; doubtless it has in large measure freed itself from him, but not altogether from the destructive spirit he represents.

Mr. BRYAN is resolutely opposed to the nomination for President of any Democrat tainted with sanity and conservatism. His prescription is more radicalism. "The only hope of the party is in the nomination of a positive, progressive, aggressive Democrat," he says. "Any other course would be suicidal. Let the unpurchased, unintimidated Democrats of each community get together and agree upon the candidate who best represents the sentiments of the rank and file, and support him." If Mr. BRYAN is right about the sentiments of the rank and file, Senator LA FOLLETTE is the indicated candidate. It makes no difference that he is a Republican. There is no dividing line between the Republican progressives and the Democratic progressives. The chief aim of both is to amass political capital through assaults on business. LA FOLLETTE is the chief apostle and agitator of that political faith. Better than any Democrat "in sight," he represents what Mr. BRYAN preaches. The Bryan men, it is supposed, have found WOODROW WILSON acceptable. But Gov. WILSON has a past, a conservative and rational past. He might at any time return along the track that has led him so far in the direction of Bryanism, he might renounce his recently professed beliefs in the radical nostrums, and then he would be a fit candidate, not for the Presidency, but for excommunication. LA FOLLETTE is the best radical of them all. Of course, if the party is going in for four years more of raids upon business, Attorney General WICKERSHAM ought to be nominated for the Vice Presidency as LA FOLLETTE's running mate. But it would hardly do to waste so valuable an instrument of disturbance upon an office which has neither power nor responsibility. Mr. WICKERSHAM would have to be the Attorney General of the progressive Administration.

The nomination of LA FOLLETTE by the Democrats would be a notice to all the world that the strangle hold of Wall Street was broken. We are confident that the progressive rank and file in both parties would build big bonfires and enthusiastically organize long torchlight processions in evidence of their hearty support of LA FOLLETTE. The bonfire and torch would be the appropriate symbols of a progressive campaign.

KIPLING SPEAKS.

The argument against reciprocity with the United States contributed to The Montreal Star by the man who once had imagination, fancy, and humor enough to write "Plain Tales from the Hills" ought to serve to check the opposition and secure victory for the advocates of the measure. Sir WILFRID LAURIER can surely afford to use it as a campaign document. Nine million people, Mr. KIPLING argues, should not try to maintain reciprocal trade arrangements with 90,000,000. We do not know the population of Bateman's Burwash, in Sussex, from which KIPLING dates his letter, but probably the inhabitants of that now distinguished hamlet will try to suspend their reciprocal trade arrangements with London, which must have a considerably larger population. The suggestion that the murder rate of Canada might be increased by reciprocity, because more murders are committed in a population of 90,000,000 than in a population of 9,000,000 is presumably intended to be humorous. Alas for the humor of Mulvaney and Ortheris!

The downward or rearward course of RUDYARD KIPLING has been a pathetic phenomenon of recent years. He burst upon the world in his young manhood with a seemingly new and inspiriting message. His coming seemed to mark an epoch in English literature. He thrilled and charmed a new generation of readers throughout the English-speaking world. The glamour of the Orient was in his tales. Nobody thought of his logic or his politics. He told brave stories and sang bold, uplifting songs. But the star of his genius has set, and he lives to out-Tory the narrowest of Tories, to pose as a futile reactionary in an era of change and upheaval, to preach imperialism with the bitterness and limited vision of the smallest Little Englander.

Mr. KIPLING will be as ineffectual in preventing the establishment of reciprocity between Canada and the United States as he has been in his other efforts as a political meddler. He was born to write stories and songs, and it is a pity that he has not been content, since his pen lost its skill, to lead the retired life peaceably and find his enjoyment in horticulture. We had hoped for a reawakening, but obviously KIPLING now belongs wholly to the past. A falling British Government a decade ago may have fancied that his reactionary political utterances might help to save its face. But KIPLING was never rewarded, even with a knighthood, like CONAN DOYLE. To-day, when he argues that Canada, by abolishing a few duties on agricultural products, for the sake of obtaining what she needs from the United States free of duty, would "throw her future into the hands" of this country, which he so heartily detests, he is, indeed, a forlorn and pitiable object. Besides, Canadians have not forgotten "Our Lady of the Snows."

WHERE THERE IS DOUBT.

Secretary JAMES WILSON does not care, it seems, how much of the soluble and poisonous salts of aluminium courses in the veins of ninety millions of people, so long as the manufacturers of certain brands of baking powder are kept by his paternal rulings from financial "ruin." While he admitted, in his testimony on Aug. 21 before the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture, that alum "is not used now by any reputable baker," he was persuaded by "very powerful representations of legal men" to submit the question of the deleteriousness of aluminized foods to his famous Remsen Board of Expert Consulting Chemists. Dr. WILEY, he said, agreed to the submission, provided Solicitor McCABE and Dr. DUNLAP, whose votes had overmastered him, "should refuse it permission to be used" pending the determination of the Referee Board with respect to alum. Secretary WILSON added:

> But where there is a doubt it would seem to me that everybody connected with it would be ruined before the Referee Board would get around to a conclusion. It looked to me radical.

Therefore the Secretary will not prosecute the alum-users until he hears from the Referees. But in The Journal of the American Medical Association of Sept. 2 Dr. WILLIAM J. GIES reports experiments with aluminized foods, conducted by him and his associates in the laboratory of biological chemistry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons during the past seven years, which show that the salts of aluminium used by bakers "are strong protoplasmic poisons"; that, after baking and deglutition, they "circulate throughout the body," which manifests toward them "a decided physiological repugnance." While robust eaters of aluminized viands may not seem to suffer, Dr. GIES expresses his conviction that the systems of individuals who have "weak digestions," or are temporarily ill or permanently diseased, cannot tolerate them with impunity. "While doubt remains," Dr. GIES says, the use of alum in the preparation of foods "should be avoided." Secretary WILSON is tender and sympathetic, not with the millions who have stomachs, but with the manufacturers of cheap baking powders.

SENATOR ROOSEVELT'S AFFLICTION

State Senator FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT is afflicted with the same disease that distinguishes his relative who was President. The Senator would take the affairs of the States to Washington. When the Legislature reconvenes on Sept. 18, he says, he will introduce a concurrent resolution appealing to the Congressmen of this State to "initiate action" toward the enactment of a uniform Federal divorce law.

Where in the enumerated powers of Congress can Senator ROOSEVELT find warrant for its initiative in this matter? President ROOSEVELT could find none, though he tried strenuously, and persuaded Congress to investigate the question thoroughly. The Congressional Committee reported that divorce was an affair of the States, and that uniformity in the procedure of divorce might be secured by resort to the principle of State comity. Senator ROOSEVELT should reword his concurrent resolution, as an appeal to the House of Governors, which is to convene next week at Spring Lake in New Jersey. The States will consent to a uniform divorce law of their own long before they will consent to a constitutional amendment permitting Congress to pass one for them.

WASHINGTON'S ANCESTRY.

The Sly family of Warwickshire, according to their proud but dissolute descendant, Christopher, "came in with Richard Conqueror." That was a good old Elizabethan joke. It was not only the confusion of WILLIAM with RICHARD that made the audiences in the Globe Theatre on the Bankside laugh. People who claimed descent from the Norman invader were regarded humorously by the common folk in England 300 years ago and more. They have been laughed at more and more ever since.

Simple faith, the last of the Laureates proclaimed, is more than Norman blood. GEORGE WASHINGTON had simple faith. The most illustrious of all Americans was a gentleman, to be sure, but a man of severe tastes and stern convictions, free from all pride of heritage, and as plain and unpretentious as his farmer neighbors. A St. Louis clergyman has been wasting his vacation days in Europe trying to trace the Washington ancestry back to the earliest Norman King of England. WASHINGTON was not fond of Kings, and he would have taken no pride in relationship to a brigand King like WILLIAM I. But a genealogist once did worse than this for the Father of His Country. He traced WASHINGTON's ancestry back to ODIN, who is identical with the deplorable Wotan of "Die Walküre," and a personage of most objectionable morals.

As a matter of fact, all serious efforts to find the roots of the WASHINGTON family tree have failed. The first President's relationship to a somewhat distinguished North of England family has never been satisfactorily settled. GEORGE WASHINGTON, however, had a decent and law-abiding paternal grandfather, which is more than many eminent Americans can boast, and he was a good enough man to get along without a drop of Norman blood in his veins.

THE ORIGINAL POTATO.

According to a cable dispatch to our neighbor The Tribune, "a potato, said to be impervious to disease and the original tubercle from which all potatoes take their origin, is reported to have been discovered in Peru." The "battata" or "papa," contrary to popular tradition, is not a native of Ireland. Before Sir WALTER RALEIGH cultivated the first Irish potato on his estate, near Cork, the monk HIERONYMUS CARDAN brought over into Spain in 1553 some specimens of the underground leaf buds of this plant, swollen into tubercles by the fungus Fusarium solani, which he had found in the Empire of Peru. The presence of the fungus, which is the irritant source of one of the chief articles in the diet of mankind, was, of course, unknown to CARDAN's contemporaries, as was the fact that the potato is not a true root, but a leafless shoot or branch, swollen with starchy compounds underground.

But it is news that the original species of potato has been found. We doubt its authenticity. The Solanum tuberosum, which in its wild state develops its small, green, and acrid tubercles near the surface or upon the soil, has been regarded as the ancestor of most of the common cultivated kinds. These, artificially "hilled" with soil, grow large and esculent. The poisonous qualities, which the tuberosum shares with its first cousins the tomato, the bittersweet, henbane, and the deadly nightshade, are largely suppressed by its growth in darkness and eliminated by cooking. The tuberosum, which is probably a native of Chile, and early spread northward through cultivation by the Indians, has five distinct congeners upon the Chilean coast, in Uruguay, Buenos Aires and the Argentine, in Central Mexico, and in the mountains of Colorado. A dozen other varieties of wild potato—not distinctly species—have been described by the botanists. That all the varieties and species have a single Peruvian ancestor is interesting, if true.

GAME FISH AND ANIMALS.

Wild game is increasing in this State. The Conservation Commission reports that under the ninety-five game protectors, authorized to prosecute misdemeanants in ten divisions of the State, each under a division chief, with whom they file weekly reports, the efficiency of the department has increased 50 per cent., so that the laws designed to permit the propagation of wild animals have become really effective. The State game farm, too, has become productive and is liberating pheasants in various private coverts throughout the State.

Dr. TARLETON H. BEAN, the State Fish Culturist, has reported that from the nine hatcheries in his charge more than half a billion fry and fingerlings comprising many varieties of trout, bass, salmon, perch, pike, whitefish, shad, herring, and shellfish were distributed to waters inland and along the coast during the season of 1910. His work includes supervision of the streams for the protection of the game fish from disease, whether from parasitic causes or pollution; and Dr. BEAN is issuing educational folders that show how to transport and to plant the fry in public waters.

The increase of game animals and fish in New York State corresponds with their increase in most of the States of the Union. By taking thought the best species have been preserved and are now, with some notable exceptions, more abundant and better distributed than when the country was a primeval wilderness. Yet the possibilities of streams and coastal waters and of the great forests that still cover the land are only beginnning to be realized by the protectors of wild life. Civilization is returning to the hunting stage; the modern hunters enjoy advantages of sport that would inspire envy in the aborigines.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Tip-Taking Poorly Defended.

Our recent criticism of tip-taking collegians had both its accuracy and the need for making it only too well confirmed by the letter of protest printed yesterday from a correspondent who for reasons presumably personal seems to have been deeply grieved by our remarks.

He is mistaken, of course, in supposing that we singled out for a special reprehension the students who came back from Europe this week as table stewards. We only made them the text for a condemnation wide enough to include all the young men and women who, as he truly wrote, are to be found all over the country every year in the dining rooms of Summer resort hotels—a condemnation based, not on the fact that the work they do is humble, but on the performance of that work in conditions that compel the abandonment of dignity and self-respect.

Our correspondent frankly admitted that for any except servile souls the acceptance of tips is loathsome, but he demanded commendation for those who, seeing no other way to get the money needed for college expenses, conceal their disgust and count submission to the evil system of remuneration as merely an additional hardship to be bravely endured in the attainment of an education. This is the view of the matter undoubtedly taken by the students who, beginning as reluctant tip-takers, soon degenerate into eager tip-hunters, adept in using all the mean wiles of that miserable trade. But it is while practicing those wiles that they get their education, not later, when they return to college with sensibilities blunted, their morals weakened, and their ability to distinguish between money decently earned and indecently earned never wholly to be regained.

It is not necessary that a young man or a young woman should go to college. That is only one of many roads to an education. More than a few of the others, though longer and rougher, are just as good for those who have the energy to follow them, and some are probably better. Nobody is confronted by the alternative of taking tips or remaining uneducated. Probably a few face that of taking tips or not getting a college diploma, but he or she who is alarmed or discouraged by that has a ludicrously false notion of what college diplomas are worth, and why they are worth anything. Our correspondent would doubtless admit that there are prices which should not be paid for the collegiate form of education. He would not, for instance, justify burglary as a means of meeting matriculation fees. He should also draw the line against taking as remuneration for work done anything except honest wages.

Peter Will Grow Conceited.

Any eye that sought the southeastern corner of this page yesterday saw there confirmation of our prophecy that if ladybirds chose to sing their own emotions instead of echoing those of their actual or potential mates they would not have to fight, as for a privilege denied, but would be heard with much more of interest than if they continued to emit melodious echoes of masculine lays, hymning thrills and yearns which by no possibility could they ever have felt themselves.

It is curious, and more than a little amusing, that "E. D.," a practiced rhymstress, well wonted to seeing her full name beneath her printed verses, left to her initials the task of identifying the authorship of her ode to "The Eyes of Pete." Yet in none of that ode's five stanzas was there a single incendiary line. Ardor was hinted, but with a delicacy that left some doubt as to its—the ardor's—very existence, and a suspicion that this particular Pete is a brother of Mrs. Harris.

Nevertheless, the verses were unconventional as to subject, and of course that is a kind of impropriety, grave enough, perhaps, to explain why only the initials were signed. Another explanation is that "E. D." realized that her ode was the betrayal of a carefully guarded sex secret—a confession of subjectivity where unmitigated objectivity has always been pretended—and therefore likely to be punished by her indignant sisters. Of course, the pretense of unmitigated objectivity has never deceived anybody, but its maintenance has been useful for both sides of the human family, and the consequences of its abandonment may bring about mysterious ills, intuitively foreseen through all the centuries during which women poets have been trying to write as much like men poets as they could whenever they took the love-lorn pose.

There may be, too, significance—and another betrayal—in "E. D.'s" statement that if she told too much about what she thought of the estimable Peter's eyes, they—meaning he—would at once begin to exercise a harsh tyranny over her. There is surely something in that idea. It would be "just like a man for all the world" thus to reward a too expressive she who revealed to him that she found him anything more than tolerable.

No Secrets Among the Eskimos.

STEFANSSEN, the arctic explorer, who has combined exceptional abilities and exceptional opportunities in the study of the Eskimos, notes as bearing on the question of their credibility in the Peary-Cook controversy that all of them firmly believe serious misfortune sure to follow the concealment of any important fact by any member of the tribe.

This belief, so far as can be recalled, exists among no other people. Indeed, if not secrecy, at least the power to keep a secret, is generally counted somewhere between a talent and a virtue, and this is supposed to be especially the case among savages and barbarians.

Possibly the Eskimo's sense of obligation to tell all he knows is explained by the abnormal severity of his contest with nature and the consequent importance that every member of a group or clan should know whatever any other member knows. Their united knowledge is none too much to meet the conditions of their lives, and they share it all just as they share all of their provisions, feasting or starving together.

THE BARRED WOMEN OF 35.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to say a few words regarding the recent dictum from the Boston Y. W. C. A. over which other New York papers, as well as THE TIMES, have worked themselves into such passionate letters. According to THE TIMES no woman over 35 will be allowed to rent a room in the new boarding home of the Boston Association. THE TIMES says: "This rule is quite in accordance with the general tyranny, impertinence, and unkindness which seem inevitably and ever to find expression when women, no matter how good or how well intentioned, make rules for the government of other women."

Let us consider how stupid and unreasonable such remarks are in view of the facts.

Does THE TIMES happen to know how many hundred or thousand young women between the ages of 18 and 35 there are living alone in lodging houses in our large cities? Attracted by the magnet of the many advantages to be gained, they leave their homes, and, in one room of the stuffy, ill-ventilated lodging houses, each takes her ambition and her hopes, and there establishes her city home. How many of these girls, heart sick, hungry, friendless, turning in desperation to any source of pleasure—how many of these fall into the nets made ready for them—God only knows.

And it is for these girls, honest, clean, pure hearted, ignorant, because of inexperience, who have no home in the great city, that the Young Women's Christian Association's Boarding Home exists.

To provide a decent, clean, quiet, comfortable room in this home for every woman in the city who would like one or who needs one is as absolutely impossible as it would be desirable. And because the boarding home is limited in space and can only accommodate a certain number it is necessary that some discrimination be made and some line drawn. The managers of the Y. W. C. A. have drawn this line at the woman of 35, not because they do not recognize her rights and her needs, but because they feel that the younger woman's needs are far more pressing. It is to be supposed that at the age of 35 one's eyes are fairly well opened to the dangers and temptations that we are blind to in our youth.

The fact that women of 35 are excluded from the boarding home does not deny to them the other privileges of the association—the class work, the gymnasium, the swimming pool, the lectures, &c.

If THE TIMES or any other paper considers it tyrannical and unkind that any woman should be denied a room in this new house, then it is the tyranny and unkindness of the men who close their pockets and their ears to the appeals for funds when the needs of the Y. W. C. A. are mentioned, and not of that devoted band of women who have made possible these associations all over the country.

PUTTING OFF THE OLD MAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It will appear to some of us that Mayor Gaynor made an appropriate reply to his Los Angeles correspondent who seeks to relieve his conscience of perjury committed years ago during a trial of which the present Mayor was then the presiding Judge, and where the act defeated justice. If restitution is materially possible, the offense can only be condoned by its exercise.

When church "experience" meetings were more common than now many professing conversion used to make confession of their past sins in language akin to boastful zest in particularization, but without a substantial record of retrieval toward those who were affected by their wantonness of conduct. Even the man who sins against himself in some form of intemperance generally involves some one else in deprivation, or, at least, by the influence of a bad example, with conclusions immeasurable in evil. There are those with past careers of folly and vice who lead in later years, when passion has spent its force, what the ministerial obituaries pronounce "saintly" lives, without full investigation of the longer enduring evils wrought in their younger days.

Some years ago I was in frequent and close observation of a young man of my own years of most irregular habits, who made strong efforts to introduce such into the lives of associates more decorously inclined. He fell under the influence of a preacher who induced him to study for the ministry. He was duly ordained and secured a charge, marrying, but never making any effort toward paying the monetary indebtedness incurred among boarding houses, tailors, and friends. When he met the latter on the streets he bestowed on them a frigid recognition, perhaps to discourage importunities for payment, or maybe as a disclaimer of obligation on grounds of regeneration—a new birth without any embarrassment from the acts of a past life. He once preached a reported sermon in which he stated that "in the future the ledgers of business men would be held in testimony against him," and then I respectfully addressed him a letter of reminder of some of his unsatisfied debts, but received no reply. When he died several years thereafter an obituary of extollation was sadly amusing.

Stuyvesant Park Restored.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While, until recently, the conditions in Stuyvesant Park have been deplorable to every lover of decency, I want to thank the Park and Police Departments for waking up, at last, to the facts. I believe that with the restoration of the park the disorderly element will be more easily controlled.

GOV. BLEASE'S LETTER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The disgraceful letter of the present Governor of South Carolina, published in to-day's TIMES, calls for protest from every decent South Carolinian.

As member of an old family and daughter of the editor of a State paper I write my protest.

Gov. Blease was elected by the ignorant riffraff. Five candidates and the Prohibition issue split the decent vote and brought him in. Every newspaper editor and every voter of means and education who regarded the welfare of the State was opposed to his election. And they are more opposed to him to-day, after eight months' affliction. He has emptied the jails not only of "Yankees" and "niggers" but of many other chosen friends. He uses the language of the gutter with great fluency. We have had to accustom ourselves to it within the State, but I am sorry to see it reach New York.

I am not now concerned with the question of the burning of Columbia. We do not require either Blease or the editor of THE TIMES to inform us about that. Sherman has gone to his account to answer for the "hell" he helped so well to make.

But I am concerned with the bad manners and bad taste (to say nothing else) of our demagogue Executive. I regret that he represents the State temporarily.

PETIGRU.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Gov. Blease is regarded in Charleston, Columbia, &c., as the comic relief in the tragic history of my State, and his unconscious humor is much better than the glowing views and sayings of other Governors. His personal courage is all right, (at long range,) but for immediate action, right on the spot, he is more of a diplomat than a warrior, as was proved by his unfortunate encounter with the Rev. J. Oliver Krapp at the Grand Central Hotel in Columbia, and he certainly got a shade the worst of it in a later altercation with Billy Kersands.

He calls all editors in his State liars and kindred names, so you may imagine what they say and think of him, but it is for the people of the North to be more generous and overlook his mental deficiencies. Hope I am not bothering you too much.

C. AMORY BRUCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After reading the very undignified letter to THE TIMES from Gov. Blease of South Carolina it occurred to me that the quotation by Goethe, "What is the best government? That which teaches us to govern ourselves," might well be referred to his Excellency.

STUPID "CONSERVATION.".

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the First Lake of Fulton Chain a distinguished citizen of another State has owned a camp for perhaps forty years. The beavers are now on his shores and have cut down upward of sixty trees, most of them of considerable size and some of them large. Every night they are carrying on their destructive work. The law of this State not only gives this man no protection, but threatens him also with heavy damages if he interferes with the pests in any way.

This is conservation! Sixty trees cut down, a beautiful spot being ruined, a man's property destroyed, and no relief offered by our State Department but the hope that changing conditions may lead the creatures to move elsewhere—to destroy the property of some one else, I assume! But the beavers are preserved. Two have become eight, and our legislation is justified.

It is said that a little northward these skillful creatures have so built their dams as to flood State lands and destroy the standing timber. Men may not do this—but beavers! What is beneath all this? Some shortsighted, vapid, unbalanced sentiment? Or is the beaver more precious to us than our trees? What about justice to the man who faces destruction of his Summer home? When sentiment resists justice and binds the hands of State officials is not "conservation" ridiculous, and is there not a call for common "horse" sense?

The Grand Central Porters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There appeared in last Sunday's edition of your esteemed paper, over the signature of one Laurence V. P. Schwab of Sharon, Conn., a letter (if indeed it may be dignified by such a name) in which the gentleman from the hayseed district sees fit to find fault with that vast army of hard-working, industrious citizens who earn their daily bread by assisting passengers on their arrival at this great metropolis.

The gentleman evidently does not consider that the working classes have a right to live. If he were familiar with city life he would know that the attendants at the Grand Central Station do an immense amount of good. Who knows but that the gentleman himself did not appear weak and unable to cope with his luggage, and therefore received offer of assistance from the despised attendants.

As a graduate of Tuskegee I feel it my duty to explain to the public and to the gentleman in particular that the great number of citizens who carry people's baggage have sense enough not to offer assistance except to persons who need it, and if the gentleman was annoyed by repeated offers doubtless he required it, although unconscious of the fact.

Cheating Again with Measures.

I have within a week been given dishonest weight on butter at three grocery stores. This indicates two things, viz.: (1) That the Bureau of Weights and Measures has abandoned its strenuous work of last year, and (2) that housekeepers are too easy-going. If a tenth of the buyers of foodstuffs would even occasionally test the weight of their purchases and politely request the dealer to send for them and return correct weight it would accomplish more than all the bureau's Inspectors and help remove one very palpable cause of the "high cost of living."

M'CREA TELLS OF ALASKA'S RESOURCES

SEES WEALTH IN FISHERIES

Intelligent Prospectors, Good Trails, and New Mining Laws, He Says, Would Help Development.

President McCrea of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who returned several days ago from a trip to Alaska, takes issue with the more or less flattering reports that have reached the United States of the value of Alaskan coal. If, as he says, he has been correctly informed, the present value of Alaskan coal is not so great as the people of the United States have been led to believe.

Mr. McCrea says that the great value of Alaska lies in its mineral resources and fisheries. He said:

"Alaska's population is about 60,000 and her needs are:

"First—Intelligent mineral prospectors.

"Second—The opening up of main trails by the Government, which will enable prospecting to be done with reasonable safety, and without too great hardships from the standpoint of the transportation of food supplies.

"Third—Mining laws that will insure the prospector such salable title for his findings as will make the business of prospecting remunerative and attractive.

"Fourth—Laws that will make the discoveries of prospectors sufficiently attractive to capital to purchase and develop them.

"Those discoveries I would divide into two classes: Placer mines and roof or quartz mines.

"As I understand it, the laws in regard to the former are in a general way sufficient, although open to much clearer definition. Placer discoveries can, as a rule, be developed by the finders, and what is needed in connection with them is the building of trails to be used by prospectors as base lines over which to draw their supplies and forward their output.

"In regard to roof or quartz mining, the first necessity is the development of the Bonanza copper mines. I believe they were discovered by a party of prospectors, who sold them to a party of capitalists, who in turn realized a handsome profit through a sale to the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate, which syndicate, in order to make the mines accessible, had to invest in the neighborhood of $20,000,000 by building 200 miles of the Copper River & Northwestern Railroad.

"In regard to the development of Alaskan coal, the first difficulty, to my mind, is the finding of a market. So far as present home consumption is concerned, this tonnage would be too small an item to justify development, and therefore the general market must be depended upon to absorb the output, and when the cost of placing the coal on cars at the mines, interest on the cost of a railroad from the mines to tidewater, the cost of maintaining and operating the railroad, which will have but a comparatively small tonnage, are taken into consideration, I do not see how they are going to produce coal at a sufficiently attractive profit in competition with the fuel oil of California and coal from the island of Vancouver.

"As to its timber resources, there may be, and no doubt is, some good timber, but none that I saw had any value. It was small, and so brashy as not to be depended upon. In fact, most of the timber used in the construction of the Copper River Railroad and the wharves and villages we passed was shipped in by water from Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia."

Mr. McCrea returned by way of Canada, which country, he said, was enjoying an era of prosperity. He was averse to discussing conditions as they at present exist in the United States. He admitted, however, that business was dull, and that the people were very much in doubt concerning the effect of probable tariff changes and the changes that may be brought about by the coming Presidential election.

BRYAN CALLS ON ROOSEVELT.

Afterward They Both Scouted Idea That They Talked of a New Party.

Rumors of a deep, dark political plot in which Col. W. J. Bryan and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, both editors, were prominently concerned circulated in the vicinity of The Outlook office at Twenty-third Street and Fourth Avenue yesterday afternoon. It all started when the editor of The Commoner was seen going up the elevator in the direction of the office of the contributing editor of The Outlook.

Straightway it was figured out that the two Colonels had put their heads together for the purpose of concocting an entirely new party and that a ticket reading something like Roosevelt and Bryan might be a possibility next year.

"No," said Mr. Roosevelt with a loud laugh when this was explained to him. "Mr. Bryan and I have had quite a nice visit. We had a general talk on interesting subjects. I was only one of several Mr. Bryan came up here to see. That is all."

"The facts are these," said Mr. Bryan at the Hoffman House later. "I met Mr. Roosevelt on a Long Island road the other day and he invited me to call upon him at The Outlook office. I dropped in on him and met several people. We just talked about things in general."

"Have you read Mr. Roosevelt's article on the peace treaties?" Mr. Bryan was asked.

"Well, I've read enough of it to make some comment," he replied, "and I would like to say this: I recognize that there is force in one of Mr. Roosevelt's criticisms, namely, to allow a tribunal to decide what questions shall be arbitrated. I do not feel, however, the fear he does about a mistake being made. I would be willing to risk the treaty as it is, but I do not regard the clause objected to as merely material to the treaty. I think it could be stricken out without greatly weakening the treaty. I would be in favor of eliminating that clause if necessary for the ratification of the treaty, provided the clause regarding investigation is sufficiently broad.

"There is a clause in the treaty providing for the investigation of questions whether submitted to arbitration or not. I believe that investigation will in almost every case result in a peaceful settlement of the difficulties. I am not sure that the clause is quite as strong as it ought to be. If we can provide by treaty that every question, no matter what its character, shall be submitted for investigation before any declaration of war commencing hostilities, we can safely leave the countries to act independently after the report is made."

LONDON SUBWAYS PECULIAR.

General Manager Hedley Admires, but Won't Imitate, Their Methods.

A subway system conducted as in Paris and London would not be tolerated in New York, in the opinion of Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, who reached home yesterday on the White Star liner Cedric. He explained that there was no way by which our system could be compared to those abroad, as on the other side they did not have the same problems to solve and they did not have to handle such crowds as we have here.

"They have no guards on the trains, and the passengers open and close the doors," he said. "They have to trust to the honesty of the passenger, for a man in London can purchase a third-class ticket and, after passing on to the platform, can get into whatever class car he wishes.

"When the conductor thinks everybody is comfortable, he steps out, waves a little green flag, and the train starts. If such a method were attempted in New York the trains would never get away from the stations," he added with a smile. "It's a great scheme, but it would not do in New York."

Commenting on the business situation in England, Mr. Hedley said that labor troubles had brought dull business. He believes the English workingman is right in his demands, because he is poorly paid. Some day, he predicted, there would be an upheaval and labor would come into its own.

Mr. Hedley was accompanied by Frank C. Hedley, his son.

BERKSHIRE SOCIETY AT THE HUNT BALL

MANY BEAUTIFUL TOILETS

Dance Preceded by Dinners at Country Places—The Guests—Other Events in the Colony.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 8.—Spencer P. Shotter of Savannah, Ga., opened his great English manor house to-night for the third time for the hunt ball that precedes yearly the race meeting of the Berkshire Hunt. Mr. Shotter had a large company of friends from New York and Savannah for the event, and they included Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Carmichael, Misses Carmichael, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Owens, Gordon Haynes of Savannah, Miss Annie Malone, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Hamilton of New York.

The ball was held as the climax of a series of large dinners at country places. Those who entertained before the ball were Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards Spencer, Dr. and Mrs. Henry P. Jaques, Miss Mary De Peyster Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham.

No attempt was made to decorate the beautiful house other than a suggestive touch here and there of the hunt, the race meeting, and the season. In the entrance hall, where the reception committee received, is a magnificent white marble fountain around which were arranged dwarf palms and flowering begonias. Leaning against the white enamel paneling of the hall were distinctive branches of scarlet and gold foliage, the soft maple leaves in the first burst of color flaming and glittering against the white background with wonderful effect.

Mrs. Henry Hollister Pease, chairman of the Ball Committee, received the guests. She was assisted by Mrs. David Turner Dana, Miss Isabel Shotter, the elder daughter of Mr. Shotter, who had hurried home from Europe for the function, and Miss Kate Cary. From 10 until 11 o'clock the reception was almost continuous, most of the guests having come from some one of the many large dinners which had preceded the dancing. It was the first large event of the Lenox season, and consequently the first view of many magnificent toilets. Dancing, which had almost become a lost art in Lenox since bridge took its hold as entertainment, appeared to-night to have as many devotees as in the days when the Assembly Hall was built in Lenox for the purpose. More young people were at the ball than at any of its seven predecessors, and in consequence it was one of the liveliest balls held on the night prior to the Berkshire Hunt Race Meeting.

Some of the guests received by Mrs. Pease and her party were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hollister Pease and their house guest, James Gaunt; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham, with their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Eben Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Ross W. Whistler, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Turnure; Mr. and Mrs. Byam K. Stevens, with their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Allen; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Livingston Lee, Mr. and Mrs. George Baty Blake, with their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Blake; Mr. and Mrs. Julian Codman, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Delafield, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos De Heredia, Mr. and Mrs. William B. O. Field, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Greenleaf, Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster, the Rev. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sedgwick, with their guest, Miss Jane Sedgwick, of Rome, Italy.

Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shields Clarke and Miss Alma Clarke, with Mr. and Mrs. James A. McCrea; Mr. and Mrs. Melville Davisson Post, Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Gilder, Miss Dorothea Gilder, George De Kay Gilder, Dr. and Mrs. Henry P. Jaques, with Mrs. Frank Ware; Mr. and Mrs. William Pollock.

Marshall R. Kernochan, Percy R. Pyne, Buell Hollister, Tucker Burr, Miss Aleid Schenck, Frederick Schenck, Richard Mortimer, Jr., Fulton Cutting, Miss Mary De Peyster Cary, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., Miss Babel Choate, Miss Dorothea Draper, Mrs. George De Gersdorf, Miss Jessica Bishop, Miss Nora Iasigi, with her guest, Miss Alice Grant; Misses Mary and Margaret Franks, Mr. and Mrs. William Du Nuys Perrine, with M. Preston Watson; Miss Lisa Suydam, Mr. and Mrs. S. Warren Sturgis, Miss Ethel Brooks, Miss Gertrude Parsons, and Miss Heloise Meyer.

Mrs. Robert A. Perrine and M. Parish Watson of New York arrived at Hotel Aspinwall to-day to join Mr. and Mrs. William De Nuys Perrine, who are spending the Autumn in Lenox.

CANNON TO RUN AGAIN.

Denounces Insurgents and Indorses Taft's Tariff Vetoes.

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 8.—Former Speaker Cannon is again a candidate for Congress, and in making his announcement this afternoon he attacks the ranks of the insurgents and so-called progressive element of his party. He asks for a renomination and election on his record as a Republican made during his forty years' service in the House. He declares Republican defines his politics, and requires no such adjective as insurgent or progressive before the word or any "ism" after it to let the world know where he stands.

Mr. Cannon practically comes out flat-footed for President Taft for a renomination and election. In indorsing the President's stand on the Democratic tariff measures which he vetoed Mr. Cannon says:

"Tariff measures will be large issues in next year's campaign. The Democrats have been playing politics pure and simple. They had a lot of tariff bills that were for campaign purposes exclusively. They passed them hurriedly and without proper information. They were measures which, had they become laws and had they gone into effect, would have produced financial depression and brought strikes and made for unrest generally.

"President Taft very properly vetoed these measures, and I indorsed his veto most heartily. Mr. Taft has grown wonderfully in the favor of the people in the last thirty days. He has strengthened the Republican Party everywhere by standing for the policies of the party by these vetoes."

Senator Wagner Is Recovering.

Rumors that Senator Robert F. Wagner, majority leader in the State Senate, was in a grave condition following an operation for appendicitis which he underwent Wednesday morning, were contradicted yesterday by Dr. Joseph Wiemer, who performed the operation. The reports were so persistent that they reached Gov. Dix, who telephoned this afternoon from Albany to the Rockaway Beach Hospital at Far Rockaway to learn the truth. "Senator Wagner is making an excellent recovery," said Dr. Wiemer last night. "Dr. Baun, his attending physician, and I have just examined him and he could not be making better progress."

Mrs. Louis Marshall Ream, the daughter-in-law of Norman D. Ream, one of the best-known capitalists in the country, is waiting at her apartment, 206 West Fifty-second Street, for the return of her husband, who has gone to get his father's consent to move to the Hotel Gotham. Until a week ago, Mrs. Ream was Miss Eleanor Pendleton, a pretty stage dancer. She met young Ream, who is 24 and three years out of Princeton, at the Château des Beaux Arts, Huntington, L. I., this Summer, and they were married a week ago in Hoboken.

Since then the two have made their home in her apartment, preparatory to breaking the news to father. That was done yesterday. And now the couple intend to start in on a happy life together. Young Ream is an assistant secretary in the offices of the New York Trust Company. The bride is 23 years old, and comes from Virginia. She has appeared with Elsie Janis in "The Slim Princess," and also in "The Hoyden," "The Fair Co-ed," and "The Bachelor Belles." She intends to leave the stage.

THOMPSON, Conn., Sept. 8.—"I have nothing to say," said Norman B. Ream at his Summer home here to-day in declining to discuss in any way the marriage of his son, Louis M. WOMAN MAYOR ON CRUSADE.

Hunnewell Men Pay Fines for Sunday Card Playing.

HUNNEWELL, Kan., Sept. 8.—The reform of Hunnewell, the pet project of Mayor Ella Wilson's heart, has begun. Four men of this town were arrested recently by the order of the County Attorney, at Mrs. Wilson's request, charged with playing cards on Sunday. One of the four is a Deputy Sheriff.

To-day they pleaded guilty and paid fines of $3 each. The money goes to the City Treasury, and will be used to carry on the crusade for a "righteous" Hunnewell, which Mrs. Wilson promised when she ran for office last Spring. The crusade had not made much progress up to the time the four were arrested, because of the refusal of the City Council to support Mrs. Wilson or even to meet when she called a session.

"My present duty is to keep a secret, and, though a woman, I shall keep it," was the reply the Mayor made upon her arrival here to-day to all questions concerning the result of her conference in Kansas City, Kan., yesterday, with C. W. Trickett, special attorney appointed by Gov. W. R. Stubbs to restore peace between the woman executive and her obdurate Council of men.

So Hunnewell, for months without an effective government, now awaits the meeting of the Council next Monday, when the secret is expected to come out. From Mayor Wilson's confident manner it is believed that the question of dealing with the rebellious Council will be solved at this meeting.

AMES'S PLAYHOUSE IN TIMES SQUARE

Plans of Winthrop Ames, lately Director of The New Theatre, will put another playhouse into the Times Square district within a year and bring into the theatrical business here a new producer of plays. Mr. Ames has preserved complete silence about his intended venture, but it is expected that the new theatre will be located in West Forty-sixth Street, just off Broadway, and not more than a block away from the new New Theatre, now in process of construction.

Mr. Ames's theatre will be the smallest in the city. Its capacity will be less than 300 people, and it will be constructed with the view of producing plays of the modern, intimate type. It will be modeled after the Camera Theatre, Berlin. Mr. Ames will sail for Europe in a few days to obtain plays that will be suited to the small auditorium. He has several plays by American authors already under consideration.

When The New Theatre, in Central Park West, was built Mr. Ames was chosen as its Managing Director by the founders. He is wealthy, and for many years he had been interested in the drama in Boston before he came here to assume control of the endowed playhouse. Before that theatre opened he said that it would prove unsuited to any plays except those of a spectacular nature, and two years of experiment convinced the founders that he was right. When The New Theatre closed last Spring and it was decided to erect a new small playhouse to continue the idea, it was known that Mr. Ames would not be the director again.

At that time he stated that he would take two or more of the most successful of The New Theatre plays and send them on tour. This plan is under way, and before he sails for Europe he will have put out one company in "The Piper," with Edith Wynne Matthison in the title rôle that she originated at The New Theatre, and one company in "Don." Later in the season he may send out another company in "The Piper," with a man in the leading part.

THEATRES DROP ORCHESTRAS

Two Chicago Houses Resent Ultimatum of Musicians' Union.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Two Chicago theatres of the first class have dispensed with orchestras.

The cause of the absence of music is said by the managers to be the blare of the trombone in the orchestra pit. The musicians, however, say the objection to the trombone is only an excuse. They assert that the managers are trying to ruin their union.

The Chicago Federation of Musicians recently passed a rule that the orchestras in all of the big Chicago theatres must consist of eleven players and a leader, or, as an alternative, they must go without music entirely. Thus ultimatum was presented to the theatre men.

"With the exception of musical comedy productions we have never used more than seven men," the manager of one of the theatres said. "Furthermore, we do not intend to.

"So far we have done well without music. There has not been a single complaint."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Florence Shirley, who has been playing juvenile roles with the Castle Square Stock Company in Boston, has been engaged for Blanche Ring's company in "The Wall Street Girl."

Henry B. Harris has made arrangements with Daniel Frohman to bring Edgar Selwyn's play, "The Arab," to the Lyceum Theatre on Sept. 18, following the engagement there of "Thy Neighbor's Wife." The company in the play includes the author, Mr. Selwyn, and Edna Baker, Ethel Von Waldron, Edward R. Mawson, Walter Wilson, Edward See, Joseph Rawley, and Sam Russell.

Arthur Hopkins, who is known in the business side of the theatrical world, is to produce a new play, "The Fatted Calf," of his own writing, early next month. Robert McWade, Jr., Julia Hanchette, Lowell Sherman, Marjorie Wood, Frank Sheridan, Mary Cross, and May Walker have been engaged for the company.

George Arliss, who arrived from Europe on the Mauretania Thursday night, began rehearsals of 'Disraeli" at the Century Theatre yesterday. Ian MacLaren, an English leading man, will make his first American appearance with the company, that will include Elsie Leslie, Margaret Dale, Herbert Standing, Marguerite St. John, Alexander Calvert, Oscar Ayde, Leila Repton, Charles Carey, and Frances Reeve.

TELL OF AUTO STEALING.

Two Youths of Good Families Thought They Saw Profit in It.

The automobiles in the possession of Clarence Rausch and Van Ness Richards when they were arrested in Yonkers on Thursday night have been identified as the property of Charles E. Taylor of 200 Clermont Avenue, the Bronx, and William Lee of 564 Ninth Street, Brooklyn. The youthful prisoners, it develops, are both of good families. Richards is the son of John S. Richards of 71 East Ninety-second Street, New York, a Director in a lumber company. Rausch stated yesterday that his father is Abraham Rausch, assistant clerk to the Board of Assessors of New York.

"Some time ago Richards said to me," said Rausch yesterday, "'I have a good graft.' I asked him what kind.

"'We can make money fast and get it easily,' Richards replied. 'We will steal automobiles, spend a few hundred dollars in altering them and then sell them.'

"I fell for the scheme," continued Rausch, "and about six weeks ago we picked up the first car at Travers Island. On Labor Day we went in that car to the Brighton Beach Race Track, where we stored it alongside another of the same make. When we left I rode away in one and Richards in the other."

A few weeks ago, Rausch said, he and Richards applied for lodging in the old French boarding house of Adolph Villare, in the outlying part of Yonkers. They obtained the use of the barn. A few days ago Villare became suspicious when he found the young men had repainted and changed the appearance of one of the automobiles they had brought to the barn. He notified the police, and a squad swooped down on the barn last night.

In spite of the confession of Rausch, Richards still insists he is innocent. He says he purchased one car from Rausch for $450, and did so in good faith. Rausch was formerly interested in aviation.

ILL WOMEN IN AUTO SMASH.

Driving Slowly In a Taxicab When Big Machine Struck It.

Two women who were convalescing from an illness were in an automobile crash last night at Riverside Drive and Eighty-ninth Street. They were in a taxicab owned by the Hotel Belmont Taxicab Company. Charles Powers was driving, and, owing to the health of his passengers, was going slowly along Riverside Drive, when an automobile coming in the opposite direction, driven and owned by Alexander Harrison of 54 East Eighty-eighth Street, struck the taxicab. In the automobile was Mr. Harrison's sister-in-law, Mrs. D. H. Harrison of 589 Amsterdam Avenue. She was thrown to the street, but escaped with a few bruises.

The sick women, who refused to give their names, received a shock from the collision. They were taken home in another taxicab.

Detective Silverbower gave Powers and Harrison summonses to appear in West Side Court this morning. Both machines were badly damaged.

NO PLOT TO BRIBE JUDGE.

Lawyer's Charge in General Session Proves to be Unfounded.

Just before Judge Swann of General Sessions sentenced Francisco Amodeo, a macaroni maker of 324 East Sixth Street, to Sing Sing yesterday the prisoner's lawyer, Amos Evans, announced that Amodeo's brother-in-law, Laureno Rosalino of 41 First Street, had been swindled out of $200 by some one who claimed that he had bribed a Judge of General Sessions.

Amodeo was charged with shooting his brother-in-law, Giuseppe Locascio of 157 First Avenue, three times on the night of June 24 last in a family fight. He pleaded guilty to attempted assault. Judge Swann sentenced him to not less than one year and three months or more than two years in Sing Sing, but before he did so he had an investigation made into Mr. Evans's complaint and found that there was no ground for such a charge.

According to Evans, a group of Italians on the east side raised a fund of $200, which was given to Louis Farata, a photographer of 71 Mulberry Street, with instructions that he use it to have justice swayed in behalf of Amodeo. According to the understanding between Farata and those who raised the money, it was to go to Rosalino.

Investigation showed that before Evans came into the case another lawyer had been retained by the prisoner, and that a fund had been raised for the defense of Amodeo by his friends and intrusted to Farata, who was instructed to pay the money back if the prisoner was convicted. No mention was made of Rosalino in the agreement. The money is at present in an Italian bank on Mulberry Street, and according to the agreement will be paid back to the persons who contributed toward Amodeo's defense.

ANOTHER TOADSTOOL VICTIM.

Nicholas Marcia, an Italian contractor, living at 2,137 Arthur Avenue, the Bronx, was taken to Fordham Hospital last night, and it is said that he is suffering from poisoning resulting from eating toadstools which he thought to be mushrooms. There were several at a party given in honor of the daughter of a neighbor several days ago. Three of those who were present at the party have since died.

Marcia's condition became serious last night and he was taken to the hospital by Dr. Sheridan. He will probably die.

Nineteen persons have died in this city and its suburbs within two weeks from eating toadstools.

OLD PICKPOCKET SENTENCED

"Kid Carter," Now in His 72d Year, Trained Many Youths in His Art.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 8.—Known in many States under the alias of "Kid Carter," James Newman, notorious as a pickpocket, was to-day sentenced in the Mercer County Court to serve ten years in State prison on four charges of larceny from the person. With him was arraigned his twenty-year-old pal, Howard Steinberg, who was committed for five years.

Newman, who is now 71 years of age, has been following his criminal career since 1868, when he was sent to the Eastern Penitentiary in Pennsylvania for three years. In 1872 he was sentenced to Moyamensing Prison in Philadelphia for three years, and in 1890 to five years in the Trenton prison, coming back in 1904 for a three-year term. In 1909 he was sent to the Media Jail in Pennsylvania for a year; then to Moyamensing again for three months.

It is said that Newman has trained many youths in the art of picking pockets, sending them out to steal, he taking the greater share of their plunder.

U. S. TRANSPORT FIRE FOUGHT 72 HOURS

RELAYS OF SAILORS IN HOLD

Fuel Transferred to Navy Yard Wharf to be Placed Aboard Again Later—Vessel Not Harmed.

For seventy-two hours, until noon yesterday, fire smoldering somewhere in the coal bunkers of the United States transport Hancock, moored off the Brooklyn Navy Yard, kept the 700 sailors quartered there busy removing from the hold some 300 tons of coal to get to the seat of the trouble. Oddly enough, although the coal well down in the bottom of one of the six large bunkers was found to be partly charred and most of it quite warm, the framework of the bunker and the ship itself suffered no damage whatsoever, according to the official report. The fire is supposed to have started by spontaneous combustion.

The Hancock, which was formerly the old 6,000-ton Guion liner Arizona, a sister-ship of the Alaska, which was one of the first to make a six-day record across the Atlantic, was used by the Government as a transport in the Spanish War. Since 1903 she has been stationed at the Navy Yard as a receiving ship on which to quarter sailors awaiting transfer to various vessels. The Hancock is nearly thirty years old. She has been moored for some time just off the drill plain of the Navy Yard, not far from the Manhattan Bridge. Nearby lay the auxiliary colliers Ajax and Nero, and the battleship Alabama, which is undergoing repairs. Until yesterday, the yacht Dolphin, used by the Secretary of the Navy, was also lying near.

At 7 o'clock on Tuesday evening, the man on watch noticed an unusual warmth coming from the coal bunkers, aft in the hold, and thought he detected fumes of coal-gas and smoke. He reported the fact to Chief Boatswain Larsen, and he in turn to Capt. J. C. McDonald. The Captain assigned Executive Officer Washington and fifty men to go into the hold and investigate.

The pungent fumes, growing stronger and stronger, were finally traced to one of the six coal bunkers, but, despite the growing heat, there was no flame whatsoever discernible. The first squad of sailors shifted some of the coal, in order that it might cool off. But the fumes and the heat waxed stronger. Other gangs were sent down from time to time in the night, and all day Wednesday, to help move the coal and let the air filter into the bunkers. The first bunker was emptied in about eight hours, but the removal of coal continued all through the day and the day following. It was not completed until noon yesterday.

The transport had taken aboard nearly 400 tons on June 1, and at that time the coal had been drenched pretty heavily by rain. As it dried, the ship's officers believe, it gave forth gases which became ignited spontaneously, creating a slow fire that may have started several weeks ago. Half of the 300 tons remaining in the ship at the time of the discovery of the fire was transferred to a lighter which came alongside yesterday.

The remainder was thrown on the wharf near-by, and after it had been well aired and cooled was covered with a tarpaulin, preparatory to reshipping aboard the Hancock.

Executive Officer P. Washington said yesterday that the fire had caused absolutely no damage to the vessel, and had at no time shown flame or given rise to a feeling of alarm. There was no powder aboard the ship, he said, except some fifteen pounds of saluting powder stored well forward on the deck, as far as possible from the bunkers. This could have been removed in three minutes, but no reason was seen for removing it.

DR. THOMAS DWIGHT DEAD.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—Dr. Thomas Dwight, successor to Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes in the Parkman Professorship of Anatomy at Harvard University, and one of the most active leaders of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, died this afternoon at his Summer home in Nahant. He was 67 years of age.

Dr. Dwight for years was acknowledged America's foremost anatomist. He was connected with many well-known Harvard clubs. Dr. Dwight was born in Boston Oct. 13, 1843, the son of Thomas and May Collins Dwight. He entered Harvard in 1862, graduating in 1866, and obtained a degree of M. D. one year later. In 1872 he took his degree as Master of Arts. He was connected with the Association of American Anatomists, of which he at one time was President, and the American Society of Naturalists.

In 1883 he married Miss Sarah C. Pasigi of Boston, and shortly after became a convert to the Catholic faith. From the time of his conversion he gave deep study to the relation of the practical sciences to speculative philosophy.

In addition to his coal interests he was a Director of many Pittsburgh banks and trust companies. Mr. Robbins was until a short time ago affiliated with J. THOMAS E. CRIMMINS DEAD.

In the business in which the two brothers were long associated John D. Crimmins became the better known, as he was the financier and man of affairs, while Thomas E. Crimmins was the chief factor in actual operations. Both grew up in the business, which was founded by their father, who came to this country from Ireland in 1840. The elder Crimmins saw in Thomas "a natural born contractor," and such he proved to be. He was a mechanical engineer by profession, and was the first man to use dynamite in rock blasting.

The business, already a large one, was turned over to the brothers in 1871, and the firm became the John D. and Thomas E. Crimmins Contracting Company. On the retirement of John D. Crimmins the name became the Thomas E. Crimmins Company. In 1902 Thomas Crimmins also retired from the contracting business and organized the Thomas Crimmins Real Estate and Construction Company.

Mr. Crimmins's contracting experience began when he was thirteen years old. Between school terms he was put to work by his father in charge of a gang engaged in filling and grading Fifty-ninth Street from Third to Fifth Avenue. He next worked under his father in making the excavations for the New York Central freight station at St. John's Park. Before he was twenty-one he was put in charge of the entire sewerage system of New York City, then about 350 miles in extent. In later years he had the reputation of being the best-posted man in the city on the topography of Manhattan Island, with its hidden swamps and quicksands. He was also an expert on labor-saving appliances connected with excavating work.

Mr. Crimmins was born in New York in 1851 and was educated in the public schools, the preparatory school of St. Francis Xavier, St. John's College at Fordham, and Seton Hall, N. J.

Mr. Crimmins took an active interest in politics, but only for fun, he said. He was a member of the County Democracy, but subsequently joined Tammany Hall, and for a short time he was associate leader of the Twentieth Assembly District. The post of Street Cleaning Commissioner was offered to him by Mayor Grant, but declined. He was a member of the Manhattan, Democratic, and New York Athletic Clubs, the Manhattan Boating Club, of which he had been President, the Contractors' Association, of which he had been President, and a number of other business organizations. He was fond of horses and was a volunteer fireman until the paid department was organized.

The funeral will be at 9:30 on Monday morning, and after services at St. Vincent Ferrer's Church, Sixty-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue, the body will be interred at Hunt's Point in the Bronx.

QUEENS MEN ATTACK THE NEW CHARTER

GOOD ROADS PLAN ADOPTED

The Queens County Chamber of Commerce met at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon and condemned the proposed new Charter for the city, proposing instead a revision of the old Charter and a submission of the changes to the voters at the next election. Committee reports on the various sections of the Charter were read. No discussion was permitted, and then this resolution was passed and copies authorized to be sent to Gov. Dix and Mayor Gaynor:

> Resolved, That we most respectfully ask his Excellency, the Governor of the State, and his Honor, the Mayor of the city, to favor only such legislation as will provide
> First—That the proposed revision of the Charter shall be made by the two committees of the Legislature, together with a representative body of citizens composed entirely or very largely of residents of the city, said body to be either elected at the election in November next or be appointed by the Mayor in such a way as may seem best; and
> Second—That the revision of the Charter when completed by the above-named body shall be submitted to the voters of the city for their approval in the same manner as the Constitution of the State, and all amendments thereto are submitted to the voters of the State.

G. Howland Leavitt, a wealthy resident of Flushing, who was appointed a committee to make a formal report on the condition of the roads in his county, read his report and made it clear that there were few worse roads in this country than the roads of Queens County. He said that he had covered practically the whole borough in his automobile with his friend, Joseph Dykes, checking off alll the bad sections on a map. Commenting on some of his difficulties in getting hasty action from the repair crew where repair was mostly needed, he said:

"There is a section of macadam on Hillside Avenue which for want of maintenance is going to pieces just as fast as it can. About five weeks ago I went to the borough officials and asked them to repair it immediately. They said that they would attend to it the very next day. But it hasn't been touched to this day. They gave me an excuse, however, and guess what it was.

"They said that unfortunately 90 per cent. of the highway employes lived in Long Island City, that the Controller only allowed them car fare in one direction, and that consequently the men refused to repair Hillside Avenue because it was too far from home for a pleasure walk."

In his formal report Mr. Leavitt said:

"We covered 311 miles of macadam and fifty miles of dirt road in representative sections of the borough, following a map of the Highway Department. We can safely say that we found less than forty miles of highway in good condition.

"The prospect that the sections are to be put in good repair out of the large moneys that the authorities have appropriated at the request of the citizens of Queens, to be spent by the city at large, will all go for naught unless some system is carried out, especially in these congested districts, to maintain the roads from the date they are accepted from the contractors. Ample material, competent foremen, and honest work is the remedy. Work has been attempted in the past that is actually useless at a great waste of the public's moneys.

"The farmers have just cause for their continued complaints, and so have the automobilists and general public. Yet we believe upon the completion of these main highways leading to Manhattan there will be less congestion, and traffic will be redistributed to the various arteries of traffic that have been closed to the public for almost two years."

The old macadam roads, he said, should be levelled, their holes filled with sand and stone, and a section hand put in charge of every mile or two to keep them in repair.

Mr. Leavitt said that $20 a day would provide for a pair of horses and three men working continuously on a five-mile stretch of road. His scheme for maintenance was approved of by the Chamber of Commerce and copies of Mr. Leavitt's report were ordered sent to the proper authorities, including the Controller and the Mayor.

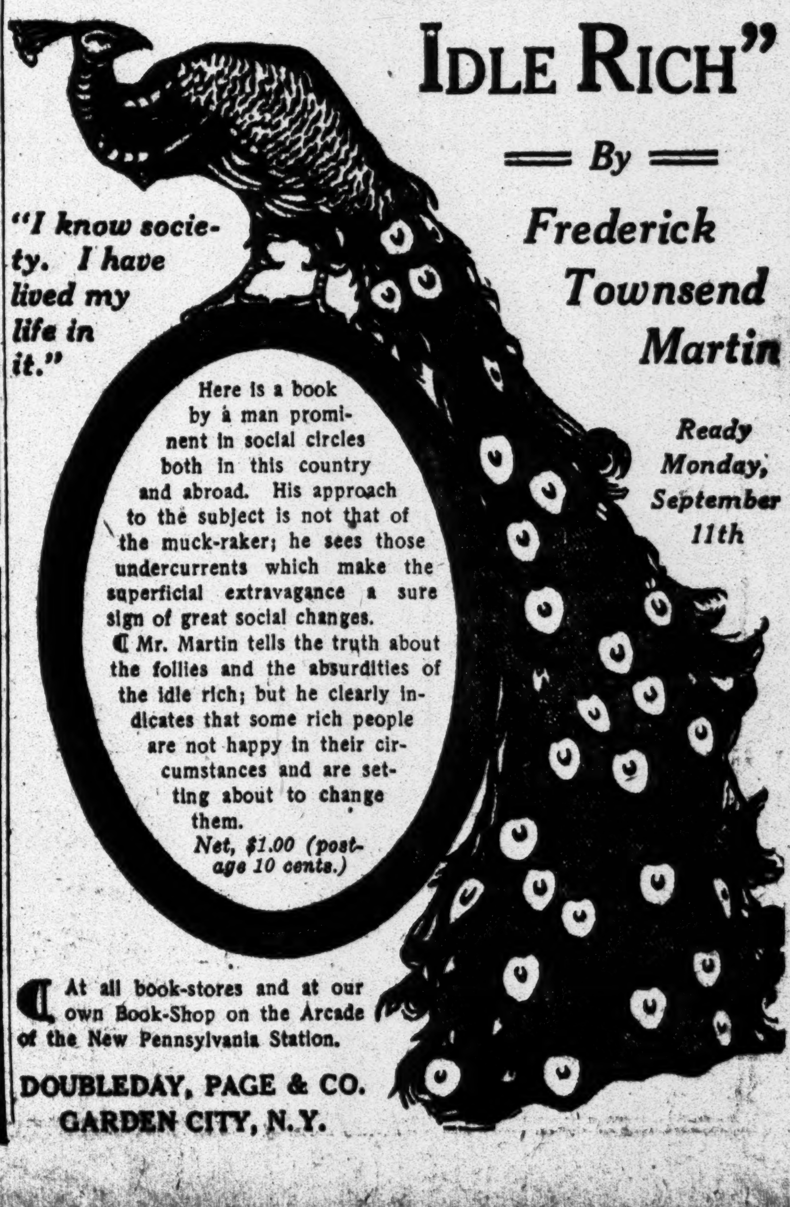
"The PASSING OF THE IDLE RICH"

By

Frederick Townsend Martin

Ready Monday, September 11th

"I know society. I have lived my life in it."



Here is a book by a man prominent in social circles both in this country and abroad. His approach to the subject is not that of the muck-raker; he sees those undercurrents which make the superficial extravagance a sure sign of great social changes.

Mr. Martin tells the truth about the follies and the absurdities of the idle rich; but he clearly indicates that some rich people are not happy in their circumstances and are setting about to change them.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

"John Carter," the young poet-convict who was recently pardoned from the Minnesota Penitentiary where he was serving a ten-year sentence for burglary, will return from his native England late this Fall to accept a position in this country as Prison Inspector. Interest in Carter's case was aroused by several poems, written by him from prison, which were published this Spring in The Century Magazine, Harper's Weekly, and other periodicals. It was found that the crime for which he was imprisoned was committed seven years ago, when he was 17 years old, and involved several mitigating circumstances. The movement for his release was headed by Robert U. Johnson, editor of The Century, and was indorsed by a number of prominent men throughout the country. At the time of his release in April Carter said that he expected to devote himself to music rather than to poetry, as he had already attained considerable proficiency as a clarinet and piano player. A volume of his poetry entitled "Hard Labor and Other Poems" will be published this Fall.

Roy Rolfe Gilson is living at Woodstock, Ulster County, where he recently completed a novel called "Ember Light," which will be published this Fall. It is understood that this book, described as the story of a home, is the first of a tetralogy of novels.

Mrs. Sarah P. McLean Greene has finished a novel called "The Long Green Road," which will be published this Fall. Mrs. Greene lives in Lexington, Mass., and is the author of "Cape Cod Folks," a novel that excited considerable interest when it first appeared some years ago.

William Hard, who has been writing a notable series of articles on the woman of the future, has moved from his home in Chicago to New York, where he has accepted a position on the editorial staff of Everybody's Magazine.

Helen A. Clarke, well known as the author of a series of appreciations and semi-biographical studies of some of our famous poets, will stay at her Summer home in Maine until late in the Fall. She is now at work on her next book, "Browning and His Century."

Victor L. Whitechurch, author of "The Canon in Residence," &c., is an Englishman, rector of Blewbury, Berks. He has been prominent in religious work in what is known as the "railway colony," and is an officer in the Royal Sussex Regiment.

Forbes Lindsay is making a three months' visit of exploration to the Isthmus of Panama. After inspecting the canal he expects to travel on horseback, by canoe, and on foot over a wide extent of territory in the southern part of the republic, with the object of making as thorough a survey as possible of the latter's natural resources. The material thus acquired Mr. Lindsay expects to use in his lectures next Winter. This is his fifth journey to the Isthmus.

Clayton Hamilton is lecturing at Chautauqua this season on "The Novel and the Drama." He has lately returned from a literary pilgrimage to the haunts of Stevenson and the localities of his stories, and is now at work on a life of Stevenson.

J. A. F. Orbaan, author of "Sistine Rome," is paying a brief visit to this country. Mr. Orbaan is Dutch by birth, and became a student of Italian history while a newspaper correspondent in Italy.

Dr. Halvdan Koht, professor at the University of Christiania, is preparing for the press a collection of the letters of Björnstjerne Björnson, who died last year.

Harry A. Franck schooled himself not to speak a word of English while traveling in Spain gathering material for his "Four Months Afoot" in that country. "I lived up to this resolution so well," he writes, "that I not only found myself doing all my mental arithmetic, &c., in Spanish, but had long and detailed dreams in that language. In fact, for three or four days after I got on the return ship English came decidedly hard to my tongue."

Prof. Edward Alsworth Ross acquired much of his intense and abiding interest in the problems of the Orient during his seven years' residence in California while a professor at Leland Stanford University. During the year 1910 he visited China, and spent six months studying Chinese society in all its phases—religion, education, industry, opium, the position of the Chinese women. During his investigations he traveled over 10,000 miles. A summary of the conclusions reached in these investigations is contained in Prof. Ross's forthcoming book, "The Changing Chinese."

Although in London they say: "You know, everybody has left town, and London is no more than an empty shadow of itself at this time," Mrs. Corra Harris, author of "The Circuit Rider's Wife" and "The Recording Angel," the latter to be brought out this Fall, and her daughter, Mrs. Harry Leech, write that the British metropolis has been a kind hostess, and that they have been able to see a great deal of British life. While Mrs. Harris remains in London Mrs. Leech is making a tour through Scotland and Ireland.

Rex Beach, whose new novel, "The Ne'er-Do-Well" has just been published, goes back and forth between his home at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., and New York. "I find it easier," he says, "to do my work in New York, with all the racket of elevated and trolley, than out in the stillness here, where the bark of a neighbor's dog at night sets you so crazy you want to commit murder.

"I can't work here. I'd rather swim or fish. There's an old fellow lives across the lake that I go fishing with, and he and I are great tillicums—that's Indian, pure Siwash, for pals or chums. Of course, I'd rather swim or fish than write. But writing is a good game. Such a good game it's a wonder to me the police don't get after us for taking money for it.

"I don't believe in seeking atmosphere, color, and that sort oif thing. I look upon writing just as I would on any other kind of work. Start in and take your dinner pail along is my notion of it."

The heat of a few weeks ago was greater, said Mr. Beach, than anything he had felt in Central America or Panama.

"There's no use talking, it's a whole lot easier to keep warm in Alaska than it is to keep cool in or around New York when a spell like this hits us. It's pretty tough to have to write about your hero getting his feet frozen in an Alaskan blizzard when you're suffering yourself from an aggravated case of prickly heat."

Anthony Hope, whose last novel, "Mrs. Maxon Protests," was published during the Summer, in spite of his numerous promises to the contrary, has never revisited America since his trip nine years ago, which resulted in his marriage. He takes great pleasure, however, in the society of his American friends in London, and enjoys showing them some of the little-known picturesque bits of the city he knows so thoroughly. Divorce in London society, it is said, is even more common than in this country. It is natural, therefore, that Anthony Hope could not escape the all-pervading influence of the question in writing "Mrs. Maxon Protests."

That inveterate climber of the Andes, Annie S. Peck, is again in Peru, where she is looking for the highest peak in America upon which to show her prowess. On her last trip Miss Peck climbed a mountain which she claimed had an altitude of 24,000 feet, thus giving her the supremacy as a mountain climber. Her rival, however, Mrs. Workman, contested her claim, sent a French civil engieer to measure Miss Peck's mountain, and found that it was only 22,000 feet in altitude. Miss Peck cheerfully acquiesced in this engineer's verdict, at the same time declaring that she would beat Mrs. Workman's record if she had to climb Mount Everest to do so. Incidentally Miss Peck is again climbing mountains in Peru in order to provide herself with material for another book.

HAROLD MAC GRATH

Author of THE GOOSE GIRL HALF A ROGUE
Author of THE MAN ON THE BOX THE LURE OF THE MASK
Author of A SPLENDID HAZARD
Author of THE GREY CLOAK

HAROLD MAC GRATH is the magician up-to-date. He waves his wand and straightway has us in his spell. With the first sentence of each new story he makes us his willing slaves, fast bound under the sway of his potent fascination.

* * *

IT is always true of his latest book that it is—to use the Kipling phrase—"another story." Always the plot is fresh and the characters offer types as new as they are interesting. THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD is further than any of its predecessors from the hackneyed and trite.

* * *

ONE may perhaps best describe THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD as an adventure romance. The scene opens in Cairo, continues in the desert and ends in New York.

* * *

THE plot, starting with the theft of a rare and holy rug by an American adventurer from its Moslem owner and sold to an American collector, is MacGrath's most salient stroke of originality.

* * *

THE reader follows eagerly the fortunes of the little group of Americans who meet dangers amid the strange surroundings of the Near East, and who come home only to be involved in more dangerous and remarkable complications.

* * *

ALL is told in MacGrath's most captivating manner—that sparkling rapid-fire style which has made him the pre-eminently popular romancer.

CLOSER RELATION NEEDED BETWEEN SCHOOL AND HOME

The Co-operation of Parents and Teachers and a Much Better Understanding Between Them Should Be Established.

By THOMAS STOCKHAM BAKER,
Director of The Tome School for Boys.

THE time will come when the relations between the schools and the homes will be much closer than they are at the present time. While public school men are working on new courses of study, new methods of teaching, new systems of supervision, it would be well to pause and ask whether the teachers and supervisors and Superintendents are not neglecting or underestimating an ally which might help appreciably in their plans for the improvement of their pupils.

In casting about to find an explanation for the inefficiency of the schools, very little has been said of the inefficiency of the homes and the inefficiency of the parents who fail to co-operate with the schools. Only a part of the student's work is done in school, so that a good share (and in some respects the more important share) of supervising must be done at home. Many parents have very pronounced ideas about what their boys should study, and at the beginning of the school year they devote not a little thought to the question of their course of study. When the boy is once started on his way, however, they dismiss the matter and they are at a loss to explain the boy's failure. The teachers are blamed, the methods used in the schools are blamed, whereas the chief fault may lie in the homes. If the parents would see that the teachers' instructions were carried out definitely and systematically the reasons for much criticism would disappear. If the parents would devote less time to thinking about what their children study and to how they study the results would be more satisfactory.

If one were to ask the headmaster of a well-conducted boarding school what he considered the most important part of the school day, it is probable that he would answer "the study hours," the time spent by his boys in the preparation of their tasks. He might regard these periods as being of even greater importance than the hours spent in the classroom. Why? Because it is at this time that the boy, relieved of the immediate supervision of his teacher, should learn how to study—he should learn the art of mental concentration.

There are certain formulas with which teachers, and especially headmasters, become very familiar in their relations with the parents of their pupils. They are repeated over and over again, so that what seems to the father or mother as the particular and original weakness of his or her boy, becomes in the mind of the headmaster the chief failing of three-fourths of his pupils. One of the best known of the utterances of the fathers and mothers when they bring a boy to a new school runs something like this: "I believe John has a good mind and he could do good work if he only knew how to study." This then is the crux of the whole question of teaching and of conducting schools. "A teacher is successful in proportion as his pupils learn how to use their minds independently; in proportion as they learn "how to study."

The headmaster of a boarding school works out a carefully arranged daily programme. A certain number of hours are given over to classwork or laboratory work, a certain number of hours to play, and, finally, certain definite periods are assigned for private study. Usually nearly the entire period between the evening meal and bedtime is reserved for this private study. Nothing whatever is allowed to break in upon the boy's preparation of his daily tasks. The attempt is made to avoid all forms of interruption or unsettlement or unrest. It is a time of complete quiet, so that the boy's mind may have as few distractions as possible.

Many schoolmasters employ a system by which the boy is allowed to do his work in his own room and in his own way, provided the results are satisfactory to his teachers. If he fails in his work, however, he is required to pass his study hours in a study hall under the direction of a teacher, who gives him whatever assistance may seem necessary, but, above all, the master uses every available means to keep him at his work. No system, however perfect it may be, can make a student of a boy in a day. Weeks and months, sometimes years, are required before he learns to apply himself and concentrate his mind on his tasks, but the continued effort to fix his attention, if it is kept up day after day, cannot fail to have an effect upon the student's ability to do successfully the work that is assigned to him.

If boarding schools spend so much time upon the work outside of the classroom and if the results are so very beneficial, it would seem that the day schools, and especially the public schools, should do something to help their pupils when they are released from their immediate supervision. This cannot be accomplished without the co-operation of the home with the schools.

A sustained effort should be made by every public school system to point out to the parents how they can help to further the interests of their children. They should be told that no amount of intelligence and good intentions on the part of the teachers can make students out of their children unless they do regularly a certain amount of work in the evenings at home. The children should be told definitely the extent of their tasks and their parents should be advised that a certain number of hours should be spent every evening in study and that if the pupil does less than this amouut he cannot make the progress which might be expected.

Will the parents enter into such a plan? There are those who will say: "Oh, but I do not have time to watch the schooling of my boy. I can't promise to see that he remains in his room in the evening. I can't stop him from having his friends come to the house. If he wants to go to the theatre it is almost impossible for me to say no." If this is the case the sooner such a father sends his boy to a well-organized boarding school the better. It is the business of such a school to do just what the father says he cannot do, and its success is in proportion to the faithfulness with which it fulfills this duty. On the other hand, there are many who are eager to help their children and who will gladly receive intelligent advice.

It would be well for all the public school systems in the country to make a concerted effort to arouse public sentiment to the urgent need of a closer relationship between schools and homes. If parents would assist in such a movement some of the uncertainty and indefiniteness in our present educational system would disappear. So long as the homes fail to support the schools, the teachers and supervisors will be continually changing their courses of study. They recognize the impossibility of their pupils making a success of the old-fashioned courses which include such topics as Latin, mathematics, modern languages, and which require laborious study outside of class. They yield to the temptation to make up courses which make little demand on the homes. They introduce such topics as manual training, the host of so-called practical subjects which may be done directly under their supervision. The topics may be important, but they crowd out the things which furnish the rigorous drill which is essential to the proper development of every boy.

It is the opinion of the writer that the so-called practical tendencies of modern education are to be deplored, and they cannot be kept within reasonable bounds until this better understanding between parents and teachers is established. Parents must realize that teaching is not a kind of hypodermic process by which knowledge is injected into the heads of their children. The teacher can only present the information, (some more clearly and intelligently than others,) but the work of acquisition must be done by the pupils themselves. When the true relationship between the schools and the homes is established, educators will be able to agree more readily upon what must be studied. The modern tendency has been to make everything as easy as possible for the pupils, whereas the object of education should be to present topics which call for the exercise of the pupil's fullest powers of concentration and attention. There is very little danger that the American boy will overwork himself. The distractions to which he is subjected are more wearing and more dangerous to his physical development than the tasks which any schoolmaster is likely to set.

The pressure to make things easier is coming from all sides. The percentage of failures in the schools is too high, we are told. The requirements for admission to the leading colleges are too severe. Examinations should be done away with. From every quarter comes the demand to relax in the demands upon boys. Many of the improvements which are suggested approach the difficulty from the wrong point of view. If we could improve all over the country the character of the work that is done, if, to use a medical expression, we could build up the boy's mental system, he would be able to stand more successfully the rigorous tests to which there is now widespread objection.

The task of the schools is growing more difficult every day because of the increasing excitement to which children are subjected. One of the greatest foes to education is excitement, restlessness. There is not a headmaster of a boarding school in the country who does not dread the slightest interruption to the regular routine of his school life. An extraordinary athletic event, a school dance, a serious accident, is sufficient to upset the work of the school so completely that a week may be required before his boys regain their equilibrium. If the excitement is feared by the masters in boarding schools, which are usually located in some quiet spot in the country, what can be said of the difficulties of the teachers in day schools whose pupils are exposed continually to all the distractions of the cities? Their task is almost hopeless unless they can count upon the support of the homes.

For this reason, if for no other, we must expect that the number of boarding schools will increase. Parents either will not or cannot control the distractions of their sons. Social entertainments, the theatre, automobile rides are allowed to encroach upon the time which should be given over to quiet and consistent preparation of the next day's tasks. Not only is the time lost which should have been devoted to study, but the boy is rendered unfit to do his class work satisfactorily. It is not an accident or a mere chance that the youthful prodigies of whom we read in the magazines are trained by their parents and not by the schools. The schools are hardly successful in training the average boy. The greatest good to the greatest number must be the teacher's guiding principle. He cannot help the clever boy beyond a certain point if thereby he is compelled to neglect the boy of mediocre ability. Nor is it possible for him ordinarily to encourage the backward boy, because this time is occupied with the "average" boys who form the bulk of his class. This condition is especially true of the public schools where the classes are deplorably large. If, then, unusual results are expected either with exceptionally gifted boys or with those who are backward the duties of the parents become especially unimportant. Ordinarily parents cannot be expected to do the work of the teacher, and this article does not in any sense urge them to do so. The work of teaching should be done by teachers and it is entirely in order that parents should expect results from the schools to which they send their boys. It is, however, essential that parents should support the teachers.

It is to be hoped that the time will come when the parents will co-operate so fully with the teachers that they will welcome whatever suggestions the teachers may be able or willing to make. On the other hand, superintendents of education would do well to have each teacher in their systems of schools send home precise instructions as to how much time should be required in the preparation of lessons, how the lessons should be prepared, and any other notes that may help parents to supplement the work of the classroom.

The advantages from a widespread preaching of the responsibilities of the home in the education of children would not be wholly scholastic. The moral profit would be considerable. The practice of such principles would give an increased steadiness to home life, and it would help to keep children off the street at times when they should be occupied with their books; it would decrease the deplorable restlessness which is now prevalent not only among adults, but among boys and girls, and which is one of the greatest foes to the progress of the schools.

To Learn a New Language is to Expand Your World

Try to imagine yourself unable to speak or write or understand any Language whatsoever! The idea seems, perhaps, too appalling for consideration. And it would be equally difficult for you to express, in terms of money, the Value to you of the Language you know and use.

If, then, your "Mother Tongue" is of such priceless worth to you, would not the ability to use, with almost equal facility, ANOTHER Language, or even a third or fourth, be an accomplishment "above price"?

For to learn ONE ADDITIONAL LANGUAGE only will be to enlarge your World—measurably, pleasantly, profitably. It will DOUBLE THE VALUE of Your Education—it will DOUBLE YOUR EFFICIENCY IN YOUR LIFE WORK—it will clear your mind of prejudices, and make the world a better place in which to live.

HOW you may learn another Language, without much cost of either time or money or trouble or vexation, will be made plain to you in a Brochure which we shall be glad to send you, if you ask for it, Free.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

SOME CROP IMPROVEMENT

Prices were subjected to more or less pressure from the opening of trading yesterday and the heaviness, accompanied by more or less irregularity which this produced, paved the way for a sharp break upon the publication of the Government crop report at a quarter after two. The publication of that report seemed rather the excuse for than the explanation of the selling which occurred during the last hour, for the Department of Agriculture's estimate bore out the expectation of improvement in the prospect of the corn crop and also showed some increase in the probable yield of oats, while the decline in the indicated yield of Spring wheat was small. All in all, the crop report showed a little better situation than that reported at the beginning of August, and to this extent yesterday's information regarding the crops was favorable. The agricultural output as a whole falls this year below the average and promises no unusual stimulation of business, but on its face and as compared with the report made in the previous Government report yesterday's return was satisfactory. A further reason for doubting that the crop report was primarily the cause of the weakness in the last hour was that an adverse crop report had freely been predicted in speculative circles during the morning, and the fact that these forecasts were not borne out would normally have caused the publication of the report to exert favorable instead of unfavorable effect upon prices.

A good deal of selling was attributed to foreign sources yesterday and the markets abroad were themselves very much less cheerful, prices being lower on the principal Bourses, with the heaviest declines apparently at Berlin, where Baltimore & Ohio suffered a larger loss than occurred in that stock in the New York market. Canadian Pacific was also weak in Berlin, as well as here, and this gave added ground for the assumption that liquidation was still under way for Berlin account. During the decline new low prices for the year were recorded in Steel among other stocks, while Union Pacific and Reading both went within small fractions of their previous low prices. These three most active issues supplied 383,000 shares out of the day's total of 594,000.

The first report of the Census Bureau on the ginning of cotton from this year's crop showed a record number of bales ginned up to the first of September. These figures indicate principally the fact that the harvesting of cotton began at an unusually early date this year, and no satisfactory conclusion can be drawn from them in respect to the promise of this year's crop as a whole. The Copper Producers' Association report, also published yesterday, showed a further decrease of 4,200,000 pounds in the stocks of copper at the close of August, despite an increase of over 13,000,000 pounds in production during the month. Export deliveries of the metal decreased about 5,000,000 pounds, compared with July, while domestic deliveries increased just a little short of 3,000,000 pounds. Thus the tendency during the month was not favorable, although the deliveries still exceeded production by a sufficient amount to result in some decrease in stocks, though a much smaller decrease than was reported last month.

The day's estimates of the week's currency movements indicated loss in cash of from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000, but the information current in banking circles did not forecast any such loss as this in the actual cash holdings of the banks. The loss reported in yesterday's estimates was due to the heavy excess payments by the banks reported in the statement of the Sub-Treasury, but it must be borne in mind that the full amount of the cash loss due to the transfer of $6,500,000 to Chicago and San Francisco on Sept. 1 appeared in last week's bank statement, although it was not included in the Sub-Treasury statement until this week. Some of the banks have reduced their loans, and the expectation in some quarters yesterday was that despite such loss in cash as may be shown no material change is likely to-day in the surplus reserve item.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Improvement in business conditions is noted by Dun's Review, which speaks optimistically of the outlook. To-day's issue says:

Steady improvement in business conditions is indicated by most of the reports which come from the leading industries and from trade centres. This is further confirmed by the gain in bank clearings, the reduction in number of idle cars and the increase in pig iron production. Apparently there is a much more optimistic sentiment regarding the cotton and grain crops, in spite of the recent Government reports of conditions; and with the prospect of fair average farm returns, low stocks of goods on the shelves of distributing merchants and an abundant supply of money, the Fall season is opening with a considerable growth of confidence, which is helped by the lull in political activities, the gradual subsiding of war talk abroad and the better outlook as regards the labor situation at home. Resumption of work in many New England textile mills this week is an event of value. Moreover, the demand for dry goods, both jobbing and at retail, is improved. While the wool market is more quiet for the moment, business is fair and quotations firm. In the shoe trade conservative gain also appears, and the same is true as regards leather. Altogether, the quickened movement in general business, while not large, is indicative of a satisfactory season of fairly normal conditions. Railroad earnings during the month of August were almost exactly the same as in 1910. Foreign commerce returns of the Port of New York in the latest week show exports of $12,372,460, an increase of $2,794,098 over 1910, and of $3,514,408 over 1909, while the imports were $15,578,871, a decline of $1,197,800 from 1910 and a gain of $287,844 over 1909.

Bradstreet's says:

Three factors helped to expand trade in a moderate way this week—Fall festivals, the advances of the season, and the ending of the vacation period. The increased turnover was largely effected through house sales, and, to a lesser extent, sorting orders, for orders from travelers were curtailed because many salesmen had been called in to attend visiting buyers. Incidentally, more favorable reports regarding the corn and other late maturing food crops, the condition of which has recently been helped by rains, tend to develop a more optimistic feeling in surplus producing regions, and lower prices have resulted in larger purchases of cotton goods at some points. The retail trade shows a tendency to expand, largely because of cooler weather. In industrial circles the drift has been in a more favorable direction, owing chiefly to diminished fears of immediate strikes of railway shopmen on Western lines and to the resumption of some New England textile mills, but as regards this latter movement it must be said that there is considerable room for further improvement before anything like marked activity can be proclaimed in the cotton-goods line. Trade in coal has improved, but competition in the bituminous line is keen. Currency is moving to the country in liberal volume, and rates for money are higher. Collections range from about slow to fair.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Lowest prices for the day were touched on the Consolidated Stock Exchange in the late afternoon, following the publication of the Government crop report. Traders on the Exchange were disposed to hammer the market from the opening, and they were successful in bringing about moderate losses in the early dealings. At the lowest levels short covering was in evidence, and it was responsible for such prominent stocks as Steel common and Reading failing to sell at as low prices by a fraction as they reached on the New York Stock Exchange. The high quotations for the two stocks named were, however, both a fraction under the other board. Business was on a heavy scale, with total sales of 98,400 shares, distributed over a list embracing fifty-six different stocks. Transactions took place in a number of stocks of which no sales were reported on the other Exchange, among them American Ice, Western Union, and Brunswick Terminal.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 194 business failures in the United States during the week against 164 for the previous week, and 173, 191, 191, and 172 for the corresponding weeks of 1910 to 1907. The Middle States had 64, New England 23, Southern 28, Western 40, Northwestern 18, and Far Western 21. Canada had 22 against 30 for the preceding weeks. About 89 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less, and 6 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

COPPER ON HAND DECREASED

Stocks of copper in the United States at the end of August totaled 123,441,301 pounds, according to the figures compiled by the Copper Producers' Association yesterday. This is a shrinkage of 4,297,357 pounds since July, and puts the figure at the lowest point since the end of December last year. The reduction was made in the face of an increase in production of 13,325,733 during August, the total output of the refineries for that month being 125,493,667 pounds, the largest since May. Deliveries both for domestic consumption and for export, although they were more than sufficient to offset the increased production, were substantially smaller than in the previous month. August domestic deliveries were 59,935,364 pounds, a decrease of 2,952,782 pounds from the July figures, and export deliveries were 69,855,660 pounds, a decrease of 5,024,998 pounds.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Moroccan Situation Causes Weakness in London and Paris.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Money was in better supply and discount rates were easy to-day.

Trading slackened on the Stock Exchange, in view of the approaching settlement and the uncertainty of the Moroccan situation. Prices declined in all directions, under local and Continental offerings, and Kaffirs were the only shares above the lowest at the closing.

American securities opened steady at a slight decline. Light coverings caused gains in several stocks during the forenoon, but later New York and Berlin selling orders were executed and the whole list declined again. Prices hardened a fraction in the late trading, and the market closed dull.

Money 1@1¼ per cent.; rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3 per cent.; for three months' bills, 3@3⅛ per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 8.35; at Lisbon, 7.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—The uncertainty of the Moroccan situation caused a generally easier tendency on the Bourse to-day. The closing, however, was quiet.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—Unfavorable New York advices caused weakness on the Boerse to-day. Canadian Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio declined three points.

Private discount rate, 4 per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Changes in Public Debt.

The statement of the public debt of the United States at the close of August, just issued by the Treasury Department, shows that during the month the outstanding amount of the new Panama Canal 3 per cent. bonds was increased from $25,899,500 to $49,759,000. This brings the amount outstanding up to within $241,000 of the total amount of the issue for which subscriptions were received last June. A few changes also appear in the outstanding amount of the debt of the United States upon which interest has ceased since maturity. The principal change in this division of the Government's debt resulted from the redemption during August of $6,250 of the bonds which matured in July, 1907, of which there are still over $900,000 outstanding. There is a total of $1,866,410 of public debt upon which interest has ceased still outstanding. No additions were made during August to the amount of postal savings bank bonds, which bear 2½ per cent. interest. The amount of this issue on Aug. 31 was $41,900, the same as at the close of July.

English Labor Union Funds.

The recent labor troubles on the English railways have caused attention to be directed in the British press to the make-up of the funds in the treasuries of the labor unions. It appears that of a total of approximately $1,000,000 in the so-called strike fund of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants about $250,000 was invested in the debentures of the railways themselves. Thus a substantial part of the funds which would be called into use for the purpose of enforcing demands against railroads was invested in the securities of the properties which would be subjected to the hardships of a strike. Of the balance of the fund about $300,000 was invested in corporation loans and about $175,000 in corporation stocks, while the cash on hand amounted to $85,000.

Still Opposed to Cotton Plan.

Although the recent modifications of the plan for safeguarding cotton bills of lading were thought to have removed the last of the objections of the bankers who have opposed acceptance of the Liverpool Conference Committee's device for registering bills through a central office, some of the larger institutions still adhere to their determination to continue doing business in the old way. The sub-committee of the American Bankers' Association held another meeting yesterday to discuss the modifications, and the plan will shortly be submitted to the banks for their approval. As evidence that even the English banks are not all in favor of the registration plan, a banker who does a large business in the cotton bills was exhibiting yesterday a letter from a London banker in which the conference plan was characterized as entailing much extra labor and delay without accomplishing any real reform.

No Support for Missouri Pacific.

The last sale of Missouri Pacific was 100 shares at 36¾, a loss of 1¾ points from Thursday's closing price. The preceding sale was made at 37¼. The loss of half a point between two sales of 100 shares in an active issue was enough to cause comment on the lack of support for this issue. At the end of the day's trading the stock was offered at 36½, or another quarter of a point under the last sale, and there was no bid for the issue. An unqualified denial from Speyer & Co. of the rumor that the bankers were to sever their relations with the Gould roads was apparently more than offset by a report that the Missouri Pacific's forthcoming report would show nothing earned over the fixed charges. Denver & Rio Grande preferred also declined further yesterday, closing 1¼ below Thursday's last price.

Records Off Further.

While the leaders of market activity remained yesterday fractionally above the lowest points reached in August, there were several new low records made in the less active stocks. Baltimore & Ohio again made a new low price, dropping 1½ points below the low record made on Thursday to 93½. Among the other new low records made were Chesapeake & Ohio at 70, Colorado Southern at 46½, Missouri Pacific at 36¾. Denver & Rio Grande preferred at 47, Amalgamated Copper at 56¾, Brooklyn Rapid Transit at 74⅜, International Harvester preferred at 118, International Pump at 31, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie at 129¼, American Steel Foundries at 29, National Enamelling and Stamping at 16, and Virginia Railway and Power at 37, and the preferred of the same company at 77¼. Reading, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific each fell to within ¼ of a point of the low prices made in the last week of August. Steel at 68⅝ was at a new low price, but, allowing for the dividend which came off last Friday, was 1⅜ better than the low price made in August.

Bank Clearings Reflect Better Business.

The better tone noted in general business by the mercantile agencies this week is reflected in the improvement in the volume of bank clearings over the country. Bank exchanges for the week, as compiled by Dun's Review, totaled $2,148,123,934, which is a gain of 6.4 per cent. over the corresponding week last year, and a loss of only 1.9 per cent. by comparison with 1909. Last week the gain over 1910 was only 1.9 per cent., while the loss as compared with 1909 was 22.9 per cent. One of the notable points of the better showing is the improvement at this city, notwithstanding the fact that Stock Exchange transactions approximate closely the figures of a year ago, making the bank clearings more of an indication of an improvement in the volume of general business here than a reflection of larger operations in the speculative markets. At New York the week's returns were 7.6 per cent. larger than for the same week in 1910, as against 2.4 per cent. last week, while the same comparison with 1909 shows a loss of only 8.5 per cent. compared with the previous week's loss of 30.8 per cent.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

DECLINES IN LOCAL ISSUES

Fractional Losses in Many of the Stocks Not Listed in New York, as Well as in Arbitrage Shares.

Prices were generally lower in the principal out-of-town markets yesterday.

Until the last hour Philadelphia stocks held fairly well, although their tone as a whole was depressed. Finally, however, Reading and Lehigh Valley, which had previously been very steady, in face of the general weakness, began to give way and nearly the whole list closed under moderate pressure. About the only noteworthy exceptions were Tonopah Mining and Storage Battery, both of which ended the session with net gains over Thursday's final figures.

Prices on the Chicago Stock Exchange were generally heavy, with trading in rather moderate volume. Changes were only fractional, however, one of the largest being a decline of ¾ in American Can preferred. There were small concessions also in Sears-Roebuck common, Diamond Match, Pneumatic Tool, and People's Gas.

Further liquidation appeared on the Boston market. The weakness which developed in the New York list was in a measure responsible and considerable stock was offered in all the active issues. Amalgamated broke 57 and North Butte declined to 23¾. The general market closed steady at a slight recovery from the low prices of the day.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES were as follows:

THE COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market was dull all day, closing at a slight net decline in some markets, a slight advance in others. The trade, both in Europe and America, seemed to be waiting for the Government report. The Government report, which came out just at the close of the market, made a loss in Spring wheat condition of 8.1 for the month, due to material decline in Minnesota and North Dakota. The indicated crop promise was reduced to 203,000,000 bushels of Spring wheat, making the grand total, Spring and Winter, 658,567,000 bushels, against a final last year of 695,443,000 bushels. This is a direct loss in round numbers of 37,000,000 bushels, which was partly offset by an increase in the carry over of about 12,000,000 bushels, leaving, however, a net shortage of 25,000,000 bushels. On the basis of last year's distribution, with the increase in population this year, the export surplus would be reduced to only about 35,000,000 bushels, unless the reserves carried over from the preceding year are drawn upon. The conditions in the Spring wheat States are evidently not as good as reported in probable flour producing quality of the wheat, as the poor quality means a considerably larger quantity of wheat to make a barrel of flour and corresponding increase in the amount of feed produced. There was fair export demand, about 60 loads partly Manitoba wheat, and a good freight business. The freight engagements were mainly for the continent. European statistics showed a little increase in world's exports, with total indications of 1,750,000 bushels more than last week, but nearly 6,000,000 bushels less than last year. Bradstreet's American exports were 2,632,000 bushels, against 3,074,000 bushels the previous week. No. 2 red wheat was quoted at $1 free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.13½; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.04, and No. 1 Manitoba, $1.09¾.

CORN.—The corn market was dull all the session, with prices slightly easier due to expectation of a favorable Government report. The report showed a gain of only .7, although most of the leading producing States of the Central West showed gains. The indicated increase in the crop was only 116,000,000 bushels over last month, the aggregate being 2,736,000,000 bushels, against 3,125,000,000 bushels last year. The condition of the crop was 70.3. The hay crop showed a falling off of .05 in yield per acre with the present promise 46,969,000 tons, about 2,000,000 tons under last month. This compares with 60,078,000 tons final last year, and 70,798,000 tons, the record crop of 1908. Cash corn was firm, with export sales reported of ten loads. No. 2 corn was quoted at 74c. elevator, domestic, and 73½c. free on board.

OATS.—Trade in oats was very quiet, with the market slightly easier with corn and on expectation of a more favorable crop report. The report, however, showed a condition of 64.5, a loss of 1.2 for the month, but an indicated yield owing to the advance in the par of 842,475,000 bushels, compared with 817,800,000 bushels a month ago, and 1,127,000,000 bushels last year. Cash oats were firm, with standards 49c.; No. 2 white, 49½c., and No. 3 white, 48½c.

PROVISIONS.—The provision market was dull and heavy, with some pressure on the Western market. The hog market, however, was generally firm, with prices 5c to 10c up, and receipts were very small, only 44,000 at all points.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Liquidation of a comparatively small amount of October brought about a severe recession in that option, which had a sympathetic effect on the balance of the list during the morning, but good buying developed and the close was firm at new high levels in nearly all months. Some further foreign buying was reported, but it was also apparent that speculative demand had improved, with the belief gaining ground that the technical position of the market had been materially weakened. Until the movement of oil, however, assumes larger proportions, bear pressure promises to be light. The bearish ginning figures of 771,000 bales, an unprecedented quantity for the period, had little effect, whereas more bullish cotton crop accounts will not hasten seed deliveries.

COTTON.

An influx of damage advices from many sections of the cotton belt particularly relating to boll weevil and other noxious insects were received during the session. Complaints were most persistent from Alabama, Mississippi, and Arkansas, with a sensational report by Cordill on the ravages of these vermin. In addition, the spot demand for immediate shipment continues fair, but withal the advances in the future market were only about 10 points. This is despite the claim that spot cotton in the South is bringing 12c., whereas local futures are selling at slightly over 11½c., leading to the impression that shorts are confident and apparently do not expect the inquiry to continue in sufficient volume to maintain the present differences.

The very bearish ginning report issued prior to the opening yesterday had only momentary effect and accounted for initial prices of 6 points decline to 1 point advance for the list. Had it not been for this showing a higher opening would probably have been witnessed, as Liverpool cables were good, with spot sales in that market in continued liberal volume. The ginning figures were 771,000 bales, an unsurpassed total for the period to Sept. 1. Last year 354,000 bales were ginned, two years ago 388,000 bales, and the largest previous total (in 1905) was 478,000 bales. It was the belief that such figures foreshadowed a good movement of cotton in the near future.

Trading during the day was of much the same character as on Thursday, with further buying credited to Scales interest, and the character of the crop accounts resulting in a further reduction of a short interest. The hedge pressure from the South was unabated and undoubtedly is a factor at present in limiting the advances, despite the concentrated buying at times.

Exports since Sept. 1 are about 115,000 bales, against 98,000 last week. The into-sight for the week was 182,000 bales, against 133,000 last year. Southern spot markets were generally firm at unchanged to 1-16c. advance, with Georgia and Texas points reporting a good demand. Local stocks in warehouses at present are 57,000 bales, against 85,000 last year. Shipments in the near future will probably be liberal, but, on the other hand, receipts of cotton are expected to grow heavier in proportion.

Granulated Rises with Raw Sugar.

Following further advances in the prices of raw sugar, beet sugar having risen in London to 18s. ½d., the highest price in twenty-two years, the leading refineries advanced the prices of granulated again yesterday. The margin of difference between the prices of raw and refined sugar is usually about three-quarters of a cent. Granulated was quoted at 6.60 cents a pound. The American Sugar Refining Company's price remained the lowest of those quoted.

OUTLOOK FOR CROPS NOT MUCH BRIGHTER

CORN ACREAGE IS LARGER

Total Yield About Equal to Last Year —Wheat Shows a Decrease of 10 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—While weather conditions practically throughout the country were reasonably favorable to growing crops during the month of August, the crop report issued to-day by the Department of Agriculture did not indicate generally much improvement in the condition of crops over that of a month ago.

Some improvement was shown in the great staple crop of corn as of Sept. 1, over Aug. 1, but it amounted to only seven-tenths of 1 per cent. in the aggregate. The yield of corn per acre this year, as indicated by to-day's report, will be 23.6 bushels per acre, as compared with 27.4 bushels last year, and an average of 27.1 bushels during the last five years. The acreage of corn this year, however, is larger than it was last year, and the probability is that the crop, while it may be shorter than it was last year, will not differ greatly in quantity.

Wheat shows a falling off of approximately 10 per cent. in condition, as compared with the average of the last ten years, and the yield per acre is about two bushels less than the average during the last five years.

Oats also shows a considerable falling off, both in condition and in average yield per acre. While the indicated yield for this year is 23.9 bushels an acre, the final yield for 1910 was 31.9 bushels, and the average yield during the last five years was 28.4 bushels, the indicated total yield for this year being approximately 15 per cent. less than the average for the last five years.

Rice, tobacco, flax, and hay all show a heavy falling off in condition and indicated total yield. Potatoes, as was indicated last month, will make a short crop. The condition of potatoes to-day was a trifle more than 10 per cent. below that of last year, and nearly 3 per cent. poorer than it was a month ago. The total yield will be far below that of last year—practically 20 per cent.—and nearly 22 per cent. below that of the average for the last five years.

The condition on Sept. 1 and the yield per acre, as indicated by the condition on that date, of the principal farm crops of the country, and the preliminary estimate of the total yield of hay, follows:

CORN—Condition, 70.3 per cent. of a normal, compared with 69.6 per cent. on Aug. 1, 78.2 per cent. on Sept. 1, 1910, and 79.3 per cent. the ten-year Sept. 1 average. Indicated yield per acre, 23.6 bushels, compared with 27.4 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 27.1 bushels, the average for the last five years.

SPRING WHEAT—Condition, 56.7 per cent. of a normal at time of harvest, compared with 59.8 per cent. on Aug. 1, 63.1 per cent. at time of harvest last year, and 78.7 per cent. at time of harvest for the last ten years. Indicated yield per acre, 9.8 bushels, compared with 11.7 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 13.5 bushels, the average for the last five years.

ALL WHEAT—Indicated yield per acre, 12.6 bushels, compared with 14.1 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 14.7 the average yield for the last five years.

OATS—Condition, 64.5 per cent. of a normal at time of harvest, compared with 65.7 per cent., on Aug. 1, 83.3 per cent. at time of harvest in 1910, and 79.5 per cent. the ten-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 23.9 bushels, compared with 31.9 bushels in 1910, and 28.4 bushels, the average yield for the last five years.

BARLEY—Condition, 65.5 per cent., of a normal at time of harvest, compared with 66.2 per cent. on Aug. 1, 69.8 per cent. at time of harvest in 1910, and 83 per cent. the ten-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 30.3 bushels, compared with 22.4 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 24.8 bushels, the average yield for the last five years.

BUCKWHEAT — Condition, 83.8 per cent., of a normal, compared with 82.9 per cent. on Aug. 1, 82.3 per cent. in 1910, with 87.1 per cent. the ten-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 19.6 bushels, compared with 20.9 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 19.6 bushels, the average yield for the last five years.

POTATOES—Condition, 59.8 per cent., of a normal, compared with 62.3 per cent. on Aug. 1, 70.5 per cent. in 1910, and 78.9 per cent. the ten-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 74.2 bushels, compared with 94.4 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 96.9 bushels, the average yield for the last five years.

TOBACCO—Condition, 71.1 per cent., of a normal, compared with 68 per cent. on Aug. 1, 77.7 per cent. in 1910, and 82.3 per cent. the ten-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 714.6 pounds, compared with 797.8 pounds the 1910 final yield, and 826 pounds, the average yield for the last five years.

FLAX—Condition, 68.4 per cent., of a normal, compared with 71 per cent. on Aug. 1, 48.3 per cent. in 1910, and 81.8 per cent. the eight-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 7.7 bushels, compared with 4.8 bushels the 1910 final yield, and 9.9 bushels the average yield for the last four years.

RICE—Condition 87.2 per cent. of a normal, compared with 88.3 per cent. On Aug. 1, 88.8 per cent. in 1910, and 88.3 per cent., the ten-year average. Indicated yield per acre, 32.1 bushels, compared with 33.9 bushels, the 1910 final yield, and 32.4 bushels, the average yield for the past five years.

HAY—Preliminary returns indicate a total hay yield of about 46,969,000 tons, as compared with 60,978,000 tons finally estimated last year, and 63,507,000 tons, the average annual production in the past five years. The preliminary estimated yield per acre is about 1.09 tons, compared with 1.33 tons, the 1910 final yield, and 1.41 tons, the average yield for the past five years. The quality is 90.3 per cent., compared with 92.5 per cent. last year, and a ten-year average of 91.1 per cent.

APPLES—Condition 56.2 per cent of a normal, compared with 53.9 per cent. on Aug. 1, 46.8 per cent. in 1910, and 52.6 per cent. the ten-year average.

The total production of the principal crops this year, as indicated by their condition on Sept. 1, with comparison of the final yield of 1910 follows:

New Crop Ginned Is 300,000 Better Than Previous Record.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The ginning of cotton of the growth of 1911 was carried on more actively throughout the cotton belt to Sept. 1 this year than in any similar period in the history of the industry, at least as far as accurate ginning records have been kept. This is shown by the first ginning report of the season compiled by the Census Bureau from reports of its correspondents in the cotton growing States. A total of 771,415 bales had been ginned up to a week ago. This is greater by almost 300,000 bales than the previous record, made in 1905.

The continued hot and dry weather in a greater portion of the belt, especially in Texas, was chiefly responsible for the increase. These conditions meant the early maturing of the crop, but this alone is considered not the cause of the greater ginning. Farmers have been more active in getting their crop to the ginneries and, it is said, in some counties of Texas, where the bulk of the increased ginning was reported, the entire crop practically already has been ginned.

Little relation appears to exist, according to Census Bureau experts, between the size of the crop and the quantity of cotton ginned during any period of the season. This is shown in the big crop years of 1904, 1906, and 1908, each of which produced more than 13,000,000 bales. In those years the percentage of the total crop ginned to Sept. 1 was 2.8, 3.1, and 3.1, respectively, while in 1905, when the crop was 10,800,000 bales, 4.5 per cent. of it was ginned by Sept. 1. Last year 3.1 per cent. of the total crop was ginned to Sept. 1.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The inactivity that has marked the realty market during the past couple of weeks is strongly reflected in the building reports for the month of August. At first sight the totals for the month are very favorable, showing as they do, a grand total of expenditure for August—ninety-nine cities in the United States reporting—of $70,083,293, which makes a gain of 16.6 per cent. over July and 24.2 per cent. over August, 1910.

On examination, however, this is proved to be due to a very large total of expenditures permitted for at Chicago—$26,-000,500—which warps the total for the month just closed. The reason for the expansion at Chicago is found in the filing of a number of permits to take advantage of old regulations regarding the height of new construction since abrogated by the new law.

It is not expected that the high structures thus permitted for will all be immediately begun, and as a record of current operations they are apt to be somewhat misleading unless this explanation is borne in mind. If the Chicago totals are excluded it is found that the construction permitted for in August aggregated only $43,882,793, a decrease of 10.5 per cent. from July and of 11.6 per cent. from August a year ago, according to Bradstreet's report.

The detailed figures show that forty-seven out of the ninety-nine cities show gains as compared with August last year, while fifty-two show decreases. Of the large cities showing decreases from a year ago, New York, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Portland, Ore.; St. Louis, and Buffalo are most notable, while among those gaining might be mentioned Chicago, Los Angeles, Louisville, Milwaukee, New Haven, and San Francisco.

A Madison Avenue Deal.

The Cruikshank Company has sold for Adam O. and Jane Rutherford, to a client, the three-story brick dwelling 1,538 Madison Avenue, 16.8 front by 70 feet deep. The purchaser contemplates making alterations to the property.

Speculators Buy Bronx Plot.

William T. Purdy has sold to Ennis and Sinnott for speculation, a plot 50 by 100 on the north side of 184th Street, 95 feet west of Wadsworth Avenue. The sale was negotiated by Porter & Co.

Ida Brantman has sold to an investor 75 Clinton Avenue, a two-family frame dwelling with stores. Alexander Selkin in conjunction with D. Schoen negotiated the sale.

Brooklyn.

A one-family house on a plot 60 by 100 on the south side of Eighty-fourth Street, 100 feet east of Tenth Avenue, Dyker Heights, has been sold by Frank A. Seaver for Ella Jones to a client for occupancy.

George W. Dredger has sold for the Shilkerman Realty Company 42 Stephens Court, one-family brick house, to Cecil Bloch; 28 Stephens Court, one-family brick house, to Corinne Shoenberg; 438 Seventy-sixth Street, one-family brick house, to Goodman Hoelseth; 450 Seventy-sixth Street, two-family brick house, to Charles Juuls; 454 Seventy-sixth Street, two-family brick house, to Michael Stone; 56 Seventy-sixth Street, two-family brick house, to John McGuire; 7,415 Fifth Avenue, two-story and store brick house, to a client for investment.

Joseph P. Day has sold for the Manhattan Beach Estates a plot 40 by 100 on the west side of Amherst Street, 230 feet north of the Esplanade, to a Mr. Hoffman.

Suburban.

Daniel Riordan has sold to Joseph Scheldnecht a parcel having a frontage of 100 feet on the east side of Fourteenth Street and 75 feet on the south side of North Boulevard, College Point, L. I. Isabella Brannagan has sold to the same party a parcel having a frontage of 25 feet on the south side of North Boulevard, 75 feet east of Fourteenth Street, College Point.

H. Theodore Schumacher has sold to William B. Walker of Brooklyn a parcel having a frontage of 140 feet on the east side of Villard Avenue, 146 feet north of Fulton Street, Hollis Heights, L. I., subject to a mortgage of $5,600.

Recent Buyers.

James Gamble Rogers is the buyer of 164 East Seventieth Street, sold recently by Mrs. J. L. Worden. Mr. Rogers will alter the house for his occupancy.

Joseph P. Sherin purchased for occupancy 29 West Forty-sixth Street, sale of which was reported recently by John N. Golding for Norwood & Marden as attorneys.

Dwellings Leased.

H. C. Senior & Co. have leased for Janet Olcott the four-story dwelling 134 West Sixty-fourth Street to Michael Pisapia; for the Marion Holding Company the three-story dwelling 269 West Seventy-first Street to Margaret J. Lee; for J. Ida Hurlburt the four-story dwelling 114 West Sixty-fourth Street to Iroquois Irwin; for Dr. Charles H. Reinsberg the four-story dwelling 248 West Ninety-ninth Street to Ezra R. Moore & Schutte have leased for the W. A. Johnson estate the three-story and basement dwelling 527 West 162d Street to a client for a term of years.

East Side Apartments to Cost $180,000.

Plans have been filed for the construction of a nine-story fireproof apartment house at 118 to 124 East Fifty-fourth Street for the 118 East Fifty-fourth Street Company, of which T. H. Hagen is president; at a cost of $180,000. It will have a frontage of 75.10 feet and a depth of 85 feet, with a façade of brick and Dover marble with terra cotta trimmings. Cross & Cross, associated with Israels & Harder, are the architects.

Loft Leases.

Carstein & Linnekin, in connection with Herl & Stern, have leased 22,000 square feet of space in the American Woolen Building, Eighteenth Street and Fourth Avenue, to an importing concern which for many years has been located on lower Broadway.

S. Osgood Pell & Co. have leased the corner store and entire second floor formerly occupied by the Thomas Motor Company, at the southeast corner of Broadway and Sixty-third Street, to the American-Marion Sales Company for a term of years. This is in line with the trend of business moving on Broadway above Fifty-ninth Street.

A PLACE where wholesome restrictions are made, and precautions are taken to do away with uncongenial social life—a point overlooked in many other well advertised developments.

A PLACE where lasting houses have been built (every PHILIPSE MANOR home built by day's labor,) where the conveniences that are a particular delight to the ladies, and that make housekeeping easy, have all been provided for.

A PLACE where you can select your building plot either in a beautifully wooded spot, or almost at the river's edge, to build the kind of home you like the best, with money supplied at 5%.

A PLACE of historic interest, and having unusual advantages from nearby surroundings. The famous Sleepy Hollow Country Club within the mile—Ye Olden Philipse Manor Inn (built in 1683)—Washington Irving's Old Mill—the Headless Horseman Bridge, right on the property. The country driving roads and scenery are unsurpassed—near New York City.

A PLACE where in fact from the start the object has been to create a residence section of the very highest class, confined, as far as the very best efforts of the Company could do so, to such people as would mutually be desirable neighbors to one another.

A PLACE YOU SHOULD CERTAINLY investigate and visit before locating elsewhere near New York City.

Thomson & Stacy, Incorporated, failed before the Board of United States General Appraisers to substantiate their claim for a reduction in the duty assessed by the Collector on merchandise invoiced as "round bars." The articles consist of metal rods about one-fourth to one-half inch in diameter and about thirteen to eighteen feet in length. Duty was assessed at the rate of six-tenth of 1 cent a pound as "iron in rods." It was claimed that the merchandise should be granted entry as "wire rods," with a tax of only three-tenths of a cent per pound.

The testimony in the case shows that the rods are used in the manufacture of bedsteads. Judge Fischer says that the proof, while it establishes that the rods are steel rods, and not iron, does not show that they are "wire rods." He says in his decision for the board that it is evident that the articles in question may be a rod, and not necessarily a "wire" rod. The decision says that if it were a wire rod the fact that it was iron, and not steel, or steel, and not iron, would be of little importance, as the provision in Paragraph 134 of the present Tariff act includes iron as well as steel wire rods. The General Appraiser states that the only claim raised is that the goods are subject to duty as wire rods, and this, the decision holds, fails for lack of proof. The protest is accordingly overruled.

The board has sustained a protest filed by Robert B. Ways relating to the classification of iron drums containing permanganate of potash. The drums were assessed separately from their contents at the rate of 30 per cent. ad valorem as "unusual" coverings. It was claimed by the importers that the drums are dutiable at the ad valorem rates applicable to their contents. This claim, General Appraiser Fischer sustains, and directs the Collector to make a reliquidation in harmony with the finding of the board.

The board has taken adverse action on a protest filed by James Garcia concerning the classification of iron drums used in the transportation of linseed oil. The drums were returned for duty as "unusual" coverings, whereas the importers maintained that they are the usual containers for this class of merchandise. Judge Fischer denies the contention of the protesting firm and holds that the drums in question are of such a substantial kind that it is possible to use them for other purposes after they have been emptied of their original contents.

MRS. HART MURDERED AND HUSBAND HELD

REVOLVER USED RELOADED

Five Separate Wounds, Any One of Which Would Have Killed Her—The Prisoner Young and Confident.

Police officials and representatives of the Coroners' office who were present yesterday at the autopsy on the body of Mrs. Annie G. Hart, who was found dead in the kitchen of a rooming house at 151 East Twenty-seventh Street on Thursday at noon, discovered five separate revolver wounds on the woman's breast and head, from which were extracted five .38 calibre bullets.

The investigators were convinced beyond doubt that the statement of Edward F. Hart, her husband, that she committed suicide in a fit of despondency over the loss of her pet poodle dog Prince was unworthy of belief.

The first action taken on the completion of the autopsy was to hold Hart in $10,000 bail for the Coroner's inquest, which will be held on Tuesday morning. Hart was brought from the Tombs, where he had been detained as a suspicious person, to the Coroners' office, to hear the verbal report of Coroners' Physician Weston and to listen to the reading of a charge of homicide made against him by Detective McLoughlin of the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station, who with Detective Finn of the same station has charge of the police inquiry into the murder.

Hart, who is 30 years old and a rather neat-appearing young man, listened calmly to the reading of the charge. He asked to have his accuser pointed out to him, and when he had taken a long look at Detective McLoughlin he sat down again without comment. To Assistant District Attorney Rubin, who was called in by Coroner Feinberg, Hart dictated a statement substantially the same as that he made to the police upon his arrest and to Coroner Feinberg shortly afterward. This was that he found his wife lying on the kitchen floor after waking up at 11:30 o'clock Thursday morning, he having previously heard no shots of any kind or any sounds which especially attracted his attention.

While they procured the detention of Hart until Tuesday, the police admitted last night that their case is far from a clear one, and that it presents many baffling features.

Of two things only are they confident. One is that Mrs. Hart was shot by someone other than herself, and that whoever did the shooting emptied his revolver and reloaded it again, firing four shots from the second round of cartridges.

Coroners' Physician Weston stated that almost any one of the shots would have killed Mrs. Hart, and that any one of at least four of them would have paralyzed her so effectually, even if death had not ensued, that it would have been impossible for her to fire any of the others.

As the revolver with which she was killed was a five-shooter, and contained four exploded shells and one blank space, the police were convinced that the revolver had been reloaded. More evidence to clinch this particular theory was found in a search of the room. Near the body were found three exploded cartridges which had been ejected from a revolver. They were of the same calibre, and apparently from the same box as those found in the weapon. The slugs taken from the woman's wounds were found to fit the empty shells perfectly.

The task now before the police is to trace, if possible, the revolver, and the box of shells from which the revolver was reloaded. There were two bright new shells in the revolver, and some of the shells on the floor were corroded with age, as if they had been in the revolver a long time.

At this point in the evidence the police have found the first proof that portions of the story told by Hart cannot be true. He said that his wife bought a pistol during an Italian festival last April, and kept it loaded with blank cartridges. He expressed the opinion that the empty cartridges found on the floor were blanks which his wife had dumped out of the revolver preparatory to inserting loaded shells for the purpose of taking her life. The revolver experts from the Police Department found that every empty shell had contained a bullet which had recently been fired. This would mean that in the struggle which the police are convinced preceded the death of Mrs. Hart the first two bullets went wild, after which she was rendered helpless as she rushed toward the rear door of the kitchen, in front of which her body was found, four of the five shots being fired after she was prostrate upon the floor.

To make certain that a "burglar theory" has no place in this particular case, detectives carefully examined all of the articles in the kitchen. They found that there was nothing to indicate that any one had entered the premises from the outside.

"The murder," said Detective McLoughlin last night, "was the work of a man in a passion—a man in a terrible passion—who was not content to quit shooting after he had inflicted a fatal wound. No burglar, after shooting a victim, would stop to reload a revolver and then empty it again into her prostrate body. He would make his escape the minute he had made sure she could not follow him."

A point which is making the police investigation difficult comes from the fact that neither the suspected husband nor his wife is known in the neighborhood where the crime was committed. They moved in only five days before Mrs. Hart's death, and were practically unknown.

During their brief occupancy of the rooming house Mrs. Hart made friends with a young woman on the second floor and with a married woman living next door. To both of these women she confided that her husband had terrorized her and that she was afraid that he would kill her, her fears being emphasized on Wednesday night because she had lost her pet poodle and was sure he would abuse and attack her when he found this out.

In attempting to fasten the crime upon the man, now held on a detective's affidavit, the police have encountered his assertion that his wife never showed him the revolver she bought in April, and so he cannot identify the weapon found under her body as one which was in the house before her death. They have to meet the further fact that no bloodstains whatever were found upon Hart's hands or upon any of his clothing, so far as they have been able to determine. There were stains upon the handle of the revolver and upon the woman's clothing.

"It's the Sheib murder case reversed," said one detective last night, after searching in vain for possible acquaintances of the Harts in Twenty-seventh Street. "In that case there was every evidence as to who the murderer was of the woman found dead in the bathtub, if the absolute fact that a murder had been committed could have been established. In this case, with every proof of murder at hand, there is no tangible proof on which to render it certain just who the murderer was. We surely will have to work between now and Tuesday to perfect our case."

An inspection of the police records and of the pictures in the Rogues' Gallery discloses that Hart was arrested twelve years ago as a suspicious person and released without trial, while Mrs. Hart was fined $50 last December for shoplifting.

INDICTED AT OWN REQUEST.

Husband Out on $10,000 Bail on Wife Murder Charge.

KITTANNING, Penn., Sept. 8.—At his own request, George Golden, a wealthy shoe merchant of Wickboro was indicted by the Grand Jury to-day on a charge of homicide for the alleged killing of his wife. Golden then went before the court and was released in $10,000 bonds until 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Golden shot and killed his wife on the night of July 18 at their home in Wickboro. To the authorities he stated that he had mistaken her for a burglar and the Coroner exonerated him. Several weeks ago a brother of the dead woman reopened the case and brought a charge of murder against Golden. At a preliminary hearing before a Justice of the Peace Golden was held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Counsel for Golden then entered habeas corpus proceedings and Golden was discharged by the court on the grounds that there was not sufficient evidence to show murder. Last Wednesday Golden suddenly appeared in court and asked to be arrested on the charge and receive a trial by jury. His indictment followed to-day and the court probably will fix the time for trial to-morrow afternoon.

SMART BOY CATCHES THIEF.

A wagon and horse belonging to Ritterhoff & Block, grocers at 3,600 Broadway, were stolen yesterday afternoon as they stood in front of an apartment house at 526 West 151st Street. A few hours later Harry Kahn, a 10-year-old boy of 538 West 153d Street, saw the team at the Staten Island Ferry house at the Battery. Realizing that the men in the vehicle were strangers, he hurried to a telephone and called up the grocer. He was told that a horse and wagon had been stolen and was bidden to find a policeman.

The bell of an incoming ferryboat was already clanging, but the lad managed to find Patrolman Murphy of the Amity Street Station, Brooklyn, who was returning home. The policeman ran to the wagon, and as he did so one of the men leaped to the ground and dashed away. The other was captured and taken to the Old Slip Station, where he was locked up on a charge of grand larceny. He gave the name of Frank Cutrona of Lodi, N. J., but refused to say who his companion was.

MARBLE WORKERS ENJOINED.

Supreme Court Justice Goff issued an order yesterday requiring the marble workers' unions and their members to show cause why they should not be permanently enjoined from interfering with or intimidating the employes of the members of the Marble Industry Employers' Association or interfering in any way with their business. The order is made returnable on Tuesday. The order acts as a preliminary injunction.

Accompanying the application for the injunction were a number of affidavits in which attempts at intimidation and violence were alleged. It was said that the employers contemplate putting new men at work on the buildings affected by the strike in a few days, and that the application for the injunction is a preliminary to the manning of the buildings. The strikers demand an increase of 50 cents a day in wages.

SEEK DEAD MINISTER'S KIN.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 8.—The authorities at Watertown, in this State, received requests to-day for information as to the relatives of the Rev. John A. Crockett, who died in the New York State Hospital for the Insane yesterday. Mr. Crockett was for some time Principal of the Ingleside School for Girls at Milford, a fashionable boarding school, and later became ordained as an Episcopal minister. He married a wealthy young woman of Newtown, whom he divorced soon afterward.

The family trouble seemed to have affected him, and he soon after resigned as rector of the church at Watertown, where he had been located. Later he went into newspaper work in New York. His mind broke down some time ago and he was sent to the insane hospital.

CRITICISE TRUSTEE'S CLAIM.

To Distribute $36,000 Likely to Cost $28,000, According to Counsel.

The administration of the affairs of the Vacuum Cleaner Company by State Senator Johnston Cornish, Trustee in bankruptcy, was criticised yesterday at a hearing in Newark before Referee Edwin G. Adams. It was for the purpose of acting upon the final report of Mr. Cornish and on petitions for allowances for himself and his counsel, State Senator Harry V. Osborne.

The report of the Trustee showed a balance of $32,182.20 for distribution among the creditors, who have already received a dividend of 14 per cent., and to compensate Mr. Cornish and Mr. Osborne for their services. Mr. Cornish was put on the stand and examined by Frank Benjamin and Frederick J. Faulks, counsel for the creditors. Mr. Faulks declared that if Senator Cornish had administered the affairs of the concern to the advantage of the creditors his report failed to show it. A large part of the concern's assets had been used for administration expenses, and from what he could learn it would have cost close to $28,000 to distribute $36,000.

Mr. Faulks and Mr. Benjamin took exception to the allowances asked for by Senator Osborne, amounting to $7,500, and appraised the lawyer's services at $4,000.

WOMAN HAMMERS DOWN WALL

Wielding a sledgehammer herself, Miss Fannie Todd of St. Cloud Avenue, West Orange, helped early yesterday to demolish part of a stone wall which Charles Schweinler, proprietor of the Schweinler Press, New York, is erecting in front of his residence in Ridgeway Avenue. She holds that part of the wall was across a public highway, the only means of access to a plot she bought not long ago.

According to the maps of the Orange Manor Land Company, from which Miss Todd made the purchase, the street in question is laid out, but there is some doubt as to whether it has ever been accepted by the town.

Miss Todd belongs to one of the oldest families on the mountain top. She got out early yesterday morning with three Italians, and they had their work done before any one came on the scene to interrupt them. The Schweinler family is still at Seabright, N. J., and has not yet heard of the incident.

PROMISES NOT TO BE A BOSS.

Edmund B. Osborne, President of the Progressive Republican League of Essex County, N. J., pledged himself yesterday never to act as any kind of a "boss" if he is elected County Chairman in place of Alfred N. Dalrymple, whose term expires on Oct. 3.

Major Carl Lentz, ex-County Chairman, is attacking the political faith of Col. Austin Colgate, a Republican candidate for State Senator from Essex County, because in filing his petition he did not state whether he was "regular" or independent. Major Lentz led a fight against the indorsement of Col. Colgate by the County Committee on the ground that the Colonel had previously been identified with the Progressive wing of the party.

School Principal Stricken Blind.

Dr. Frederick W. Mar of Richmond Hill, Queens, who is principal of Public School No. 25, in the Eastern District of Brooklyn, has been stricken with partial blindness, and is now in a hospital in Portland, Me., according to information received at his home. As Dr. Mar was walking up the gangplank of a steamer at Portland to start for New York, he was suddenly stricken. He was hurried to a hospital suffering intensely from pains in his head. He regained the sight of one eye after a time, but he will never recover that of the other, it is said.

ONE ARREST AFTER LAST BOMB OUTRAGE

The members of the firm of Barracato & Rizzo, expressmen and steamship brokers, at 424 East Thirteenth Street, whose place of business on the street floor of a tenement house was wrecked by a bomb early yesterday morning, declared yesterday that no member of the firm had ever received a Black Hand letter demanding money, and that the members of the firm had no explanation of the outrage. Italian detectives assigned to the case had several talks with the Barracato brothers and Michael Candeloro and Salvatore Rizzo, the members of the firm, but none of them gave any information that would aid the police in finding the bomb thrower.

The office of Barracato & Rizzo is in one of the thickest settled parts of the city. They have been there several years, and until yesterday had never been the victims of any attempt to destroy their business. The bomb was placed in the hallway next to the office proper, and when it exploded it tore down the partition, ripped out every window in the office, made a big hole in the floor, and covered the floor of the office with débris to a depth of several inches.

A young Italian named Louis Verzi of 428 East Thirteenth Street, which is two doors east of the building in which the bomb was exploded, was arrested. The police say he was seen going out of the house in which the bomb was exploded a few minutes after the explosion. He said that he had been visiting Maria Murano, who lives on the third floor there. When the police went to the Murano apartment, the police say, the mother and a brother of the girl said that Verzi had not been in their apartment, but later they changed their mind and said that Verzi had been there up to within a few minutes of the explosion.

Verzi, who was taken to the Mulberry Street Station and locked up as a suspicious person, denied that he knew anything about the explosion. He was detained, however, and when arraigned before Magistrate Freschi, in the Essex Market Court, he was held in $3,000 bail for a further examination to-morrow. The prisoner is the son of a well known Italian saloonkeeper, who, the police say, is a man of much power among his fellow-countrymen in New York.

While the police were trying to get at the bottom of this affair the Grand Jury was hearing the evidence in the case of Giuseppe Costabile, one of the alleged leaders of the Black Hand, who was arrested last week for carrying a bomb under his coat. Costabile had been held without bail by Magistrate O'Connor, and yesterday District Attorney Whitman took the case to the Grand Jury. The Grand Jury returned an indictment against him in four counts for violation of the new Sullivan concealed weapon law, which became effective the first of this month. Costabile was not only indicted for carrying the bomb, but also with having an intent to use it.

The indictment is the first returned in New York County for a violation of the Sullivan act, and District Attorney Whitman is preparing to bring Costabile speedily to trial. The indictment was handed up to Judge Foster in General Sessions and Costabile will be arraigned before Judge Foster to plead to the indictment Monday morning.
